Turning Over Old Leaves

ALTHOUGH it is against our interests to advocate any reduction in the production of books, we can come to no other conclusion when thinking of the present position of the book trade than this: Too many books spoil the book market. It is an ancient conclusion and an unprofitable one. Every publisher admits its truth, but no publisher will admit it is true concerning his own productions.

The fact is, although nominally one, every publisher, and every publishing concern, consists of two unequal parts—there is the fascinating literary side and the humdrum business side—and it is this dual character which is mainly responsible for the over-production of books. The literary or producing side is always, or nearly always, too strong for the business or disposing side; it is little use for the latter to cry, "Stop! give us breathing time, come and look at the stock rooms, hear what our town and country travellers say." No, hope springs eternal in the better part of the publisher's heart and drowns the still small voice of the, by experience, wiser part. If the matter is considered from the point of view of the greatest good for the greatest number, perhaps it is a good thing that the publisher's hopes for success in publishing new books are so little daunted by disappointment in the sale of old ones; but we refer to the book trade side of the question. In truth, the fascination of publishing is endless. To be the first to see a new author, to advise and suggest, to help materially in the production of what may presently be a welcomed addition to the world's literature, to be continually bowling at the wicket of success: what wonder that the "no balls," "wides," the unkind cuts of the critics, the catches missed and the drives into oblivion are forgotten when the roar of applause comes at last. And provided it comes often enough to cover his losses, success, though it leaves little profit, leaves the publisher happy in the pursuit of fortune in perhaps the most fascinating of professions.

Probably every publisher has determined, like everybody else, to turn over a new leaf in this New Year—many new ones in fact—to contemplate anything else would conjure up visions of the extinction of new literature—but we venture to suggest, with not the slightest semblance of dictation, that to turn over old leaves might be profitable—to glance back at the serried ranks of "New Book" columns in the P.C.—or, better, to wait a week or two for our annual volume of the English Catalogue of Books made up from those lists and other sources.

Although we say so, these annual volumes are an admirable assistance to a publisher. By turning over their pages he can very easily ascertain what books have been published on any subject, who wrote them, who published them, their size, price, and date of publication. It is certain that publishers cannot remember or even know all the books that have been published on a certain subject; and, when a new book on that subject is offered, to be able to ascertain in a few minutes exactly what books already exist may save heavy loss—in any case it puts the publisher in the strong position of making the author justify the existence of his work and its chances of success against rivals already established; it is also an invaluable guide in deciding questions of size and price.

The best way, perhaps, to use the English Catalogue for this purpose would be, when sending a manuscript to a reader, to send also a list of works on the subject in order that he may examine at any rate those which appeared likely to be formidable rivals—the reader would deserve, and doubtless get, an increased fee, but it would be a cheap insurance against the most common cause of loss to publishers: the attempt to plant a new book successfully in a field already full.

What is the most solid argument a publisher's traveller has to contend with when offering a new work to a bookseller? Obviously it is another book on the same subject which he has already in stock.

We hope it will not be imagined that our suggestion as to this particular use of the English Catalogue is made in order to advertise it and induce publishers to buy it—it is already bought by practically everyone publishing many books. It is made in the belief that it offers a practical way of lessening what everyone admits to be the crushing burden of the book trade—the production of books which are not wanted.

Notes and Announcements

THE awful calamity which has fallen upon the Italians has thrown a deep shadow on the whole world. The close and friendly relations between Italy and Great Britain make our sympathy all the deeper, and it is very gratifying to find our war-ships among the first to bring such relief as may be possible.

Publishers looking for a perfect paper on which to print a book worthy of it, might look at that used by Mr. Heinemann in his "Life of James McNeill Whistler." It will give them an opportunity, too, to admire some of the best printing that even Messrs. Ballantyne, Hanson & Co. have ever done. And last, but not least, the chance glancing at a page or two will lure them on to reading one of the most interesting biographies ever published. The good stories are innumerable.

A Frenchman in Chelsea taught art and sold tapestry. Whistler bought a number of things from him. "But vill he pay, zis Vistlaire, vill he pay?" the man asked; and, at last one evening he went to Lindsey Row. A cab was at the door. The maid said Whistler was not in, but the man heard his voice and pushed past, and said afterwards:—"Upstairs, I find him, before a little picture painting, and behind him ze bruzzers Greaves holding candles. And Vistlaire he say: 'You are ze very man I vant; hold a candle!' And I hold a candle. And Vistlaire he paint and he paint, and zen he take ze picture, and he go downstairs, and he get in ze cab, and he drive off, and we hold ze candle, and I see him no more. Mon Dieu, il est terrible, ce Vistlaire!"

The Nineteenth Century and After for January contains "Is Invasion Possible," by Major-General Frank S. Russell, C.M.G., and "Our Military Weakness," by Colonel the Earl of Erroll, K.T.

His many friends and the countless admirers of his writings will regret to hear that Mr. W. Clark Russell has been seriously ill for two months—and is so still—from a combination of neuritis, gout and arthritis. The great novelist of the sea has weathered so many storms—his life for thirty years has been one long courageous fight against ill-health—that we trust his resolute spirit will conquer again.

Harper's Magazine for January is an extremely interesting number. It contains an account from her own pen of "The First Ascent of Mount Huscaran," by Miss Annie S. Peck. If Mount Huscaran is not the highest mountain in the world it is next door to it. Alpine climbers will appreciate the difficulties when two of the best Swiss guides Miss Peck could get were almost daunted; in fact, one retired. It is a modest record of magnificent pluck. The same number has an equally modest account of the Charge of the Light Brigade by one who charged with it.

A new book by M. Camille Flammarion, the delightful writer and distinguished French scientist, will be published on January 4th by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin. It is entitled, "Mysterious Psychic Forces," and its purpose is to show what truth there is in the phenomena of table turnings, table movings and table tappings, in the communications received therefrom, in levitations that contradict the laws of gravity, in the moving of objects without contact, in unexplained noises, or the stories told of haunted houses.

Mr. Unwin will publish on January 4th a novel entitled, "The Ways of Men," by Mr. Herbert Flowerdew, author of "The Third Kiss" and "A Celibate's Wife." "The Ways of Men" is the story of a girl's hazardous adventure in marriage and of a man who was asked to choose between love and fidelity on the one hand, and on the other wealth and an important social position.

Miss Florence Warden's new novel, "The Baronet's Wife," will be published on January 4th by Mr. Unwin.

"We sold more six-shilling novels on Christmas Eve than on any two days of the year," Mr. Frank Denny, of the well-known Strand bookselling firm, told an Express representative. "Literally whole rows of them went. They were bought in threes and fours, though preference was, of course, shown to the established authors. From this year's experience, I should say that the fashion of giving books as presents is growing."

Messrs. Swan Sonnenschein & Co. will publish in January a volume of articles by the late Harry Quilter, entitled "Opinions of Men, Women and Things." This will contain reprints of some magazine articles which were much commented on at the time they were published, and also several unpublished articles as outspoken as anything written by Mr. Quilter.

Cassell's Saturday Journal for January 9th will contain the opening instalment of a new serial by Henry Farmer, the well known and popular writer. This story, the editor informs his readers, will "be one of the strongest ever published in the paper, and is likely to attract considerable attention." The trade are advised to note this issue and prepare for an increased demand. A handsome coloured poster will be supplied by the publishers on application.

The popularity of the Story-Teller remains undiminished, in spite of the heavy competition it has met, and retailers should not fail to order the February number.

His Majesty the King has graciously accepted a specially bound copy of the New Rules of Golf as authorised by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, of which His Majesty is Patron, sent him by the authorised publishers, Messrs. W. C. Henderson & Son, University Press, St. Andrews. The New Rules are published in several editions and in several styles of bindings for pocket and Club use, and came into force on January 1st.

It is interesting to note, in connection with the recent award of the Nobel Prize for literature, that "Rudolf Eucken's Philosophy of Life," by Prof. W. R. Boyce Gibson (A. & C. Black) is already in a second edition. Prof. and Mrs. Gibson have almost ready for publication in the spring, Eucken's "The Meaning and Value of Life."

The "Illustrative Election," organised by the Proportional Representation Society, aroused considerable interest. A full account of the election appears in No. 9 of Representation and, in view of the Committee of Inquiry promised by Mr. Asquith, we are glad to direct the attention of our readers to it.

The English Department of the Yale University has made the subject of their John Hubbard Curtis $100 prize contest "Critical Essays on the Novels of William de Mordan."

Messrs. Sealy, Bryers & Walker will issue this month two important books. "The Predominant Partner—His Rights and His Duties," by J. Shaw Mulholland, B.L., Inner Temple, is a brilliant essay on the present social, political and economic condition of Ireland. Dealing with Governmental methods in Ireland, this book will be a revelation to Englishmen, for whilst showing in what respects the Predominant Partnership has been detrimental to Ireland, he admits its desirability. "Midland Septs and The Pale," by F. R. M. Hitchcock, give to the Midland of Ireland a history of its ancient families. Mr. Hitchcock is already known as the author of "Types of Celtic Life and Art," a critical consideration of the Celtic social systems, and many other important volumes. In the present he treats fully of the relations of the various families with the inhabitants of the Pale.

Messrs. Constable are about to publish the first volume of a series of Concordances, which will be of the greatest interest to students of English literature. The work appears under the auspices of The Concordance Society, which was organised at Yale University in 1906. The author chosen for this first volume is Thomas Gray.

Messrs. Constable will publish immediately an abridged and less expensive edition of "The Life of Sir Charles Bright," the distinguished pioneer of ocean telegraphy, whose name will always be associated with the laying of the first trans-Atlantic cable. In its original form the work was recognised as a solid contribution to biography. This edition has been revised by Mr. Charles Bright, F.R.S.E.

Mr. R. W. Seton-Watson, who signs himself "Scotus Viator," has a new volume coming from Messrs. Constable, entitled, "Racial Problems in Hungary." It is a discussion, based on personal observation, of the racial problems of Austria-Hungary.

Mr. Martinus Nijhoff, Bookseller, of The Hague, publishes in English two interesting works by J. J. M. De Groot, Professor in the University of Leyden, on Chinese Religion, Philosophy, Folklore and Politics. One is entitled "Sectarianism and Religious Persecution in China. A page in the history of religions." It is an attempt, and claims to be the first, to trace the reasons for the intolerance of the Chinese versus the Christians in China. The other work is "The Religious System of China. Its ancient forms, evolutions, history and present aspect; manners, customs and social institutions connected therewith." This work is an attempt to depict the Chinese religion as it is really practised by the nation, and to sketch on a broad scale its influence on domestic and social life. It is the fruit of an intimate contact with the Chinese race for several years. Since first setting foot on the wide field of sinological studies, the author has adopted a course of systematically committing to paper whatever customs, usages and religious observances presented themselves to his view either in the Middle Kingdom or the transmarine colonies where Chinese emigrants have settled; no opportunity of acquiring an insight into the different phases of social and religious life of the Chinese has been allowed to escape him.

The leader of the Anglo-American Polar Expedition, Captain Ejnar Mikkelsen, whose book, "Conquering the Arctic Ice," will be published by Mr. Heinemann on January 12th, is at present in Copenhagen, where he lectured last week before the Geographical Society of Denmark, amongst his audience being the King and Queen of Denmark and other members of the Royal Family. Previous to this he has lectured on his Arctic travels at Brussels, Antwerp, Liége, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Leiden and the Hague.

"The Publishers' Circular" Annual Summary of the Numbers and Classes of Books Published in 1908

LIKE most businesses, publishing has suffered a slight depression during the past year, although it is still well above any year previous to 1907. The total number of New Books recorded as published in 1908 is 9,821, a decrease of 93 as compared with 1907. This decrease is inconsiderable, but on analysing the figures it will be seen that there also has been a fall in the average class of book published. Thus in New Books (as opposed to New Editions) there has been a decrease of 189 during the year, while there has been an increase of 96 in New Editions. That is to say, a considerably greater proportion of cheap reprints have appeared. This has been the case especially in Fiction, Religion and Philosophy, and Political and Social Economy; and an example is afforded by the Fiction published during July, when 177 books were issued, of which 88 or practically 50 per cent. were New Editions. Taking the year's output class by class there are the following decreases: Religion, 28; Educational, 60; Political and Social, 92; History, 13; Year Books, 24; Medicine, 32; and Belles Lettres, 79; while there are increases in the following classes: Fiction, 5; Law, 17; Arts and Sciences, 55; Voyages, 49; Poetry, 42; and Miscellaneous, 67. The information to hand seems to indicate an increased output during the coming year, the figures for December, 1908, showing an increase of 26 per cent. over the previous year, and no doubt the total for the year 1909 will run into five figures.

Our Book Trade Notes from Glasgow

BY "MUNGO"

THE rush of Christmas trade is over for another year, and the bookseller has now time to look round his stock and consider whether or not his autumn buying has been justified, and if full advantage has been taken of the opportunity the season offers to clear his shelves of miscellaneous books.

When the public confine their buying to one short week there is a tendency to fall back on two or three books which have been declared favourites; this is especially obvious in the case of fiction, where the field of choice is so wide and varied. And in Glasgow, from among several good novels, Mary Johnston's "Lewis Rand" takes the first place, while "Stewart of Lovedale," by Dr. Wells, shares with Dr. Robertson Nicol's "Ian Maclaren" a similar position in biography.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream," with Mr. Rackham's illustrations, has been the most popular of the larger colour books; in fact, some customers complain of its being too popular, one remarking that he had received six copies, each given by a relative. There is something reminiscent here of the refrain to one of the songs sung by the Admiral in "Pinafore."

The book, the sales of which will head all others in Glasgow, is the attractive edition of Ramsay's "Reminiscences of Scottish Life and Character," issued by Mr. Foulis with H. W. Kerr's illustrations in colour. A large sale was expected for this volume, but I think the demand must have astonished even its optimistic publisher.

The feature of this season, however, is the increasing popularity of those booklets that are taking the place of Christmas cards, and here again Mr. Foulis gets honourable mention, for he combines taste in selection with taste in production, and the enormous sale which these little books sent out by him have had proves that he has hit the public fancy. The smaller shilling booklets, as published by Messrs. Harrap, Messrs. Seigle, Hill and Messrs. Nimmo in velvet calf or in what a bibliophile friend of mine unkindly referred to as "pussy-cat covers," are also making a place for themselves as substitutes for cards.

Notwithstanding the unkind remark of my friend (who, by the way, is also a poet, using that term in its wider sense) these booklets are infinitely more satisfactory remembrancers to send to one's friends at Christmas time than the once-popular card. They are not for adults in literature, but have a missionary influence, and an essay of Emerson's, a few "chips" from Marcus Aurelius, or a selection from a popular poet, may lead the reader to become better acquainted with the author's work.

On the whole, the Christmas trade in Glasgow has been satisfactory; after a long spell of comparative depression business came away early in the month, and although the difficulty in selling the larger books still remains, the returns cannot be found fault with, and the increasing number of net books tides over a period of slack trade in a way that did not obtain some ten years ago. It is unfortunate that the facility with which landlords can add fifty pounds to the rent cannot be dealt with as successfully as was the discount system.

The Passing of English Literary Treasures to America

WE have often pointed out the fact that there is an insatiable demand among wealthy Americans for the rare treasures of English literature. There is no doubt that the purchaser of Lord Amherst's splendid collection of Caxtons was Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, so those sixteen items including the earliest book printed in English have gone to the American shore. The world now knows that

John P. Morgan he
Buys every rare book that he can see.

He has bought all of Horace Walpole's letters, as well as many manuscripts of Byron, Shelley, Samuel Johnson, Dickens, Thackeray, Lamb, Mary Stuart, Lord Cornwallis, Swift, Napoleon, Walter Scott and many others. His library contains an unsurpassed collection of fine bindings, including ancient books in ivory, gold and enamel set with gems. The Caxtons, Aldines and Gutenbergs, the Elzevirs and Wynkyn de Wordes; the collections of first editions, including the best obtainable copies of all that bibliophiles most approve; the volumes with rich historical associations, the missals and Prayer Books, the early Bibles, the rare prints, the extra-illuminated books, the Chaldean and Babylonian tablets make up the realisation of a collector's dream

"It is too much to expect," the New York Times says, "that this treasure house will be thrown open to public examination. But a complete catalogue of its collections, with plates, prepared by an expert bibliophile, would be of the greatest public value and interest."

A Directory of American "Publishers" (?)

WE have received from the office of the New York Publishers' Weekly what it calls "A Directory of Publishers"—i.e., those issuing books in the United States from January 1st, 1905, to December 31st, 1907. There must be 3,750 names in this Directory, and a very brief examination of the list shows that the use of the word "publisher" is somewhat misleading.

For instance, because a college or university issues a magazine it is inserted in this list of publishers as a publisher. Then Mr. Wellborn, Librarian of the Georgia State Library, published some small volume, and so figures in the list as a publisher. It is a case of ex uno disce omnes with a vengeance—e.g., Vacuum Oil Co., Tennessee Valley Fertilizer Co. It is certain that these and a great number of others in this list are not exactly publishers in the sense that we use the word in this country.

Mr. Benjamin Leach

THE many friends and admirers of Mr. B. Leach, who for many years represented Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd., both on the road and as departmental manager, will be interested to learn that he is severing his long connection with this house to take up an important position with Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd. From the general knowledge of his activity and untiring energy there is no reason to doubt success will follow him in his new sphere.

MR. BENJAMIN LEACH.

A Year of Books

THE many people who never quite know how to use books of reference should be interested to learn of the announcement by Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., of the immediate publication of a second revised and enlarged edition of "Where to Look," an easy guide to books of reference. The success of the first edition is taken as amply demonstrating the necessity for such a work, and in consequence of the quick demand for a second edition the publishers have taken the opportunity of thoroughly revising and enlarging it.

Trade Note

MR. ROBERT INGALTON DRAKE, of 21, Trinity Place, Windsor, and of Eton, Bookseller to Eton College, who died on November 5th, aged 79, left estate valued at £57,991 gross, with net personalty £51,557.

"The Life of James McNeill Whistler"*

IF the beastly words "Presentation Copy" had not been stamped into the title page of this beautiful book we should have nothing but praise for it. Here is another excellent good testimonial to a publisher. After giving a long list of people to whom they are grateful the authors of this fascinating biography of Whistler say:—

> "One special word of thanks, however, we must add. To no one do we owe more than to our publisher, Mr. William Heinemann, who has drawn upon his own friendship with Whistler to enrich us, who has aided us with his counsel, worked with us through difficulties, and faced the not light task of reading our book in manuscript and proof, giving us the advantage of his criticism and advice."

These testimonials to publishers are highly satisfactory, and we like keeping a record of them. Cicero says — we take it on trust from some book we were reading recently —that all men by a certain hidden faculty approve or condemn works of art or letters. What Whistler's exact position will be in fifty years time who can say? but it is quite certain that the interest of this biography is greatly due to the whole-hearted manner in which his biographers speak up for him. Not Constable or even Turner had Whistler's genius for English landscape, and as for Rembrandt, why Whistler "surpassed Rembrandt in his own (Dutch) subjects." It is this point of view, Whistler first and the rest nowhere, which makes this biography so interesting. You must like what Whistler liked if he was to like you. Whistler used to make buck-wheat cakes. He never spoke again to one man who ventured to dislike them. Whistler was doubtless a great artist; he was the little David who went out to slay the British School of Art Philistines with Ruskin the Goliath at their head, and the tale of how he slew them makes excellent reading; and he slew them, of that the reader is not left in doubt for a moment, and the proof—often mentioned—is that a "Nocturne," "knocked off" in a day, which he sold for twenty guineas you could not now buy for two thousand. For a long time the British public did not take the American artist seriously—it appears to have been difficult for his best friends to do so—they do not seem quite to know whether his continual contempt and disdain for things English was real or affected; probably it was a mixture. It seems to us that there is a great deal to be said for Whistler's view that to be a competent critic of painting a man must be able to paint; and that in bringing his action against Ruskin he was fighting for the freedom of art—as others have fought for the freedom of letters. To bring out "harmonies in colours" may be said to have been Whistler's aim in art—he said so of the famous "Battersea Bridge by Moonlight," in the Ruskin trial, the "Nocturne in Blue and Silver," No. 1. It is for this reason that in the great profusion of black-and-white reproductions in these fine volumes, those which attract most and appear to best represent the artist are his portraits. Colour was not to be thought of, and probably many of these reproductions are given mainly as identifying records. But the portraits are often wonderful, especially in the photogravures, the chief loss being in the effect of colour on the lips, as in the delicious portrait of Miss Cicely Alexander, of Mrs. Huth, Mrs. Leyland, &c., in which the lips are a dark level smudge instead of transparent colour as in the original. This defect, due to the mechanical process, is more apparent by comparison with the superb portrait of Lady Archibald Campbell, our preference in the whole collection, as is the portrait of Sarasate among the men; these two being originally "arrangements in black" naturally lend themselves better to black-and-white reproduction. A characteristic of all these reproductions is that they improve under enlargement and seem to come nearer to the original.

¶ The heroine has reason to place herself under suspicion of being the murderess of her uncle, and her conduct in various trying situations provides some of the most delightful reading in the story.

The story teems with interest. There is humour in plenty; dialogue of brilliant quality; and a continuous succession of incident that does not permit a moment of faltering interest from start to finish.

To Mr. Heinemann, of course, the production of this work has been a real labour of love—from every point of view it is a testimony to that; and we can assure our friends the booksellers that the first edition of this book is going to be sought after. The writers, Joseph Pennell and Elizabeth Pennell, have succeeded admirably in reproducing the man and in making us interested in him and his life, in spite of his porcupinish attitude to almost everything English; as they point out it was the opposition of the England of his day to him which made him—and it is an old English characteristic to begin by laughing at a man and end by making a god of him. To write a biography of Whistler, the master of the art of making enemies, so soon after his death, must have "given to think," as the French say, before it was entered upon. From the impartial outsider's point of view it has been done with great good taste and judgment; some who are not in a position to be impartial will naturally not agree with this view.

Whistler was a born fighter, and those who got his blows are not likely to forget them—especially when repeated in this handsome style. Though dead he yet hits—harder than ever. And yet it is impossible to read this book without feeling that Whistler was what his fellow cadet at West Point Military Academy, now General Loomis L. Langdon, found him, viz.: "a most genial and considerate friend, an honest and fascinating gentleman, who seemed always to move in a sunny atmosphere that brightened the lives of his friends and was to them like an inspiration."

The Homes and Haunts of Henry Kirke White

MR. H. B. SAXTON, of King Street, Nottingham, has published* at 5s. net an edition—limited to 500 copies—of a very interesting and well illustrated work, entitled, "The Homes and Haunts of Henry Kirke White, with some Account of the Family of White of Nottingham and Norfolk," by John T. Godfrey and James Ward. The volume was suggested by the Centenary Banquet to the Memory of the Poet held at Nottingham in November, 1906. The book is better than its title, because, in addition to very full and well arranged details respecting the homes and haunts of the poet, there is an extremely interesting memoir of White constructed chiefly from his own letters, with regard to which Sir N. Harris Nocolas observes:—"So frequently are the allusions to himself in those letters as well as in his poems, that he may be almost considered as an Autobiographer." What is actually new in the book is mainly connected with the history of the White family and illustrations of places he lived at or which were well known to him. We are sure the industry and devotion of the compilers will be rewarded by the thanks of all who treasure the literary remains and sweet memory of the young poet who gave such promise of being a great one. "We have taken this pains, Fully illustrated with patterns and working drawings.

No such comprehensive work has until now been written on this most fascinating old form of lace, and it will undoubtedly supply a long-felt want
After five or six centuries of neglect on the part of English women, there is a decided revival and a growing appreciation of the artistic merits of this work. In France it has been the favourite occupation of cultivated women since the days of Catherine de Medici, and even prior to that time
The chief reason for its neglect here has undoubtedly been the impossibility of finding anyone to teach it as it should be taught, and the lack of necessary materials. These practical lessons and diagrams, showing very clearly all the details of the work, will enable any one to learn it quickly and easily. It is a work that does not demand too much application, it can be easily taken up and laid down again, or be carried about without any trouble

The Mongols in Russia

By JEREMIAH CURTIN

Author of "The Mongols," and Translator of the Works of SienKiewicz, etc. With photogravure frontispiece and map.

The new volume, "The Mongols in Russia," is a continuation of Mr. Curtin's valuable book of last year, "The Mongols," that was so enthusiastically praised by President Roosevelt. It takes up the story of the domination of this race in Russia, after their expulsion from China by the founders of the Ming Dynasty
He describes their invasion of Russia, the ineffectual defence they met with, and their final subjection of the Russians until the break-up of the Horde at Sarai, in 1505

British Hunting

Compiled and Edited by "THE SPORTSMAN"

It is proposed to make this a comprehensive history of hunting, and one of the most elaborate publications ever devoted to any single branch of sport. The work will be divided into three sections—the first of which will deal with the history of hunting generally—and will cover all the ground of which there is any record whatever with regard to hunts, hunting men, and hunting countries. The second section is to be a treatise on the history of the Hunts of Great Britain and Ireland and on the men who have founded and have maintained them. The third and last section will constitute one of the principal features of the work, containing the biographies of the leading Masters and Hunting Men in Great Britain and Ireland
Each article in the book will be handsomely illustrated by means of engravings of the principal packs of hounds. These, with portraits of the Masters and Members of the various Hunts, will bring the number of illustrations to about 1,400, including about fifty full-page portraits of men well known in hunting circles, reproduced by means of the finest photogravure process from excellent photographs. The articles will include accounts of the chase of the Fox and Otter, Drag Hunting, Beagling, Harriers, Hounds and their Breeding, and Hunters and their Breeding; descriptions of remarkable runs in the history of hunting, and a dissertation on hunting equipment
In addition to all these features it will contain an International section, including a description of hunting and hunting establishments in all parts of the world. In short, no effort will be spared to make this book the standard work of reference upon all matters connected with the chase not for the present age, but a future; many things which were known to our grandsires are lost to us, and our grandchildren will search in vain for many facts which to us are most familiar." If only Ben Jonson or someone had done the same for the life and homes and haunts of Shakespeare. This reference to a future age reminds one of White's lines, in which he forestalled Macaulay:

BRITAIN A THOUSAND YEARS HENCE.

"Where now is Britain? Where her laurelled names,
Her palaces and halls? Dashed to the dust.
* * * * * * *
O'er her marts,
Her crowded ports, broods Silence; and the cry
Of the distant curlew, and the pensive dash
Of distant billows, breaks alone the void.
Even as the savage sits upon the stone
That marks where stood her capitols, and hears
The bittern booming in the weeds, he shrinks
From the dismaying solitude. Her bards
Sing in a language that hath perished;
And their wild harps, suspended o'er their graves,
Sing to the desert winds a dying strain."

"Discovery" of the Author of "The Burial of Sir John Moore"

FROM the well-known bookseller, Mr. T. Thatcher, College Green, Bristol, we have received "The Writer of 'The Burial of Sir John Moore,' 'Discovered,'" by R. C. Newick (1s.). "The history of literary imposture starts, perhaps, from Terence," says Mr. Newick, who, in this amusing little skit makes a very good bid to be himself included in the history of impostors. He pretends to have discovered that it was a Corporal Joseph Wolfe, who fought under Moore and assisted in burying him, who wrote the imperishable poem.

He says Charles Wolfe was no poet, and gives the following as a specimen of his verse to prove it:

"England, what! ho! as thus the spectre spoke
All Lisbon's turrets to their bases shook:
He spoke, then plunged into the river's breast,
And Tagus wrapped him in his billowy vest."

Mr. Newick cries Wolfe too often, for in the next paragraph he claims that his Joseph Wolfe also wrote the poem:

"If I had thought thou could'st have died."

Referring to the metre of the "Burial," he quotes The Athenæum as saying:

"If the metrical movement of Wolfe's poem had only been as much his own as the sentiments, thoughts and emotions, we must, perhaps, have placed it at the head of all English elegies. Yet in an elegy the metrical music must be original if the poem is to claim transcendent excellence." He adds that The Athenæum then states that Wolfe copied his metre from Tom Moore's

"Oh! make her a grave where the sunny beams rest
When they promise a glorious to-morrow.
They'll shine o'er her sleep like a smile from the West,
From her own loved Island of Sorrow."

Mr. Newick proceeds:—"But there is a much older example of the same metre quoted in Hutchinson's Fugitive Poetry, (Chandos Classics), and dated 1630":

BURIAL OF A PILGRIM FATHER IN AMERICA.

"We anxiously hollowed the frozen ground,
And heaped up the lonely furrow;
For the Indian lurked in the woods around,
And we feared his whistling arrow.

When the surf on the seabeach heavily beat,
When the breeze in the wilderness muttered;
We deemed it the coming of hostile feet,
Or the watchword cautiously uttered."

The third verse is not so good, but for an early seventeenth century poem these alone are worth the modest shilling asked for the book. The last fifty pages pretend to be extracts from the Memoirs of Sergeant Paul Swanston, published by B. D. Cousins, 18, Duke Street, Lincoln's Inn, in monthly parts, 60 or 70 years ago. Here, again, these extracts are worth the money, and make one wish that the imaginary memoirs really existed, so admirably done are descriptions of incidents in Moore's retreat when, like a wounded tiger, he kept the French at bay.

It is an excellent bit of literary fooling, well worth reading from beginning to end.

"Books which will Interest all Scotsmen"

THE Edinburgh Evening Dispatch says:—"A book which should prove interesting to all the world, but most of all to Scotsmen, is announced by Mr. T. N. Foulis, and is from the pen of Mr. W. S. Crockett, not the Mr. Crockett who has written an appalling series of stories and is still going strong, but another minister, of Tweedside, who joins a love for the saving of souls to a love of literature. The book is to contain an account of the originals of the characters of the Waverley Novels, and the making of it is a task which should entail no small research, and perhaps a considerable element of speculation. Another volume from the same publisher, with an equally Scottish flavour, is an edition with coloured illustrations of Dean Ramsay's immortal 'Reminiscences.' The artist is Mr. Henry W. Kerr."

A great many others besides Scotsmen will be delighted with Mr. Foulis's admirable edition of the famous "Reminiscences"—which upset the erroneous idea that Scotsmen cannot see a joke. The sixteen separately mounted illustrations are really fine reproductions in colour of paintings by Mr. H. W. Kerr, A.R.S.A. A good Index and attractive binding make us again thank Mr. Foulis for this very desirable edition of an old favourite.

Milton and Elzevier

THERE is an interesting new note about Milton in M. M. Kleerkooper's letter in The Athenæum of December 19th. It gives a copy of a letter from Sir Joseph Williamson (Charles II.'s principal Minister of State) to Roger Meredith (Secretary to the English Embassy at The Hague), which begins thus:—

"His Majesty is informed of a pernicious book of that late villain Milton's now about to be printed at Leyden. I am commanded to signify to you that you immediately apply yourself to find out, by the best means you may, if there be any such who is the printer, and by what order he is set on work." Suspicion is thrown in the letter on Skinner, a young scholar of Cambridge.

There can be no doubt Skinner had sent some manuscript to the celebrated printer and publisher, Daniel Elzevier, for Mr. Kleerkooper has discovered a letter from Daniel Elzevier to "Mr. Skinner, marchand, at his house in Cruchet Frijers at London," the father of Milton's young friend. In this letter, written evidently in consequence of the search set on foot by Charles, he says he is returning Milton's manuscripts of his works "on Theology and his Epistles," and begs him to assure the English Minister that "of the works of Milton which have been in my hands never an iota has been printed, and that I have sent them back as I received them."

But the work the King wished to seize, either in the MS. or in the impression, was Milton's State Letters, published surreptitiously about this time without indication of printer or place. Daniel Elzevier's denial of any connection with the publication is explicit enough, but it does not satisfy Mr. Kleerkooper, who says:—

"Whether Elzevier did not have a hand in the production of the clandestine edition we may at least be permitted to doubt. At any rate, he took good care not to return the manuscripts before the book had gone forth."

If the "famous Amsterdam publisher" lied, it was to save his English friend; but there is no evidence to prove that he did, or that he had the incriminating manuscript of the "villain Milton."

The New Literary Year Book

A CAPITAL handbook is "The Literary Year Book," the thirteenth annual issue of which has just been published by Messrs. George Routledge & Sons. In the autumn a French publisher, who was over here for the Franco-British Exhibition, called on us to get some information, and under promise to return it in a day or two, he walked off with our copy of the 1908 Literary Year Book. We should not like to say how many times since we have searched in vain for the work, until remembering our French visitor. We find it indispensable, and it is a mine of most valuable information for all connected with the writing and publishing of books. Each year sees the addition of some new feature.

"George Borrow, the Man and his Work"

(Cassell & Co., Ltd.)

"George Borrow, The Man and his Work," by R. A. J. Walling, with portrait and facsimiles of Borrow's MS. Mr. Walling, who dates his Preface from Plymouth, tells us that "An inquiry into the Cornish origin of the Borrow family, into the circumstances of Borrow's visit to the home of his forebears, and of his tour in Cornwall, was responsible for the inception of the present book." We are glad that anything led to the inception of the work, for it is an admirable bit of biography—interesting from the first page to the last. "The Bible in Spain," the work which made Borrow famous, is described by himself in a letter to Richard Ford as "a rum, very rum, mixture of gipsyism, Judaism, and Missionary adventure," and he adds "I have no doubt it will be greedily read." Borrow himself was a rum, very rum mixture—a born pugilist, a lover of horses and all animals, a gipsy by predilection, a Missionary by accident, a wanderer, linguist, delightful writer, a good hater, a good lover: a wild son of Nature reflecting all her moods in his disposition—"wild and fierce when Nature was wild and fierce, gentle and sunny amid fair meads in fine weather." When living at Oulton he tells us that he spent most of his time riding his favourite Arab horse, Sidi Habismilk "over heaths and through the green lanes," or staying at home and fishing for big pike. That much of Borrow's success was due to the encouragement of his publisher, John Murray, "Glorious John" as he calls him, is certain. In spite of occasional difficulties he held Mr. Murray in unfailing honour, and was proud to have his work sealed with the cachet of Albemarle Street. The charm of Mr. Walling's book is that it gives such an insight into the character of an extraordinary and, in many ways, fascinating, man. His thirty years of married life is one of the romances of literature. At his wife's death his grief was terrible. "He had lost her who had been in literal fact his better half, who had inspired his courage and fought his 'Horrors' for him, had organised his business, and been his wife and friend, counsellor and physician, amanuensis and private secretary."

For the Friend of British Sailors

Miss Agnes E. Weston, founder and manager of the Royal Sailors' Rest, Portsmouth, has received the following gracious letter from His Majesty the King:—

"December 23rd, 1908.

"Dear Madam,—I write by command of the King to send you His Majesty's best thanks for your letter, and for the report and copy of your book which accompanied it.

"The King further commands me to say that nobody is better aware of, or more thoroughly appreciates, the great work you have done for the British sailors, and for their wives and children also, than His Majesty is, and he thanks you sincerely for the same.

"I am, by the King's command, sending you a signed photograph of His Majesty, which he wishes you to accept as a small token of his gratitude to you for your noble services. I am to add at the same time His Majesty's fervent hope that you may yet be long spared to your country to carry out the great work to which you have given so many years of your life.—I remain, dear madam, yours faithfully,

Lecture by a Well-known Bookseller

It will interest the booksellers of the North of England to know that the Geographical Society of Manchester has asked Mr. Harold E. Young, of Messrs. Henry Young & Sons, of Liverpool, to lecture for its members on January 12th next. The subject of the lecture will be "A Wayfarer in Rural Japan." Mr. Young walked through Japan just after the great war. The lecture will be illustrated with original lantern slides, and will show an aspect of Japanese life which has probably not been noticed before in England. The Geographical Society has also requested Mr. Young to lecture again at a later date in the year on "Rambles and Scrambles on the Pacific Slope, and in the Yellow-Stone Regions of the Far West." The fees which Mr. Young will receive will be handed over to a charity. As Mr. Young is the President of the Northern Branch of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland this year we feel sure many of our friends in the North will be glad to hear the lecture; and those in the South also if Mr. Young will favour us some day.

Britain's Position in Aeronautics

Writing in Travel and Exploration, the new illustrated monthly magazine devoted to travel in all its aspects, Mr. H. Massac Buist seeks to answer the question why Britain, except in books of adventure for boys, has lagged in aeroplane achievements. So far, he points out, nobody has made in this country a free dynamic flight with a voluntary conclusion. The reason for this, he contends, is not that we lack the enterprise, but the conditions are vastly more difficult in this country than they are on the Continent. Where the brothers Wright conducted their experiments for months together they could rely on a steady thirty-mile-an-hour wind from off the sea. That enormously simplified the problem of maintaining equilibrium. If you went across to France to see Mr. Wilbur Wright practise, despite fruitful years of experience and the perfecting of his apparatus, you found him greatly dependent on the changing weather, an added complication being the problem of the motor. We must not be over impatient in this country. Progress is being made extraordinarily quickly, as achievements here within the next twelve months will duly inform the public.

Boswell's Description of the Form in which he was to Produce the "Life of Johnson"*

Writing from his house in Queen Ann Street, W., to his friend Temple on February 8th, 1790, Boswell says:—

"It is better that I am still here, fo, I am within a short walk of Mr. Maloner who revises my 'Life of Johnson' with me. We have not yet gone over quite half of it, but it is at last fairly in the Press.

"I intended to have printed it upon what is called an English letter, which would have made it look better; but, upon calculation, it would have made two quarto volumes, and two quarto volumes for one Life would have been exorbitant, though in truth it is a view of much of the literature and many of

CANADA

The Land of Opportunity

Thousands of sturdy British emigrants go to the Dominion annually and settle there. To-day there is a large population in Canada interested in British books and periodicals and affording a splendid market for British publishers.

The only feasible way to preserve the interest of these people, in face of the competition of American publishers, is to have Canadian booksellers and newsagents show British books and periodicals on their counters and in their windows constantly and press the sale of them.

The best method of urging Canadian booksellers and newsagents to stock and sell British publications is to make use of the trade organ to which they subscribe regularly.

Information as to the Canadian Market will be gladly supplied by

HOW A PRINTER CALCULATES

"It is curious to observe how a printer calculates. He arranges a number of pages and the words in them at different parts of the 'copy' (as the MS. is called), and so finds the number of words. Mine here are four hundred and one thousand and six hundred (401,600). Does not this frighten you? By printing a page the number of words it holds is discovered, and by dividing the sum total of words by that number we get the number of pages. Mine will be, we reckon, eight hundred.

"I think it will be without exception the most entertaining book you ever read."

Our Copyright Arrangement with the United States

MR. T. T. HODGSON, in the interests of the printing trade of this country, has again written to The Times suggesting that, as the Americans give us copyright only on condition that the work is set up and printed in the United States, we should insert in our own copyright law a provision by which to get copyright here original works in English must be set up and printed here.

This is all right from the printer's point of view, but its probable effect would be the abrogation by the Americans of the half-hearted kind of copyright our authors now enjoy, because it would mean that no American could get copyright here unless his work was set up and printed here. There is a strong movement in America in favour of the abolition of the manufacturing clause, and we feel convinced that in the interests of all holders of copyright in this country—i.e., authors and publishers, it would be unwise to adopt retaliatory measures towards the United States. It is probable that America will before long join the other chief nations in supporting the Berne Convention.

Letters to the Editor

"THE KING WHO NEVER REIGNED"

DEAR SIR,—With reference to Mr. Arnould Galopin's letter of December 15th, I can only repeat that he is not the author of "The King Who Never Reigned," and his own statements substantiate my assertion.

In order to demonstrate that he is not suffering from any attempt on my part to conceal his association with the book in question, I append copies of the title-pages of the French work and the English one:—

French Title-page.

Mémoirs Sur Louis XVII.
(Mémoirs D'Eckard—Souvenirs De Naundorff).
Préface de M. Jules Lemaitre.
Introduction et Notes
De
Maurice Vitrac et Arnould Galopin.

The King Who Never Reigned. Being Memoirs upon Louis XVII. By Eckard and Naundorff, with a Preface by Jules Lemaitre, together with Introduction and Notes by Maurice Vitrac and Arnould Galopin, to which is added Joseph Turquan's "New Light Upon the Fate of Louis XVII."

It can thus be seen that so far from M. Galopin being, as he declares, the author of the work, he has merely supplied an introduction and notes in conjunction with M. Maurice Vitrac. In his advertisement in the Christmas PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR he makes no mention of Eckard and Naundorff, and he also suppresses the name of his collaborator, although it appears first on the title-page of the book.

When I decided to bring out a complete work on the mystery of Louis XVII. I arranged to reprint the famous Memoirs of Eckard and Naundorff, but in view of the fact that they were published many years ago I considered it would improve the value of the work if I included M. Joseph Turquan's "New Light on the Fate of Louis XVII.," as it was the latest important work on the subject, and I was fortunate in securing the British rights. As the volume contained three separate books, with different titles, I gave it—for business reasons—the general title, "The King Who Never Reigned," and I added a sub-title, which fully explained the nature of the contents.

In his advertisement in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR M. Galopin used my general title only, and disregarded the sub-title, an action which requires some explanation. It was quite unnecessary for me to consult him on the question of the title, as all my dealings were with the French publisher, to whom I paid a sum for the right to reprint, in whatever manner I chose, his edition of the Mémoirs of Eckard and Naundorff, with any copyright notes or matter.—Yours faithfully, EVELEIGH NASH.

THE SECOND VOLUME OF "BOOKS OF THE CHURCH" SERIES

DEAR SIR,—I have published to-day the second volume of the "Books of the Church" series, by Dr. Clement B. Gunn. This volume, which follows the "Book of Stobo Church," is entitled "The Book of Peebles Church," and deals with the mediæval period depicting life in a country town during the Romish phase of the Church of Scotland from the beginning to its close.

The book is well illustrated, and has as frontispiece the rare charter in the vernacular of 1434, engraved from the original in possession of Sir T. D. Gibson-Carmichael. The edition is limited to 200 copies at 10s. 6d. each.

I trust you will notice the publication, as you kindly did the first volume, in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR. Thanking you in anticipation.—I am, yours faithfully,

JOHN A. ANDERSON.

Peebles.

[If any of our friends want literature relating to the Scottish and English Border Country they should note that Mr. Anderson makes a special feature of it.—ED.]

The Churchman, which, under the editorship of Dr. Griffith Thomas, Principal of Wycliffe Hall, Oxford, was enlarged three years ago, has been further enlarged and now contains 80 pages.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Allman & Son.—"The Voice and Its Control," by Churchill Sibley. This little book is intended primarily for the singer and public speaker, but those who have noticed how comparatively rare is a melodious voice may be forgiven for expressing the hope that the general public will not entirely ignore it. Let the clergy especially note the remarks upon page 84. In less than a hundred pages the author gives the A B C of the physiology of the vocal organs, breathing, tone, resonance, registers, enunciation and the general care of the voice. A thoroughly practical and sensible little handbook.

From Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd.—"Christabel," by Mrs. Albert G. Latham, is a story of the freaks and fancies of three little folk. Their adventures, charmingly illustrated by Paul Hardy, will give pleasure to many young children, besides those for whom the tale was written.

From The Cambridge University Press.—"The Sermons of Henry Smith," a selection edited by Dr. John Brown. Henry Smith was a Puritan divine of the time of Queen Elizabeth. He was commonly known as the "silver-tongued preacher," and Fuller tells us that his church was always crowded with auditors, whose "ears did so attend to his lips, their hearts to their ears, that he held the rudder of their affections in his hands, so that he could steer them whither he was pleased." Nor did his reputation quickly fade; for within forty years of his death no less than seventeen editions of his sermons were published. The Cambridge Press have done well to re-issue a selection from them, in a handy little pocket volume, for both in matter and manner these discourses contain much that is by no means out of date.

From The Catholic Truth Society.—"The Greek Fathers," by Adrian Fortescue, consists of carefully written biographies of those seven great leaders of the Eastern Church between 300 and 800 A.D. whose writings have come down to us. Mr. Fortescue has gone back to the original authorities for his facts and his work is a model of condensation and completeness. It is published under the official imprimatur of the Roman Church, and is written, therefore, from the Roman point of view. Allowing for this, the work is commendably free from unfairness and narrowness, and may not improbably become a standard handbook on its subject.

From the Same.—"Our Faith," by Cecil Lylburn. This little book explains in clear, straightforward language the Catholic doctrines of the Church, Infallibility, Man and Transubstantiation, Confession, Eternal Punishment, the Communion of Saints, &c. Nobody who studies this explanation with care can fail to understand the reasons given for teaching and believing these doctrines of the Church of Rome. The references to Scripture are very telling.

From Messrs. T. & T. Clark.—"The Greek and Eastern Churches," by the Rev. W. F. Adeny, D.D. Dr. Adeney is well-known as the Principal of Lancashire College, Manchester, and a theologian of distinction. His present work is an important contribution to Church History. The book is divided into two parts, in the first of which is traced the history of the main body of the Church throughout the Eastern provinces of Christendom, until by losing one limb after another it became more and more limited in area, though still claiming to be the one orthodox Church. In the second part is sketched the history of each of the separated Churches, Russian, Syrian, Coptic, &c., as well as of the modern Greek Church. Dr. Adeney writes with thoroughness, learning, and impartiality, not failing to do justice to the merits as well as pointing out the defects of the various bodies of Christians, "who in their own day mutually anathematised each other." At the head of each chapter is placed a list of original authorities, and there is a sufficient though not copious index.

From Messrs. A. Constable & Co., Ltd.—"The Arabian Nights" with about 130 illustrations by W. Heath Robinson, Helen Stratton, and others. Nothing need be said about the "Arabian Nights," the tales are too well-known, but the illustrations in this edition are decidedly clever and greatly add to the value of the book. There is a pretty illuminated frontispiece and title-page, and the book is bound i cloth with coloured design.

From the Same.—"First and Last Things," by H. G. Wells. The impression of thinking aloud is very strong in this "Confession of Faith and Rule of Life." Mr. Wells wants to tell us what he thinks on many subjects—on Religion, on War, on Love—and he accomplishes his end by describing the processes of thought which lead him to certain conclusions. The charm of the book lies in its simple, almost naïve diction, and its strength is derived from its obvious honesty and sincerity. It exposes many fallacies, and stands as an example of clear thinking and right feeling.

From the Same.—"Patricia Baring," by Winifred James. Patricia begins to keep a diary at the age of nine, and for the first few months it is full of the mingled humour and pathos that is so characteristic of highly intelligent and self-analytical children. Patricia is honest, unconventional, full of life, and passionately sincere and generous; consequently, she comes into conflict with people and conventions, and as she is sensitive and highly-strung she is made to suffer keenly. Ten or a dozen years of her life are passed in review before the reader's gaze, and her feelings and aspirations are described with no little vigour and depth of understanding. As a revelation of the nature of a young child blossoming into girlhood and womanhood the book has unusual merit.

From The De La More Press we have received three more of their neat booklets in a convenient case: "The Dream of Gerontius," by Cardinal Newman; "The Blessed Damozel," by D. G. Rossetti; and Coleridge's "Christabel," they make a charming trinity in unity. The same firm also send a pocket reprint of the Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám (FitzGerald's first translation) in paper covers, with outline illustrations in red and green by Miss Blanche McManus.

From the Same comes also a small volume in vellum wrapper: "The Young Gardener's Year," by Miss Dollie Radford. It contains a short poem for each month of the year, giving in pleasant verse simple information as to the flowers in season and the cultural duties of the month, with illustrations by L. E. Wright. It would make a pretty little gift book for a garden-loving child.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co—"The Lawrences of the Punjab," by Frederick P. Gibbon, author of "The Record of the Sikhs" "The Gurkha Scouts," &c. We have every praise for this balanced and well-written account of the persons and work of the Lawrences. It is needless to recapitulate what is so well-known, but we are convinced that this book will be widely read, especially as it is included in the excellent "Temple" Biographies. We make the suggestion that it would prove a capital and interesting holiday task in our public schools.

LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.,

From Mr. T. N. Foulis.—"Rab and His Friends," by John Brown, M.D. A new edition of an ever-popular work, remarkable not only for the exquisite illustrations, which are from water-colour drawings by Miss Preston Macgoun, but from the fact that the story of Rab's earlier days, taken from the essay "Our Dogs" in Horæ Subsecivæ, is included in the book. None will regret to see this earlier narrative, which forms a natural introduction to the later one, set beside it. The type and general get-up of the little volume call for a word of praise.

From the Same.—"The Immortal Hour: a Drama in Two Acts," by Fiona Macleod. A drama in blank verse founded upon the ancient Celtic legend of Medir and Etain—a Gaelic Orpheus and Eurydice. In Etain, the author would convey "a symbol of the wayward but home-wandering soul, and in Medir a symbol of the Spirit." The blank verse is of good quality, and some of the Chants interspersed rise to a high level of wild melody.

From Messrs. William Green & Sons.—"Encyclopædia of Agriculture," Vol. 3. The third and last volume of this most comprehensive Encyclopædia embraces articles from Kainit to Zalkova. We have on previous occasions spoken of this work in high terms of praise, and the concluding volume is in no sense inferior to its predecessors; the numerous illustrations are very well reproduced, and will be found of the greatest service. Among the most important articles we note the following:—"Parasites," by Professor Penberthy; "Pigs," by Professor Malden; "Sanitation," by Richard Henderson; "Landlord and Tenant," by Max A. Robertson; "Physiology of Animals," by Dr. Noel Paton.

From Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd.—"Patcola: A Tale of a Dead City," by Ena Fitzgerald. Miss Fitzgerald has chosen a difficult theme for her first novel. The city of Vijayanagar was founded in the first half of the fourteenth century, when the Mohammedans were attempting to conquer India. Of all its monarchs Krishna Deva Raya was perhaps the most remarkable, and the author has been wise in fixing upon the days of his rule as the time of her story. The tale was told to a young Englishman three hundred years ago by an ancient hermit in India. It has plenty of Eastern colour and glamour, and the incident is abundant.

From the Same.—"The Hoverers," by Lucas Cleeve. The Hoverers are the idle ones, those who have little or no aim in life and are disappointed with their past. Lucas Cleeve's book is full of them, and two at least are anxious "to get out of it." The story is well told, and the character drawing is excellent.

From The Gresham Publishing Co.—"Science in Modern Life," prepared under the editorship of Professor J. R. Ainsworth Davis, M.A. The work sums up in an accurate and readable fashion the present state of knowledge in Astronomy, Geology, Chemistry, Physics, Botany, Zoology, Biology, Physiology, Medicine and Surgery, Anthropology, and Ethnology. Briefly, the object of "Science in Modern Life" is to give a connected account of present-day science, with special reference to its influence on modern life. Illuminating articles are included on—The Nature and Cause of Sun Spots; Origin of the Solar System; Origin of Mountains; The Ice Age; The Nature of Volcanoes and Earthquakes; The Nature of Matter; The Röntgen Rays and Radiography; The Properties of Radium; Electrons and Their Work; The Physics of Soap Bubbles; The Spectroscope and Spectra; Dispersal of Seeds and Fruits; The Eggs of Deep Sea Fish; Serum Treatment of Diseases; Progress of Sanitary Science; The Importance of Heredity; The Theory of Natural Selection; The Finsen Light and X-rays; The Cradle of the Human Race; The Races of Mankind; The Submarine; Plant Associations; Strange Extinct Animals; Evolution of the Animal Kingdom; The Progress of Scientific Agriculture; The Village Community; The Life History of the Eel; The Stone, Bronze, and Iron Ages; Aeroplanes and Dirigible Balloons. The work will be completed in six well bound volumes, measuring 10 by 7 inches. The first volume is now ready, and contains two large folding maps, nineteen full-page plates and thirty-nine other illustrations and diagrams. It is produced in the usual excellent style of The Gresham Publishing Co., and promises to be a most useful and interesting work.

From Mr. William Heinemann.—"Dan to Beersheba," by Archibald Colquhoun. A book of travel and exploration, and there are many such, is somewhat a dangerous experiment: for nothing is more calculated to tire a reader than ill-told adventures; but in Mr. Colquhoun's book the reader will find nothing to bore him, for the author, partly due to his journalistic past, and partly to his energetic mind, knows how to sustain interest throughout. He takes as his motto Sterne's remark: "I pity the man who can travel from Dan to Beersheba and cry 'tis all barren'; and so it is, and so is all the world to him who will not cultivate the fruits it offers." Certainly Sterne would have found no reason to pity Mr. Colquhoun; and after reading his book one feels a little less ignorant, and a little more travelled.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"A Short History of Social Life in England," by M. B. Synge, F.R.Hist.S. It is with good heart that we draw attention to this work, for we know that there are few things better for the modern man than a knowledge of his ancestors and the circumstances of their lives. It is so easy to forget the debt we owe to the past, so hard to remember our duty to the future; and we think that this book, dealing as it does with the more material side of life, will do something to awaken the national conscience. It is a great thing to remember that the personages of our history, the makers of the character of the Empire, were after all but men—and in some cases women. The position of women in the Fifteenth Century is interesting. We read that "The Trades Gilds also admitted women as sisters, with equal rights with the men; they could wear the livery, take apprentices, and sit at the election feasts: they belonged to the Drapers' Company, The Brewers' Company, The Fishmongers, Weavers, Grocers, and Stationers. Neither do they seem to have abused this right in the Middle Ages. For any fraud they took their place with the men in the stocks; for any insubordination they were apparently still beaten by their husbands." We commend the position of these women to the earnest consideration of the militant suffrage-sisters of to-day with the remark that they will be well-advised to get husbands if they can and take their beatings like their nobler and more womanly ancestresses. In some ways we compare unfavourably with the past.

From Messrs. Jordan & Sons, Ltd.—The 29th Edition of the "Handbook on The Formation, Management and Winding-Up of Joint Stock Companies," by F. Gore-Browne, M.A.K.C., and William Jordan, is, the publishers inform us, not a reprint, but a carefully revised new edition, added to and in some places rewritten to bring it into conformity with the latest enactments. This handbook is too well-known to need recommendation, but an interesting addition is the table on pp. 627 and 628, giving the dates of the various editions and reprints. It is worth noting that the 28th edition was published originally in January, 1908, but has had to be reprinted on no fewer than four occasions, and now before that year is out an entirely new edition is needed. This is an eloquent tribute to the value of the work.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner & Co., Ltd.—"Anne Seymour Damer," by Percy Noble. Anne Seymour Conway, or as she is better known, Anne Seymour Damer, has more than ordinary claims to live in history; during her long and eventful life (1748–1828) she was the centre of a circle in which rank, wealth, fashion, and science were all gathered together. She was not only the friend of literary and artistic people, but was a sculptor of no mean repute, and the record of her life, as set forth by Mr. Noble, is extremely pleasant and agreeable. In whatever she undertook, she had an amount of daring and spirit quite uncommon in ordinary women. The book contains numerous and well-chosen illustrations.

From the Same.—"Money and Profit-Sharing or, The Double Standard Money System." A well-considered treatise of economic science that will prove of value, not only to the student but to the ordinary man who would go a little beneath the surface of those matters of which we all talk so glibly.

From Messrs. P. S. King & Son.—"The "King's Revenue," by W. M. J. Williams. This book contains most of the facts pertaining to the taxes of the United Kingdom and the revenue which they yield. All the chief avenues of the Public Revenue have been treated separately under the various heads of Customs, Excise, and other Inland Revenue, while a reference will be found to minor taxes also. Each chapter has been divided into three sections, viz., history; the rate at which a tax is now imposed; and some statistics of the yield of revenue during recent years.

From Mr. John Lane.—"A Poor Man's House," by Stephen Reynolds. The "poor man" was a fisherman in a South-Devon town, and the author from time to time spent a week or a month or two in his house. Tony had a wife and a number of delightful children. They presented Mr. Reynolds with a good deal of material for close observation and study, and the thoughts and reflections they suggested to his mind are recorded here with some literary distinction and power. The story that runs through the book is not cast in the form of a novel; these pages, indeed, were originally written as a journal and as letters to a friend.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—"English Church Teaching," by the Bishop of Durham, the Bishop of Sodor and Man, and Canon R. B. Girdlestone, is a standard manual of orthodox evangelical belief. It has already reached its twentieth thousand, and a further edition is now issued in the form of a well-printed volume of 264 pages at the very low price of 1s.

From the Same.—"Naval Warfare; its Historical Development from the Age of the Great Geographical Discoveries to the Present Time," by Vice-Admiral Baron Curt von Maltzahn, translated from the German by John C. Miller. The chief interest in this little work lies in the fact that it embodies the views of a distinguished German naval officer, who has served in every part of the world, on the great subject described in its title. It shows how closely Mahans' works have been read, marked, learned, and inwardly digested by our greatest European naval rivals. Some of the conclusions seem fairly obvious. "Just as Napoleon's army in Egypt was cut off from the world by Nelson's victory at Aboukir Bay, so would the Japanese army in Manchuria have become prisoners in the grip of a Russian maritime supremacy if Rozhdestvensky's fleet had triumphed." If—yes, but even the Russians did not expect that "If" to come off.

From Messrs. S. Low & Co.—"The Story of the Submarine," by Lieut.-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel Cyril Field, R.M.L.I. The majority of people if asked when submarine warfare originated would probably say within the last few years; it is therefore somewhat surprising to learn from this most interesting book that the use of some device for under-water work can be traced back as far as B.C. 415. Many weird, and in most cases utterly useless, contrivances have been invented, so many in fact that it is hopeless to try and enumerate them here. The number of lives that have been sacrificed is also very great, and often the inventor found a grave in his own invention. According to Appendix I. about 225 submarines were invented from the earliest time to A.D. 1900, but only 81 were actually constructed, and of these but a few were of any use whatever. Every shape, including fish, barrel, porpoise, cigar, lemon, and ovoid, has been tried, every size from a few feet to 160 or more, and every possible and impossible method of propulsion. An interesting statement of the number of submarines in the possession of the various Powers is given in Appendix II. Britain, it appears, has about 50; France, 56, with 12 submersibles; Germany, 6; U.S.A., 17; Russia, 36; Japan about 15. In addition to submarines proper, the author deals with semi-submarines, submersibles, submarine working boats, divers and diving apparatus, torpedoes, &c., and his book (produced by permission of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty) is at once interesting and instructive. There are nearly 100 illustrations by the author, and a curious coloured frontispiece from a 13th century MS., showing Alexander the Great under water in a glass barrel and in imminent danger of being overwhelmed by an enormous whale.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—"The Forbidden Boundary," by B. L. Putnam Weale. Eastern tales of more than usual merit. Mr. Putnam Weale handles his material with a masterly hand, and his style has grip and force. "The Fever Bed" and "Drugs and the Man" remind us a little of de Maupassant.

From Messrs. A. R. Mowbray & Co., Ltd.—"North India," by Rev. C. F. Andrews, M.A. This tasteful volume is a very welcome addition to the admirable handbooks of English Church Expansion series. The author has chosen the plan of selecting as far as possible the lives of typical men, both Indian and English, in order to tell his story, and an entrancing series of episodes it is. His opinions are expressed with frankness and without reservation, and the material is most skilfully handled throughout, with a view to making the story as human and as true as possible.

From the Same.—"The Ornaments of the Ministers," by Rev. Percy Dearmer, M.A.; "The Architectural History of the Christian Church," by Arthur George Hill, M.A., F.S.A. Messrs. Mowbray have learned the art of producing attractive and choice volumes at a moderate price; moreover, the literary quality of the works they produce is always sound. These two handy books belong to the Arts of the Church series. Each volume has been written by a man of expert knowledge and wide scholarship, which, however, never clogs the style or makes it heavy with dry and unnecessary information. The illustrations are plentiful and of first-rate quality, and each volume has a complete index.

From the Same.—The following choice volumes are included in the English Churchman's Library: "Our Working Girls and How to Help Them," by Flora Lucy Freeman, is thoroughly practical from beginning to end. Miss Freeman has had many years' experience in connection with girls' clubs, and the advice she has to offer is sound and straightforward. There are separate chapters on the starting of a club, religious teaching, discipline and order, moral teaching, &c. "The Christian Use of the Psalter," by Rev. A. R. Whitham, M.A. This book is intended for the plain man who goes to church and loves the Prayer Book, but finds the Psalms sometimes puzzling. What has been attempted in these lectures is not to explain them in detail, but to suggest the broad lines of interpretation which seem always to have been in the minds of the Church in her use of the Psalter. "Letters to a Godson: Second Series," by M. Cyril Bickersteth, M.A., has become something of a classic, and we welcome a new edition of this book as well as of Vernon Staley's "The Practical Religion."

From the Same.—"The Invisible Glory": Selected Sermons preached by the late Bishop Wilkinson, Primus of the Scottish Episcopal Church. Though these sermons were only published in May last, a new impression is already called for (5s.). As a memento of one who by common consent was of those who came nearest of all men of our time to the Divine pattern, the book needs no recommendation from us.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash.—"The Man Who Understood Women," by Leonard Merrick. Mr. Merrick has a light touch and a fantastical humour that he uses to excellent purpose. This volume of short stories is a collection of trifles, of vignettes, showing an unusual art. Though the tales cover a wide variety of subject, the treatment is much the same in each—swift drawing of character, quick development, and piquant incident.

From the Same.—"The Wife of Lafayette," by M. MacDermot Crawford. No woman of the Revolution possessed a more interesting personality than Adrienne de Noailles, and yet, strange to say, her personality is nowadays little more than a name. She was one of the few whose unsullied reputation received new lustre from the misfortunes of the Revolution, and no one could be less typical of the grande dame of the end of the eighteenth century than Mme. de Lafayette. She had none of the vices and weaknesses of the period, but she had all its virtues; she was a model of heroism, an unflinchingly loyal wife, and a woman of large and noble character. Mrs. Crawford has taken great pains with her biography, and it is a fascinating piece of work. The life of Adrienne de Noailles is set forth in detail, with the times, fitful and exciting, in which she lived; the result is a picture of singular nobility and attraction. The handsome volume is provided with a number of excellent illustrations.

Published Weekly by J. C. FRANCIS and J. E. FRANCIS, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

From Mr. Grant Richards.—"The Children of the Gutter," by Arthur Applin, author of "The Butcher of Bruton Street." It is a little difficult to be interested in the hero of this story, or to accept his course of action as reasonable; he is an artist and sees a fifteen-year-old gutter girl dancing in the gutter; he takes her to his lodgings, and after helping her in various ways into falling in love with him, he goes to prison, and leaves her to develop into a glorious red-haired dancer, the beauty of London and rage of the town. He chooses a girl with money, and we are left to imagine that the wild child of Nature breaks her heart, to a certain extent, and then leaves for the music halls of Paris. So she probably dances at last into much worse degradation than that from which the hero rescued her. The book is well written and interesting, Maggie, the heroine, being admirably drawn; to make the reader regret that her love is wrecked, and the natural gold of her fiery nature hidden under music-hall brass, is proof of the author's skill.

From the Same.—"When the Tide Turns," by Filson Young. This story of the development of an artist, Rupert Savage, is undoubtedly good, and in many of its incidents true to life; it is a pity, therefore, that its ending, even if artistically possible, should be such as to outrage the feelings of those who feel that even an artist may sometimes respect his neighbour's wife. The author has deliberately avoided an artistic ending, because he preferred to exalt what his hero describes as "sinful happiness," and in doing so is both untrue to his art and spoils an otherwise good story.

From Messrs. Sands & Co.—"Auriel Selwode," by Emily Bowles. A long, leisurely and very able story of rural England in the early eighteenth century. A good deal of interest centres in the haunted old rectory in which Auriel lives with her bachelor uncle. Miss Bowles has filled her tale with well-contrasted characters, who have real and distinct individualities; there is plenty of exciting incident, and a happy, quiet ending.

From Messrs. Sisley's Ltd.—"The Wine of the Puritans," by Van Wyck Brooks. A Study of Present-Day America. There seems to be some dislike still in our country to some things American; perhaps, because to quote the present book, "American history is so unlovable." But, despite their unromantic past and their apparently soul-crushing methods, Americans in America are really charming people. Anyone who reads this study will be struck with its cultured style and its very good sense. Some of our criticisms of Americans, as we see them, seem to be true; we notice that it is remarked that "there is less happiness in America than in any other country in the civilised world. And it is because we associate happiness with spending money." Well, Americans may not be internally happy, but they have a gift of cheering up the miserable, and, as we know from experience, they are bountifully kind to the stranger within their gates. All the good fish stories come from America.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"The Man of the Mask," by Arthur Stapylton Barnes, M.A. Monsignor Barnes has written the story of "The Man in the Iron Mask" from a standpoint completely novel. Mr. Andrew Lang was content to leave the mystery unsolved. Monsignor Barnes, starting where Mr. Lang left off, has made independent research among the historical records, and propounds as his solution a personality hitherto ignored in this regard. The son of an English King, a member of the Society of Jesus, an Agent of the French Government, and a "tipster" on Newmarket Heath, the new man fits, it is claimed, into all the conditions of time and migration. A good deal of new matter is introduced into the work, and the author has made out an excellent case.

From the Same.—"My First and Last Appearance," and other original recitations. by Edward F. Turner. We are glad to welcome these selections from "T Leaves" "Tantler's Sister, and other untruthful stories," and "More T Leaves." They contain many a hearty laugh, and should prove a boon to the talented amateur in his domestic circle.

From the Same.—"The Human Woman," by Lady Grove. Lady Grove has here reprinted a number of essays, contributed by her to the Nineteenth Century, Fortnightly, and other reviews, on the burning question of Women's Suffrage. She wields a vigorous and incisive pen, and her slashing polemic will entertain even where it fails to convince.

From Mr. Elliot Stock.—"A Royalist Raid, and other Poems," by Mr. Walter Clifford Meller. A series of short and stirring poems on the leading personages and events of the Stuart period. Mr. Meller has strong Jacobite sympathies, and his well written ballads will awaken an echo in many hearts to whom lost causes are dear.——"The Shadow of the Angel," by Mr. Ernest W. Shurtleff. This is the first London edition of a little volume of heroic couplets of which five editions have already been published in America. Its theme is the consoling influence of angelic messengers in the Bible and in human life. Some photographic reproductions of famous paintings help to make a very attractive little gift book.

From Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell.—"A Shuttlecock for Critics, being the Uproarings in Prose of a Dilettante's Pegasus," by James J. Eaton, with a frontispiece by Edgar H. Hawley. This is a pleasant handy little pocket volume of gossipy essays: Of Books and Reading; Two Favourite Authors (Sir Thomas Browne and Robert Louis Stevenson); Ways of Travel; Philosophers; Parapluitics; Ars Vivendi, &c. Mr. Eaton makes friends of his readers in his first essay—at least of those who are lovers of books; he holds that there is no other pleasure in life in any way comparable to the delight of reading. Many have shared his regret that life is not long enough for reading all that one would wish to read. Of R. L. Stevenson's style he says: "It is the perfect product of his instinctive appreciation of the melody of language joined to his complete comprehension of the balance and construction of the period in prose. Though its acquirement was the result of many years' work in his youth it is never laboured—a flawless and most musical flow of language, in which every word bears its utmost significance, and where none could be displaced or omitted, distinguishes even the most trivial of his writings. He aimed at perfection in style; he attained it more nearly than any English writer before or since."

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—"Through Sorrow's Gate," by Mr. Halliwell Sutcliffe. Mr. Unwin has chosen this well-known and successful story for re-issue, as the first of his "Adelphi" library, a new series of "novels which have gained the rank of standard books." The paper, typography, and binding are all thoroughly good, and the price very moderate.

Keep in Touch with the Trade

By Advertising in "The Publishers' Circular"

"The Publishers' Circular" is read by booksellers, librarians, and all connected with books and literature at home and abroad. It possesses certain features which make it indispensable, and there is hardly a bookseller in the country who does not read and study every number.

The up-to-date Trade information; the List of Books Wanted: and the detailed particulars of New Publications are some of the weekly features which ensure its being bought and read by booksellers, librarians, and large bookbuyers generally.

"The Publishers' Circular" is therefore an excellent medium for Publishers' Announcements. An advertisement in its pages is the most effective and economical means of reaching the men whose business it is to buy books, and who respond to book advertising more than any other class.

Booksellers having rare or second-hand books for disposal should try the effect of an advertisement in "The Publishers' Circular." We are every day receiving fresh testimony as to the efficacy of our advertising columns in this respect.

All Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to the Manager—at the Offices, 19, Adam Street, Adelphi, Strand, London, W.C.

Publishers' Circular

Account of the Voyage Corporatif des Commis-Libraires Francais a Londres

12, 13 & 14 Juillet, 1908

All the booksellers and publishers who took part in the reception of our French confrères last summer, and our readers generally, will read with interest the following extracts from a charming illustrated brochure published by the French Association, describing the visit.

Lorsque, il y a près d'un an, plusieurs d'entre nous parlèrent d'une excursion possible à Londres, nul ne pouvait prévoir le succès qui a couronné nos efforts.

Nous étions en effet 160 voyageurs environ, en grande majorité commis-libraires et leurs familles, venus surtout de Paris, mais aussi de Bayonne, Clermont-Ferrand, Genève, Lille, Melun, Nevers, Nogent-le-Rotrou, Pithiviers, Toulon, etc. Nous représentions, en un mot, toutes les provinces françaises, voire même un peu la Suisse.

Si nous conservons un inoubliable souvenir de l'excursion, malgré la pluie et les petits ennuis inévitables, disons de suite qu'il faut en reporter tout l'honneur à nos aimables collègues anglais. Leur inlassable complaisance a été pour nous infiniment précieuse, facilitant la tâche laborieuse et parfois ingrate des membres du Comité, qui ont eu à surmonter de nombreuses difficultés pour la bonne organisation du voyage, avant et pendant l'excursion.

Maintenant, reportons-nous au 11 juillet, 1908, et décrivons, autant que notre mémoire le permettra, les événements du voyage.

Nous sommes donc réunis le samedi soir 11, vers 9 heures, gare du Nord; plusieurs de nos amis, que nous remercions sincèrement, M. Bayle, du journal "La Librairie," M. Labarthe, de Genève, M. de Pachtere, M. Sévin, etc., retenus à Paris, sont venus nous aider à monter dans le train, ou plutôt dans les trains, car il y a grande affluence pour Londres, et notre départ ne rappelle que de très loin les embarquements militaires réglés et méthodiques auxquels nous étions habitués au régiment.

Mais qu'importe ! les trains roulent, et nous nous retrouvons à Calais pour le trajet maritime, effectué pour les uns sur le Dover, pour les autres sur le Nord, deux magnifiques steamers. La mer est superbe, sans une vague; nous avons à peine le temps de visiter les machines, les cabines, les salons, les fumoirs, sans oublier le buffet et, déjà, le jour paraît, puis bientôt les falaises de Douvres sont en vue. Nous croisons plusieurs vapeurs, quelques bateaux de pêche, et nous mettons le pied sur la terre anglaise. Nous prenons place dans les wagons réservés pour nous et l'Association des Instituteurs, et en route pour Londres !

Nous longeons la mer un certain temps et traversons ensuite de riches campagnes, coupées par-ci par-là de charmants cottages où, certes, il doit faire bon vivre. Bientôt les gares se succèdent plus rapprochées, les rues, formées de petites maisons semblables, commencent à se montrer, puis les fabriques et les usines, puis enfin la Tamise. Nos billets sont vérifiés à Victoria Station et, quelques minutes après, nous débarquons à Charing-Cross.

Mais quelles sont, sur le quai, ces figures amies qui semblent nous chercher au milieu de la foule ? Ce sont nos collègues anglais : Mr. Chaundry, d'Oxford; Mr. Beet, Mr. Hobbs, Mr. Crockett et Mr. Watson, de la section de Londres de la National Book Trade Provident Society, ainsi qu'un de nos sociétaires, M. Delaire, de la Librairie Nilsson, qui sont venus nous souhaiter la bienvenue malgré l'heure matinale.

(Then follow descriptions of the sights of London, which were seen by means of "les omnibus ou autobus et le Tub." If our French friends "asked a policeman" where to get "a Tub—" even he must have been nonplussed.)

Stationers' Hall

Nous avons tous été agréablement surpris par la magnifique réception qui nous fut faite au Stationers' Hall, la vielle et historique maison de la Corporation du Livre, et certes, aucun de ceux qui assistèrent à cette soirée ne l'oublieront.

Disons d'abord que, sur l'initiative de M. Cooper, secrétaire de la Book Trade Provident Society, un comité spécial s'était formé pour nous recevoir, sous la présidence de Mr. Denny, Président de la Book Trade Provident Society, assisté de MM. Barwick, Minoggio, Hodges, Shaylor, Crockett, Cooper.

Dès notre arrivée, l'un de nos aimables hôtes, Mr. Barwick, qui parle français aussi couramment que nous, nous introduit dans les salles de l'ancienne demeure, où nous sommes reçus par Mr. Denny et les membres du Comité de réception, puis par Mr. Rivington, secrétaire de la Stationers' Company.

La grande salle, où des sièges sont disposés, renferme les vieux souvenirs de la Corporation, les actes officiels, les chartes. Les splendides pièces d'argenterie sont exposées pour nous, et sitôt installés, Mr. William Heinemann nous souhaite en francais la bienvenue par un discours fort aimable que nous reproduisons ci-dessous. Mr. Heinemann est l'un des grands éditeurs anglais, et nous apprécions beaucoup le très grand honneur qu'il a bien voulu nous faire.

(Here follows Mr. Heinemann's speech.)

De vigoureux applaudissements saluent la conclusion de Mr. Heinemann, et Mr. Rivington, le secrétaire de la Stationers' Company, prend la parole pour nous dire qu'il est heureux de nous offrir, au nom de la Corporation, l'hospitalité, et pour nous conter l'histoire de la vieille Société et de l'antique demeure historique où nous sommes.

Il est applaudi frénétiquement, et la parole est maintenant à M. Rouche, le président de l'Association, qui prononce le discours suivant.

(Then follows the speech of M. Rouche.)

La fin du discours est accueillie par des hurrahs enragés, qui cessent seulement lorsque M. Wilhelm, Président du Comité français, prononce en anglais l'allocution suivante.

(Here follows the charming little speech, in English, of M. Wilhelm.)

Nos amis anglais sont charmés de l'aimable attention du Président du Comité français de parler leur langue, et lui expriment leur sentiment par leurs acclamations.

Mr. Barwick, qui a été l'âme de la réunion, répond en français qu'il ne faut pas se considérer comme Français ou Anglais, mais comme des frères d'une grande famille, et il termine en disant qu'une guerre entre les deux nations serait un crime ; il est applaudi aussi chaleureusement, et il nous invite à passer dans une salle voisine, où un magnifique buffet est dressé.

Des rafraîchissements, des cigares, etc., sont servis pendant que les conversations s'établissent ; certains parmi nous parlent anglais, tout spécialement Mme. Wilhelm dont la parfaite connaissance de l'anglais nous fut si précieuse ; de même plusieurs de nos hôtes parlent français ; tout s'arrange donc pour le mieux.

Nous revenons ensuite dans la grande salle, et le concert commence par la "Marseillaise," suivie du "God save the King." Mr. P. Hodges s'était chargé du programme, fort bien choisi, et nous avons le plaisir d'entendre nos collègues anglais Mr. Leach, Mr. Swinford, Mr. Hennings, etc., dans diverses chansons anglaises ainsi que M. Bonneau, le secrétaire de l'Amicale, dans "Le Lac," les uns et les autres fort applaudis par tous.

N'oublions pas de mentionner aussi l'aimable télégramme suivant qui nous est adressé en français au Stationers' Hall par Mr. Pearce, secrétaire de l'Associated Booksellers' Society (Libraires associés) :

"Je regrette infiniment qu'il ne me soit pas possible d'être avec vous. Tous mes souhaits pour une visite agréable. Vive l'entente cordiale ! qu'elle devienne encore plus assurée pour le bonheur de nos chères patries ! "

Nous remercions tout particulièrement Mr. Pearce et les membres de l'Associated Booksellers' Society.

Mais le temps passe vite, et bientôt après avoir chanté les hymnes nationaux, nous devons nous quitter pour rentrer à l'hôtel, mais avec l'espoir de nous revoir.

Le mardi, dès le matin, plusieurs groupes se forment pour visiter les uns les grands musées ou la merveilleuse collection Wallace, les autres le Jardin Zoologique et les quartiers avoisinants, pendant que d'autres se dirigent vers le Port et les Docks, ou vont tout simplement faire des achats en ville.

Le Président de l'Association et les membres du Comité profitent de leur liberté relative pour rendre les visites qu'ils ont reçues et aller remercier les libraires et les personnes qui ont été en relations directes avec nous et ont contribué à la bonne réussite de notre excursion.

Partout nous sommes accueillis fort aimablement et nous nous hâtons pour nous trouver à l'heure au rendez-vous fixé pour la visite de la maison Cassell & Co.

Visit to Messrs. Cassell & Co.

After a long and interesting account of the visit to Messrs. Cassell's, M. J. Rameau, who describes it, says :

En allant à Londres, l'Association des Commis-Libraires Français n'avait pas pour but unique de faire un voyage d'agrément. Fidèle à son programme, elle voulait mettre à profit ce voyage pour donner à ses adhérents une leçon de choses par une idée de la production, de l'édition anglaise et, en même temps, établir des relations amicales avec ses collègues d'Outre-Manche.

Cette leçon de choses, sollicitée par Mr. Lee, directeur de la succursale Cassell, de Paris, nous fut obtenue par l'entremise du très aimable Directeur des services du Cercle de la Librairie, M. Prunières.

Lors de son voyage à Londres, en juin dernier, ce dernier fit part de notre désir à Mr. Edward Bell, Président du Cercle des Editeurs anglais. Celui-ci, avec une grande bienveillance, voulut bien prendre en main notre cause et nous obtint par Mr. Golding, l'un des sous-directeurs, l'autorisation de la visite si intéressante de la Maison Cassell & Co., l'une des plus importantes, sinon la plus importante maison d'édition à Londres, dont nous connaissons tous la filiale de Paris. Nous renouvelons ici, à chacun de ces Messieurs, l'assurance de notre vive gratitude pour la belle leçon qu'ils nous ont ménagée.

Nous avons, en France, des maisons d'édition considérables, mais aucune, ne possède semblable organisation et ne réunit tous les services de fabrication mécanique que nous venons de voir, depuis la fonte du caractère jusqu'à la mise en vente du livre.

Avant de partir, par une délicate attention, Mr. Bovit fait distribuer à chacun de nous le numéro de The World's Work qui rend compte de l'Exposition franco-britannique, et c'est avec nos vifs remerciements que nous quittons la Maison Cassell & Co. En la quittant, nous emportons la forte impression d'une puissance, d'une action, d'une direction auxquelles nous rendons hommage et qui se font sentir dans le monde entier par des succursales établies à Paris, New York, Melbourne et Toronto.

(Then follows a long account of a visit to the Exhibition.)

Good Wishes from Edinburgh

Voici maintenant le dernier dîner pris en commun ; il faut songer à partir. Avant de quitter Londres nous avons soin de ne pas oublier nos amis d'Ecosse et nous adressons à Mr. D. Haldane, secrétaire de l'Edinburgh Assistant Booksellers' Association un télégramme de cordiale sympathie. M. Minoggio, de la maison Hachette, a l'amabilité de venir à l'hôtel nous faire ses adieux, et non sans regrets, il faut nous diriger vers la gare.

Nous y trouvons tous nos amis venus nous serrer la main encore une fois, et nous dire au revoir, et au revoir c'est bien ce qu'il convient de dire, car des liens d'amitié et de sympathie sont maintenant établis entre les collègues français et les collègues anglais, et ces liens dureront toujours, comme le souvenir de l'aimable réception qui nous a été faite.

Aussi merci à vous, amis Barwick, Beet, Chaundy, Cooper, Crockett, Hobbs, Rymer, Watson, sans oublier l'aimable Mr. Murphy et nos collègues français, MM. Kruger et Delaire, merci du fond du cœur à tous nos camarades anglais et à M. Denny, le président du Comité, merci à vous tous qui avez fait le possible et l'impossible pour nous être agréables. Soyez contents, vous avez parfaitement réussi.

Mais les trains partent : un dernier "Good bye," et bientôt, nous sommes loin. Nous arrivons à Douvres, en pleine nuit, la mer est un peu agitée ; cependant la traversée s'effectue sans incidents, par un superbe clair de lune. A Calais, nous prenons vite place dans les trains de Paris et à l'arrivée, nous nous quittons à la hâte, afin de profiter des quelques heures libres pour dormir un peu avant de travailler.

Plusieurs semaines se sont écoulées depuis notre retour et cependant nous songeons toujours à la chaleureuse réception qui nous fut faite dans cette immense ville. Nous conservons le souvenir des amitiés ébauchées, le regret de n'avoir pu qu'entrevoir cette vie affairée si intense, ces musées et ces monuments si intéressants et surtout l espoir de voir un jour en France nos amis anglais.

According to The Bookman Mr. W. L. Courtney has written a new play—one that deals with Brittany and Breton legends—which is at present in the hands of Miss Evelyn Millard. Three or four of the plays in his "Dramas and Diversions" have been put upon the stage.

Notes and Announcements

MESSRS. LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. are preparing for publication, during the coming spring, five volumes in a new one shilling net series of Anglican Church Handbooks, edited by the Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D.D. The object of the series is to present to Church people, in a cheap and readable form, a trustworthy account of the History, Faith, Worship, and Work of the Church of Christ in general, and the Church of England in particular. The titles of forthcoming volumes are: "Christianity and the Supernatural"; "Social Work"; "Pastoral Work"; "The Joy of Bible Study"; and "Old Testament Theology."

Her Majesty the Queen of Spain, as well as His Majesty the King of Portugal, ordered copies of Queen Alexandra's Christmas Gift Book direct from Mr. Thatcher, College Green, Bristol; the copies were specially bound by Mr. H. Frowde, Oxford Press. His Majesty King Edward VII. accepted a copy of the photograph of Mr. Thatcher's shop window specially dressed with Queen Alexandra's Christmas Gift Book.

The earliest of the serious books to be issued in 1909 is that on the present condition and progress of "The South African Natives," which Mr. Murray publishes at once. It has been prepared by the Native Races Committee, and contains a special chapter on the administration of natives by Sir Godfrey Lagden, whose inestimable services during the War are not likely to be forgotten. The book makes a thoughtful study of the questions of labour, land, education, and taxation, so far as they affect the South African natives. Its publication is singularly opportune, synchronising as it does with the Congress on native affairs to be held during January in Cape Town.

The forthcoming number of The Quarterly Review, to be published on January 14th, will contain articles on several subjects of immediate public interest—the Territorial Force, the question of a Minimum Wage, Motor-car Legislation, Female Suffrage (by Professor Dicey), the Care of the Feeble-minded (by Dr. Savage), and the Turkish Revolution (by Dr. Dillon). History and Biography are represented by articles on Sir Henry Wotton (Mr. Pearsall Smith's "Life"), the influence of Religion on Politics in Ancient Egypt (by Mr. Weigall, a distinguished member of the "Service des Antiquites in Egypt), the Foundation of the Third Republic (based on the work of M. Hanotaux, by Sir Ernest Satow), Herodotus (Dr. Macan's edition, by Mr. Grundy), and Irish History as treated by Mrs. Green and others (by Mr. R. Dunlop). Among literary subjects, the Poet Laureate contributes an article comparing Dante and Milton; Mr. Escott discusses Antony Trollope, whose lasting popularity is attested by numerous recent reprints, and Mr. Henry Newbolt criticises Mr. Hardy's historical drama "The Dynasts," under the title "A New Departure in English Poetry." This being the centenary year of the birth of Charles Darwin and of The Quarterly Review, a special centenary number, containing, among other things, a history of The Quarterly Review and articles on Darwinism from various points of view, will, it is hoped, be published in April.

Messrs. Henry Young & Sons, announce that they will shortly publish another work by the octogenarian Liverpool author, William Lowes Rushton, entitled "Shakespeare and the 'Arte of English Poesie,'" inwhich Mr. Rushton proves by many examples Shakespeare's indebtedness to that famous Elizabethan masterpiece.

The two pictures by the late James McNeill Whistler which are being exhibited at the Royal Academy in the collection of the late Mr. George McCulloch, are reproduced in the "Life" of the artist by Mr. and Mrs. Pennell, lately published by Mr. Heinemann. The two pictures in question are the very fine portrait of Whistler by himself, which forms the frontispiece to the second volume, and the upright Valparaiso Nocturn, which is one of some 90 illustrations in the first volume.

A book with a second-hand middle-aged bookseller for its hero, or say principal character, is a bit of a novelty, but this is what Mr. Teignmouth Shore's new story "A Soul's Awakening," just published by Mr. John Long, is. And it is a capital book, too, one which we can heartily recommend to our readers, the booksellers. Arthur Murchant, of the little dark bookshop in Turnmill Lane, Holborn, is a fine character, well-drawn, and the picture of the dawn of a great happiness coming into his humdrum life and its sunset in sorrow is a bit of good and true work.

"As yet South America is scarcely producing her own literature, though she is a great reader of fiction and other lighter books. It will be interesting to see which of the old countries will ultimately supply most books to South American readers. One would say Spain, for the language of South America is Spanish, but then Spain is not exactly producing the books which South America wants. Next one would say France, because French fiction is perhaps nearest the taste of the light-hearted South American reader. There, again, however, our English tongue comes in to help us, for next to Spanish, it is best known in South America."—The Book Monthly.

Antiquaries and others interested in old Leases, Releases, Mortgages, Wills, Probates, Titles, Conveyances, Agreements, Contracts, Feoffments, Defeazances, et hoc genus omne, should note that Mr. James Coleman, of Tottenham Terrace, White Hart Lane, Tottenham, has a lot of such documents relating to Middlesex for sale. He is doing good service in paging his lists continuously "in order to form a volume of reference for the genealogist and topographer."

Mr. William J. Locke's new novel, "Septimus" will be published next week by Mr. Murray. The central character, after whom the novel is named, is a harmless and irresponsible inventor. Readers of Mr. Locke's earlier books will be prepared for some excellent entertainment.

"Sweet Peas and How to Grow Them" is the title of a well-illustrated volume written by Mr. H. H. Thomas, editor of The Gardener, which Messrs. Cassell publish. It gives practical advice on all phases of the subject, and tells how to grow sweet peas for home and garden, as well as for exhibition, how to raise new varieties, and has a special chapter entitled "The Beginner's Guide to Sweet Pea Growing." Whether in the garden or for table decoration, the sweet pea is one of the joys of life.

On January 15th Messrs. Cassell will publish a popular shilling edition of Maurice Hewlett's novel, "The Spanish Jade."

"Gardening in the North" (Cassell) is the title of a volume by Mr. S. Arnott and Mr. R. P. Brotherston, which deals in a thorough and workmanlike manner with the subject.

Among the best of the book reviews given by the illustrated papers are those in The Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News, which has been established over thirty-five years, and is every week more attractive than ever. If a prize were offered for getting the best results out of printing half-tone process blocks, the staff of the S. & D. would come out very close to the bald spot.

Messrs. Gowans & Gray, Ltd., of London and Glasgow, have recently published at 6d. net, a wonderful little edition of "Las Cien Mejores Poesías (Liricas) de la lengua Castellana" (the Hundred Best Poems (Lyrics) in the Spanish Language). It is a beautifully printed little volume of 350 pages, and ranges over the whole history of Spanish poetry, exclusive of the work of living poets.

On January 11th, in the "Great Cities of the World" series, Mr. T. Fisher Unwin will publish a book by Mr. E. A. Reynolds-Ball, entitled "Paris in its Splendour." It is an attempt to give a general impression of Paris past and present, and of the more striking features of the social life of the city to-day. It presents in a readable and attractive form a large amount of information about the history, the people and the buildings of Paris, and has many illustrations.

"The Industrial and Commercial Influence of the English Patent System" is dealt with by Mr. A. F. Ravenshear in a volume which Mr. T. Fisher Unwin will publish on January 11th. The subject of patents, and especially their effect upon British industries, has for some time been prominently before the public.

The Selborne Society has revived the old title of its magazine, which will henceforth be called The Selborne Magazine (and Nature Notes), and will be published by Messrs. George Philip & Son, Ltd., of 32, Fleet Street, E.C. All communications with regard to the Society should be addressed to the Honorary General Secretary of the Selborne Society, 20, Hanover Square, London, as heretofore.

In view of the production by Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry of Mr. William Devereux's play, "Henry of Navarre," at the New Theatre, on January 7th, Messrs. Greening inform us that they are publishing a novel by Miss May Wynne, entitled "Henry of Navarre," which deals with the story of Mr. Devereux's play. Messrs. Greening are also issuing a cheap edition of Miss Wynne's story, "A Maid of Brittany."

Mr. M. P. Shiel's new novel "The Isle of Lies," which Mr. Werner Laurie is about to publish, tells how an enthusiastic professor daringly possesses himself of a "Stele" thousands of years old, the prized possession of an Egyptian convent, and being unable to decipher all that is engraved upon it, conceives the idea of bringing up a son in such fashion that he shall have god-like capacities and be able to make out the inscription. Consequently he marries a carefully selected woman, and when a son is born he takes him away to a remote island, and there by a most elaborate series of deceptions brings him up in the belief that there are no limits to the power of man. On his nineteenth birthday the young man, gifted with extraordinary powers and extraordinary ignorance, and having never seen anyone but his father, whom he believes omnipotent, escapes into the world, and makes a rare sensation.

Mr. Werner Laurie is also shortly publishing Mr. Ranger Gull's new novel "A Gentleman from Portland," which concerns a millionaire philanthropist and a beautiful girl.

"Fishes from Islands of the Philippine Archipelago" is the title of part of Volume XXVII. of the Bulletin of the United States Bureau of Fisheries. It is by Dr. David S. Jordan and R. Earl Richardson. Twelve of the fish described are said to be new to science.

Miss Florence Warden's latest novel is entitled "The Case of Sir Geoffrey," and it is now being published by Mr. John Long. It is described as a tale of mystery, and the plot is constructed on most original lines, which will perplex and baffle the most astute reader of stories of crime.

Messrs. Passmore & Alabaster, 4, Paternoster Buildings, London, send their two popular Almanacks for 1909. Spurgeon's Book Almanack, which has been issued for more than fifty years, contains bright articles by C. H. Spurgeon and others, while the texts have been selected by the Rev. Thos. Spurgeon during his illness. John Ploughman's Sheet Almanack always finds a welcome, with its racy proverbs and words of kindness for man and beast. The publishers also send a copy of C. H. Spurgeon's last published Weekly Sermon, and although they will publish shortly the fifty-fourth yearly volume of the great preacher's discourses, they still have enough manuscripts to issue a fresh sermon for nine or ten years to come. They will gladly send to any reader a specimen copy free on receipt of full address.

A very useful classified list of surplus books at very cheap prices is issued by Day's Library, Ltd., 96, Mount Street, Park Lane. It includes works in every branch of literature, some of which are out of print and scarce.

Messrs. Morgan & Scott, Ltd., find that much interest is being taken in their finely illustrated work by Miss Geraldine Guiness: "Peru: Its Story, People, and Religion." Prominent men of all shades of opinion have written in enthusiastic terms about it.

The Price of The Times and its Management

FOR some time past there have been persistent rumours that the price of The Times is to be reduced to a penny. As this is a matter which affects a great many of our subscribers at home and abroad who buy The Times for customers, we think that they will be glad to know there is no truth whatever in the rumour. No change in price is contemplated.

The quality of paper and type have both been recently greatly improved, and further improvements involving large expenditure are in course of execution.

Another equally baseless rumour is to the effect that Mr. C. Moberly Bell is resigning his position as chief manager of The Times, or that he contemplates such a step. The only things at all likely to sever Mr. Bell's long connection with The Times would be his death or such an illness as would make work impossible—and from such causes for resignation may he, in the one case for many years, and in the other for ever, be exempt.

Edinburgh Book Notes

BY "EDINA"

CHRISTMAS, with all its looked-for possibilities, has come and gone. We leave it behind with a sigh, for it has no longer the delights for us of the good old times. Then it was possible to sell a few nicely bound sets of Dickens, Thackeray, Scott, George Eliot, and the other favourite authors; but we must now be content if we have turned over a sufficient quantity of what a book lover the other day called "Dainty Nothingnesses."

This has been the distinct feature of the Christmas trade in Edinburgh for 1908. Now, I do not mean to say that we ought to boycott the tabloid literature which has become a craze, especially with ladies; but could only a Gulliver be found whose satire would bite into the heart of this mannikinizing age, there would be hope that the Lilliputian ideas of serving out the brains of our greatest literary giants would have an end and a truly noble quest for the Holy Grail of literary endeavour be inspired.

I am sure that all members of the trade whose instincts are for the highest and the best of literature, alike in physical and decorative qualities, feel that we cannot proceed much longer along these paths which have been the fashionable promenade of the would-be bookish public without meeting disaster.

As I look over the shelves of an ordinary bookshop I see plainly who has had to pay for all the cheap reprints of standard writers which came as a deluge with the introduction of the cylinder press. The bookseller has paid high for this public boon; but is he to go on paying toll for an ungrateful public? The problem is before us, and on the manner we meet its solution depends the future well-being of the retailer.

We have to reckon with the things which are, but we must also guess shrewdly the things which are yet to be. At present we have a large cult which has, as its first rule, that its members should be conversant with a thousand and one authors of repute, and these members have to sustain their reputation as lovers of literature—good literature—by swallowing all the pilule nostrums which bear the name of the favourites of culture—so-called. Then, to appease their appetite, they gobble up all the printed trash which issues under the name of fiction. As for history, it must now be dressed up in all the tawdryness of secret intrigue and social scandal. It then forms a favourite entrée. This must be followed with spicy tartlets and icings of dainty hue to gloat our effeminate taste. But what has become of the roast beef and the haggis-fed sons of the pen?

They have not ceased to exist. There is a Carlyle trudging his way to the centre of literary greatness who is not above making his breakfast on a bowlful of oatmeal porridge. Look out for him!

I looked out from my study window and thought I recognised the man in the figure of Lauchlan Maclean Watt, as he hurried up the street; but he has not yet been sickened by the flesh pots of Egyptian days. He shoots straight, he aims high; but he does not follow up the game. He must needs go into the desert awhile. Then shall we see him come forth in his strength, clad in rough homespun it may be, but muscular, full of action, knowing men and things as they really are.

"Auld Scotland wants nae skinking ware that jaugs in luggies." We want something tangible, something robust, something toothsome, something "kyte-riving"—and we mean to have it, too. Behold the hour, and you will see the man! There is a Knox for every reformation, there is a Burns for every heart sensation, there is a Scott for every re-creation, there is a Burton for our confirmation, a Stevenson to ring sweet tones of jubilation.

Few readers of Stevenson appear to be aware that the secret of his style (which was hailed as quite original) is common also to that contemporary of Sir Walter Scott, who was overshadowed by the greater light—John Galt. It was as great a surprise to me (as it was to an audience of American ladies, to whom I had to give an impromptu lecture on the "Beauties of Stevenson") to make this discovery. I began to point out his intense appreciation of contrast, when I recalled a similar trait in the earlier writer; and, referring to the works of Galt, at once descried that Stevenson had made a closer acquaintance with him than had been known to me.

This leads me to observe that there being nothing new under the sun, we may be expecting too much originality from the man who is really the leader of a new literary era. Originality depends on the food and the manner of its digestion. This is really the secret which underlies literary degeneracy—we are suffering from Dyspepsia Literariæ.

Among the contributors to Mr. Eveleigh Nash's new Monthly Magazine will be Rudyard Kipling, Conan Doyle, Anthony Hope, Rider Haggard, Robert Hichens, H. A. Vachell, and Halliwell Sutcliffe.

Durham Booksellers' Centenary

MESSRS. ANDREWS & CO., University publishers and booksellers, Durham, celebrated their one hundredth anniversary on Tuesday, December 29th, by entertaining their staff to dinner.

This old established firm was founded in 1808 by George Andrews the elder, and remained in his hands for many years. At his death the business was carried on by his son and daughter, George and Frances Andrews. Miss Frances Andrews afterwards married Mr. John Henry Le Keux, the famous steel engraver, who then removed his engraving business from London to Durham, and became a partner for upwards of thirty years in the firm of Andrews & Co. Mr. Le Keux was a personal friend of Ruskin, and illustrated several of his works, notably "Modern Painters" and "Stones of Venice." He also taught the art of engraving to the late Mr. George Allen, Ruskin's publisher, and, indeed, a few years before he died presented Mr. Allen with all his engraving tools. He was a great worker, and in his life-time produced many famous plates, among which were the well-known series, "The Oxford Almanack," Architectural works by Parker & Billing, thirty-one plates for a large work on Trondhjem Cathedral for the Norwegian Government, and many others. He was one of the last of the old school of steel engravers, and with him has almost died out this beautiful art, killed by the present day demand for the cheaper and quicker methods of modern photography—a circumstance much to be regretted. A few months before his death in February, 1896, the business was purchased by Mr. Warnford Smart, who was at that time manager. Since then it has grown considerably, necessitating the removal to larger and more convenient premises, and even still further extensions, until at the present day it may truly be considered one of the finest businesses in the North of England.

MR. WARNFORD SMART
Proprietor of Andrews & Co, Durham.

Messrs. Andrews & Co. are the officially appointed publishers and booksellers of the University Calendar and Examination Papers. They are also the publishers for the Surtees Society, and have at various times issued other notable works, among which is Billing's "Antiquities of Durham" already referred to.

Staff Dinner, Messrs. E. J. Arnold & Son, Leeds

THE firm's twenty-third annual dinner to the Heads of Departments and Travellers of this well-known school supply house and publishing firm was held at the Leeds and County Liberal Club on New Year's night. In the absence of the Chairman of the Company, Mr. E. J. Arnold, who was slightly indisposed, the chair and vice-chair were taken respectively by the other two Directors—Mr. George Arnold and Mr. H. Wood. Seventy-three persons sat down to a first-rate repast, and after the loyal toast of "His Majesty the King" had been duly honoured, "The Company" was proposed by Mr. Tranter in an excellent speech, full of quiet points of humour, and responded to by the two Directors. A most enjoyable "Smoker" followed, with Mr. J. Robinson as Chairman, all the items of songs and recitations being provided by the staff. It is impossible to mention all who contributed to a long and excellent programme, but the introductory pianoforte duet by Messrs. Womack and Tinsdale deserves special mention. The humorous singing of "The Mesmerist," followed by "Potts" as an encore, of Mr. J. H. Gilmore (who has been in one department of the firm for 32 years and is now manager of it) literally brought down the house. This "old hand" was followed by several of the "juniors," who entered the firm as boys when they left school, and have now reached positions of importance. Amongst these may be mentioned—Bass songs by Messrs. W. Hornby and J. Tinsdale, and comic songs by Mr. E. Charlton. "The Midshipmite" was excellently given by Mr. C. Wellings, an "old hand," who has been with the firm above 24 years, and Mr. T. Stones, another "old stager," sang "The Irish Emigrant" with much feeling. Many others, who are now on the staff, but have not spent all their business career with the firm, contributed items, which gave much pleasure to those present.

Robert Louis Stevenson

1,500 SETS OF TEN-GUINEA EDITION SOLD BY MESSRS. CASSELL.

IN our issue of December 19th, we mentioned that there were less than 70 sets of the £10 10s. edition of the Pentland "Stevenson" left, out of an edition of fifteen hundred sets. By December 31st, Messrs. Cassell had sold every set, and the price to the public is now 12 guineas. This is not so bad for that much abused party A.D. 1908.

John Walker & Co.'s Annual Dinner at the Hotel Cecil

"THE NEW YEAR would not seem to have properly started, nor the Christmas season to have properly finished, without John Walker & Co.'s Annual Dinner." This remark, made by one of the visitors in his speech on Saturday last, seems to fittingly indicate the characteristics of this eagerly anticipated function. Once more it is our pleasure to chronicle the complete success of this well-known firm in its social, as in its commercial, undertakings. Under the presidency of Mr. John Walker (than whom no more popular or genial Chairman could be imagined), some eighty gentlemen enjoyed a banquet served in the Hotel Cecil's best manner. After the usual loyal toasts had been duly honoured, the Chairman read many congratulatory telegrams from various absent friends, including a "Marconi wireless" from Mr. Whitlock (one of the Directors), who was en route for the United States. The speeches were of the usual hearty spontaneous and eloquent character to which visitors to these banquets have been long accustomed. The toast of "The Firm" was proposed by Dr. Macdonald Brown, and responded to by Mr. Walker, who showed in his speech no trace of pessimism —for the slump in trade as indicated by the Government returns seems to have forgotten to pay an unwelcome visit to Warwick Lane. "Indeed," said Mr. Walker, "we have little to repine over, and much to be thankful for." Mr. John Walker, Junr., gave "The Travellers," and caused much laughter and applause at the deft way in which he described the characteristics of each. Mr. Dixon responded in a speech of great ability and humour, and was ably seconded by Mr. Hess. Mr. Barringer then proposed "The Staff," and after his usual jocular introduction, sincerely thanked them for their continued loyalty and devotion, and in coupling this toast with the name of Mr. Rowe, he alluded to the fine new factory recently erected in Camberwell, and of which Mr. Rowe is the Manager. The response to this was of a sincere and genuine nature, and brought into great prominence the admirable feeling in existence amongst all sections in Farringdon House. In the regretted absence of Mr. Dow, the Chairman called upon Mr. Barringer to propose "The Visitors," which he did in his usual cheery style. The last toast, that of "The Chairman," was proposed by Mr. J. W. Johnston, who spoke of his long business connection with the firm, and mentioned that on his late trip to the States, where he went at the invitation of the American Stationers' Society as a delegate from the London Stationers' Society, he heard the name of Mr. John Walker on every side, and the fact of his friendship with Mr. Walker was an "open sesame" to all desirable quarters. Mr. Walker's response was received with great enthusiasm. The proceedings were further enlivened with music, songs and recitations, contributed by Messrs. Carr Evans, Chutter, Burrows, Storey, Sinclair, Mantell, and others, whose efforts were much appreciated. We must not omit a word of praise to the very elegant and highly original menu card, but what else could one be led to expect from John Walker & Co. but originality and taste? It is worth mentioning too that the menu was printed in English, an innovation which was much appreciated. In short, we must congratulate all concerned on another very successful and enjoyable function, and we feel sure that the expressions of respect and good feeling heard on Saturday night will be re-echoed by everybody who has any business connection with the firm.

Second Annual Dinner of the International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers

As already announced, the second annual dinner of the Association will take place at the Criterion on January 13th. The President (Mr. B. D. Maggs) will take the chair, and among the guests will be Dr. G. K. Fortescue (Keeper of the Printed Books, British Museum), Mr. Barwick (Reading Room, British Museum), and Mr. Herbert Bailey (Editor of The Connoisseur). The Chairman will propose the toasts of "The King" and "The Queen and Royal Family" (with musical honours), and "Our Guests." Mr. Myers will propose the toast of "The Ladies," and Mr. Tregaskis will reply on their behalf. Mr. Wesley will propose the toast of "The Trade Journals." Miss Kathleen Kelly (Mrs. Henry Stevens) will give a sketch under the title of "Songs at the Piano," and there will be songs, humorous and other, by Mr. E. Pontis Lines, Mr. Best, and Mr. Harry King. The evening will, in fact, be fully occupied from start to finish. Tickets (6s. each) may be obtained from Mr. Karslake, 35, Pond Street, Hampstead. Ladies are specially invited to join, as last year. Evening dress is to be optional. It is hoped that many country members will follow the example of Mr. William Downing, of Birmingham, who is coming up, for the second year in succession, specially to attend the dinner.

Cassell & Co.'s Annual Traveller's Luncheon

THE Annual Travellers' Luncheon of Messrs. Cassell was held on December 31st at De Keyser's Hotel, under the chairmanship of Mr. Arthur Spurgeon, the General Manager. The Chairman, in proposing the health of "The Father of the Yard," said that Mr. Farlow Wilson's official connection with the firm terminated with the close of the year after a service extending over more than half a century. During the greater portion of that period he had been manager of the printing department and had rendered true and faithful service. He retired into private life with the hearty goodwill of all his colleagues. A special resolution, engrossed on vellum, was recently passed by the Board of Directors expressing their appreciation of the valuable service Mr. Wilson had rendered to the firm during his long connection with it. They all wished him much health and happiness in the days that yet remain to him. Mr. Farlow Wilson suitably responded. He rejoiced to know that the fortunes of the Yard were now in the hands of young men, who were bent on restoring the firm to its former prosperity, and he had no doubt they would succeed.

The toast of "The House of Cassell" was proposed by Mr. Walter Smith, the Chief Editor, and responded to by Sir Clarence Smith, Chairman of the Directors. In replying to the toast of his health, proposed by Mr. Thomas Young, manager of the Advertisement Department, Mr. Spurgeon said that the year closed hopefully for the business. Although 1908 had been a very trying year, the outlook was full of promise. He congratulated the travellers on the excellent work they had done during the year and he had no doubt they would be still more successful in 1909.

An Amusing Anecdote of Dr. Johnson

A WEST OF ENGLAND subscriber kindly sends us the following anecdote, which he says is told as related by Peter Pindar (Dr. Walcot) in a number of The Bath Chronicle published in 1796. Se non è vero, è ben trovato.

"When Johnson lodged at Kettle Hall in the University of Oxford at a Mr. Thompson's, a cabinet-maker, the maid by an unfortunate mistake brought him one day a chemise of Mrs. Thompson's to put on instead of his shirt. Contemplating on nothing but ramblers, idlers and colossal dictionaries, he shoved his arms and head through into the lady's linen before he discovered his error.

"'Who has cut off the sleeves of my shirt? Who has cut off the sleeves of my shirt?' exclaimed the enraged and hampered moralist with stentorian vociferation, dancing and tugging and foaming for freedom.

"The roar brought up poor, trembling Mrs. Thompson, who, with most consummate delicacy, shutting her two chaste eyes, slipped her hand into the room and delivered her giant guest from his enchanted castle."

Canon Farrar and the Tailor

YEARS afterwards, on the invitation of a friend, I visited Westminster Abbey with a party from a working-man's club in Soho, when we were shown round by Canon Farrar. After the Canon had talked to us about Major André, whose monument is in the south aisle, a little tailor, who was one of the party, whispered to me, "The worthy Dean is very interesting, but not very correct in his 'istory." Later we had tea in the hall of Westminster School, and my friend said a few nice words of thanks to Canon Farrar. Up jumped the little tailor and said, "I 'ad 'oped to 'ave 'ad the pleasure of proposing the 'ealth of the worthy Dean myself; in fact, when Colonel —— began I felt quite nonchalant!"—From "Some Memories of My Spare Time, 1856–1885," by General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Brackenbury, G.C.B., in Blackwood's Magazine.

FONDERIES DE CARACTERES ET LEUR MATÉRIEL dans les Pays-Bas du XV$_e$ au XIXe Siècles.

Notice historique principalement d'après les données de la Collection Typographique de Joh. Enschedé en Zonen à Haarlem.

Par C. ENSCHEDÉ. Imperial 4to., pp. xxxiv and 404, with 519 illustrations. Cloth. £5.

For many years Charles Enschedé, of the house of Joh. Enschedé en Zonen, of Haarlem, where he personally directs the type-foundry, has given himself up to researches in his rich archives. Although he knew of the existence of many curious varieties in his collection of old matrices, he was surprised to discover a mass of material which was valuable as a history of the arts of founding and printing in the Low Countries. He conceived the idea of pnblishing the results of his work, adding to them the necessary commentaries and offering them in a well-arranged volume to the book-collector and the historian. The execution of this project met with great difficulties. One can easily understand the great expense necessary for the type-founding and the preliminary work for printing 372 different examples, of which the matrices date as follows: 6 of the 15th Century, 9 of the 16th, 52 of the 17th and 305 of the 18th. The study of each example brought a crowd of questions which were easier to ask than to answer. It was thus that the work of which the original aim was limited to the typographical collection of the house of Joh. Enschedé en Zonen, acquired a more general character and became more, as the title indicates, a historical notice of the type foundries and their work in the Low Countries from the 15th to the 19th centuries.

"Talks about Old London"

MEMORIES OF CHARLES DICKENS

WHAT an immense circulation the Evening News must have; and it deserves it, for no paper gives the public a better account of everything of any public interest; it is a great power in London and the South of England. Just over two years ago the Evening News hit upon the happy idea of giving every evening, under the heading of "Talks about London," the reminiscences of some living veteran who can tell us of life as it was in London half a century or so ago. People in every walk of London life are giving their experiences, and we hope they will continue to do so. Nowhere else is to be found such information, and we should think there would be a sale for one or two volumes made up from these "Talks," which will be invaluable material for some future Dickens.

In the 108th article of the Series, that for January 2nd, "J. F. W.," a regular playgoer for over half a century, chats about notable people he has met in the literary and theatrical world.

REMEMBERED DR. JOHNSON

"My grandmother, who lived to be ninety-six, formed an interesting link with the past. She knew Dr. Johnson and his famous friend Mrs. Thrale.

"I remember her describing the great lexicographer as 'a most disagreeable man,' while her opinion of Mrs. Thrale was summed up in the words 'a most charming woman with a very bad temper.'

WEEK-ENDS AT GAD'S HILL PLACE

"I was educated at King's College School, where Charles Dickens, the eldest son of the great novelist, was one of my fellow-pupils.

"Occasionally I spent a week-end at Gad's Hill Place, where Dickens at the time was engaged in writing, I believe, 'Martin Chuzzlewit.'

"Dickens made an extraordinary impression on my boyish mind. He seemed to possess a weird power over everyone he met; there was something oddly electrical about him. One felt instinctively that one was in the presence of no ordinary man. To me he was extremely generous in the matter of half-sovereigns.

"A most estimable young man was Sydney Dickens, another son of the novelist. He was a lieutenant in the Navy, and was drowned in the Red Sea.

"He and I spent a Christmas Eve at the Polygraphic Hall, where Wilbaja Frickell, the greatest conjurer of the day, was appearing. The Hall subsequently became Toole's Theatre, and stood on the site now occupied by Charing Cross Hospital.

THE GREAT GLOBE

"In the days of which I speak there was an extraordinary place of entertainment in Leicester Square. It was called 'The Great Globe.'

"It occupied the whole of the space now an enclosed garden. 'The Great Globe' was hollow, and, standing on a platform, the visitor beheld panoramic views of different parts of the world. The present statue of Shakespeare is on the identical spot where the platform stood.

"A map-seller named Wylde was the proprietor of 'The Great Globe.' How he managed to obtain permission to put up such a monstrous thing in the middle of Leicester Square was a mystery, except that he was a Member of Parliament.

"Great have been the changes in theatreland within my recollection. When I was young there were not more than half a dozen theatres in the West End. Now there must be about twenty-five.

"And as theatreland has changed, so have the tastes and habits of the playgoers. The 'gods' no longer sit in their shirt sleeves or bring with them bottled ale, or shy oranges at each other. Their sedateness is wonderful to behold.

"The serious playgoer of to-day is more intellectual than his predecessors; but an element of superficiality pervades the ranks of the younger people. They want only theatrical 'kickshaws.'"

It is always the young who are—young.

Booksellers' Catalogues

AMONG the duties to be discharged by booksellers or their assistants, none perhaps are more important or require more skill, intelligence and experience than those attending the compilation of a catalogue. In this connection one is surprised that no bibliographer sets about to draft a few simple rules for their guidance. Yet the subject is not unworthy of notice. Indeed, experience proves that a carefully written catalogue will bring in more orders more quickly than one in which the bookbuyer has difficulty in ascertaining whether it contains the volume he is hunting for. It may be said that we have catalogue rules in plenty; but these have been written more for the librarian and the specialist than for the bookseller.

Once upon a time it was thought that there was nothing easier than to make a catalogue. All you had to do was to transfer the titles of books to paper, add the prices and dispatch the whole to the printer. But those who are acquainted with the subject realise that Sheridan's joke about "easy writing being damned hard reading," is specially applicable to work of that kind.

The booksellers' cataloguer must determine first of all whether the volume he is about to catalogue should be entered under the subject of which it treats or under its author. This is one of the most difficult questions which it is his duty to answer, and upon his decision rests the usefulness of the catalogue. In this respect a careful, intelligent, and widely-read assistant will be of the utmost service to his employer. He should avoid such general subject headings as Theology, History, Philology, Literary Biography, &c. I have before me a bookseller's catalogue, divided into subjects, one of which is General Literature occupying 71 pages! There is a limit to human endurance even in the task of perusing a catalogue of second-hand books. Imagine for a moment the trouble and waste of time involved in ascertaining what this catalogue contains on, say, Scottish Ballads or Wit and Humour. Yet, although it has a subject-heading Bibliography, I find Growall's "Three Centuries of English Book Trade Bibliography," Madan's "Books in Manuscript," and Macray's "Annals of the Bodleian Library" under General Literature!

This is an easy method of making a catalogue, but it does not commend itself to the bookbuyer. More definite subject-headings are required. The assistant whose duty it is to prepare the catalogue should find out the exact subject of which the book treats, and decide whether or not it is of more importance than the author. Nothing but a wide acquaintance with literature and a careful study of the best bibliographies will enable him to do this. Where there is any doubt a cross reference may save his clients considerable trouble.

Cross references are not used so frequently as they ought to be. A book which might be entered under the subject or under the author should be put under the former with a cross-reference from the latter. Or, in the case of an author, some of whose books should be entered under the subject of which they treat and others under his surname, a cross reference will be very useful. Take, for example, P. G. Hamerton; some of his books would be entered under Art, and a few under Hamerton, P. G. Clearly, then, if a bookseller desires his clients to know what books he has by that author, he must insert after his name in the Art section the entry See also Hamerton, P. G., and after his surname See also Art.

When the cataloguer has decided what form the entry is to take, he will naturally turn his attention to the author's surname. In many cases it will be easily disposed of, but occasionally he will experience some difficulty, and a few hints may not be out of place. As regards the treatment of compound names, librarians do not seem to be in agreement. Mr. J. Henry Quinn says—"In the case of English compound names the best course to adopt is to give the entries under the last name in all cases" (Manual of Library Cataloguing, page 46), while Mr. James Duff Brown, in his "Manual of Practical Bibliography," page 102, writes—"All compound names to be entered under the first word with references from the second or other words." In dealing with compound names stereotyped uniformity is not always to be recommended, but one or other of the foregoing rules should be adopted and rigidly adhered to. Or, better still, the Booksellers' Association might take the matter in hand and fix a rule. More uniformity may be observed in treating surnames with a prefix. All English surnames beginning with a prefix (D', De, Le, Mac, O', Van, &c.) must be entered under such prefix.

There is a difference of opinion regarding the treatment of prefixes to foreign surnames, but whatever rule is adopted should be conscientiously observed.

In some catalogues the books are over-described, while in others they are under-described. It must be remembered that a catalogue of second-hand books is not and ought not to be a bibliography. The labour properly expended on the latter would be useless on the former. A bookseller should describe his stock briefly, clearly and accurately, having in view that other matters invaluable to the literary student and the bibliophile are quite out of place in his catalogue. The object of the catalogue is to sell the books and to sell them by fair and intelligent representations. Any special description is best given in a separate note set in smaller type. In this note it may be mentioned whether there is a bookplate.

When writing to Advertisers please mention the "P.C."

Booksellers differ to some extent in regard to the order in which they enumerate the features of their books, and as regards this point it is inadvisable to lay down any hard and fast rule. Of course, the number of the item or lot will come first, and be followed either by the subject or the surname of the author with his Christian name or the initials of it. The other particulars might be given thus:—(1) Full or condensed title of the book; (2) number of volumes if more than one; (3) whether maps, illustrations or other insets; (4) style of binding; (5) condition of the book (unless it is intimated on the title-page that all books are in "good, sound, clean condition"); (6) the size; (7) the price; (8) place of publication (excluding London, which is generally understood); (9) the date.

The front or title-page of the catalogue ought to give a brief description of the contents of the publication. Some bookbuyers do not go beyond the title-page, and if it does not suggest anything in their line they destroy the whole catalogue. A fair amount of skill and ingenuity can be displayed in the composition of the title-page. Briefly, it should note all the important subjects and authors mentioned in the catalogue, and be followed with particulars of the method employed in its compilation.

Catalogue readers are usually busy men who have acquired the habit of skimming over pages with lightning rapidity, and the booksellers would do well to have some uniform method of cataloguing their books.

Australia Bombards U.S. Battleship Fleet with Post Cards

AUSTRALIA'S enthusiasm over the recent visit of the United States battleship fleet broke forth in many ways, including elaborate post cards commemorating the event.

Many of the postcards show careful and ingenious designs, in which the intertwined American and Australian flags are the central feature. There are also coloured representations of the battleships, pictures of Uncle Sam, with verses and welcoming mottoes. Two of them bear the words and music of "Hail Columbia" and "Yankee Doodle," and one of the most elaborate has the following verse:

> Welcome, brave kinsmen
> From o'er the broad ocean,
> Hearts warm with friendship
> Extend the glad hand.
> Speaking the tongue of your > Own mother country,
> Brothers, not strangers,
> You'll find in our land.

Others have legends such as "Good wishes from the land of the Golden Fleece to the Stars and Stripes," "Australia Greets America," &c.

Sir Walter Scott and Blackwood

WRITING from Edinburgh to Mrs. Clephane, in 1818, Scott says:—

"Our principal amusement here is Blackwood's Magazine, which is very clever, very rash, very satirical, and, what is rather uncommon nowadays when such superlatives are going in—very aristocratical and Pittite. The conductors are John Wilson and John Gibson Lockhart. The former, well known by his poems, is very clever but somewhat whimsical. Lockhart is a very clever fellow, well informed in ancient and modern lore, has very good manners, and is, I think, likely to make a very distinguished figure in society. They have made themselves hated, but at the same time feared, by the Edinburgh Whigs, who are so much accustomed to have all the satire and fun their own way that they stare a little at finding their own batteries occupied and turned against them. I hate personal satire myself—it is a clumsy weapon and seldom fails to recoil on those who use it. But yet those who have set the example in such a kind of warfare are not entitled to consider themselves as ill-used when met by sharpshooters of their own description."

—From "Some Letters of Sir Walter Scott," in Blackwood's Magazine, the writer of which makes it clear that the real Editor of the magazine was always William Blackwood.

Dr. W. Robertson Nicoll on "The Press"

THE REV. W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, LL.D., Editor of The British Weekly, is to give an address on "The Press, Past and Future," at the Conversazione of the Edinburgh and District Branch of the Newsagents', Booksellers' and Stationers' National Union, to be held on January 22nd, in the Edinburgh Café, 70, Princes Street, Edinburgh, when Mr. J. B. Fairgrieve, President of the Branch, will preside. We intended to have added somewhere in the above sentence that Dr. Nicoll must be a very clever man if he can find anything new to say on that subject, but the length of the title of the Union took our breath away. Fortunately the doctor is a very clever man, and a very popular and greatly respected one also, which is of more importance still. We understand that the Lord Provost and the Hon. Lord Guthrie have promised to be present. A good musical programme has been arranged, and among the speakers will be Mr. William Ward, of London.

A Patent Bore Constrictor

AN American Syndicate is to bring out a new patent wireless bore constrictor for use in legislative assemblies, at public meetings, in churches, &c. All the audience has to do is to look at a dial and wish, and as soon as the wishes that a speaker should stop exceed in number those for his going on, he automatically absquatulates. It is expected that the average duration of human life will be considerably increased.

Men of the Covenant.*

A BRIEF FOR THE DOGGED FIGHTERS FOR FREEDOM IN CHURCH AND STATE

IT is always pleasant to find a worthy book has passed into a second edition, and Dr. Alexander Smellie's "Men of the Covenant," is a very worthy book. It is also always a pleasant thing to find an author writing thus of his publisher:—

> "I am so deep in my publisher's debt that I can discover no language that will properly express my obligation; it was he who conceived this Edition de Luxe, in which you see on Japanese vellum the presentments of men and women who wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth."

In his Preface to the first edition, dated November, 1903, Dr. Smellie says with reference to his championship of the cause of the Covenanters that he only wishes he had the "great language and shining gifts" of Mr. Lang, Mr. Mathieson, and Mr. Millar, who have "done so much to glorify those who upheld the Royal prerogative and the Episcopal Rule." But if those "dogged fighters for freedom in Church and State," whose biographies are given more or less fully in these handsome volumes, could have any say in the matter, they would cry "God be praised" that the historian of their lives and "martyrdoms" are not those but this. Although an enthusiast for the Men of the Covenant, believing them to have been "incontestably right," Dr. Smellie hopes he has never been conspicuously unfair to their opponents. It is a qualification which may or may not be accepted; of course, all his martyrs are on one side, and if their cause had triumphed the boot which pinched so terribly might have been on the other foot.

It is incontestable that the Doctor has written a most interesting work—where possible he lets his men and women speak for themselves, and that, as Boswell discovered, is the secret of a living biography. There are many delightful touches, not a little quiet humour, but the burden of the story is of tragical parting and bloody death met dauntlessly and welcomed as the gateway of the glorious life. It is well that the history of such men and women should be written by one who, like them, has no doubts.

The excellent illustrations are in a style in admirable keeping with the nature of the work—nothing delicate or cavalier. Stern black and white uncompromising cuts—in which you can trace every hair in Mr. Scott Rankin's heads, every stone in Miss Pike's Kirks.

Book Frauds

THE thanks of the whole trade are due to "The Kingsgate Press" for its prosecution of Frank Parkinson, a clerk, who obtained books by fraud, by writing letters in the names of "The Hon. R. Gort" and "The Rev. J. Drysmere of the connection," and others. Parkinson, it appears, has for some time been in the habit of using various addresses (chiefly empty houses) in different parts of London, ordering copies of new books from booksellers and not paying for them, and it is entirely due to the smartness of the chief lady assistant at "The Kingsgate Press" that his operations have been suspended. He made a passionate appeal for mercy when charged at the Clerkenwell Sessions, and pleaded to be dealt with under the First Offenders' Act. When Parkinson was brought up for sentence on Wednesday last (says The Daily Mail) Mr. McCall, K.C., went into the witness box to support a plea for clemency.

At the last Sessions Parkinson pleaded that he had found it difficult to get work, and what he had done had been done to provide the bare necessities of life for his wife and their child. "I have already suffered," he urged, "the terrible pain of mental torture and punishment. I beseech you to give me a chance of social resuscitation."

Mr. McCall said that he had known Parkinson for fifteen or sixteen years, and had had the highest opinion of his integrity and honesty. He would try to find him work.

Mr. Wallace, K.C., the Chairman, begged Parkinson to make the best use of a fresh opportunity he would have by being bound over under the Probation Act. One of the conditions would be that he was not to enter a public-house for six months.

R. E. King & Co.

RICHARD EDWARD KING (of 84A, Stapleton Road, Tooting, and 4, Eagle Street, Holborn), appeared under remand at Bow Street on Tuesday, January 5th, and was further remanded till next Tuesday, January 12th.

Mr. A. W. Holt, of 8, Vincent Road, Croydon, was called and gave evidence that he supplied a set of the Encyclopædia Britannica to King on November 16th, 1908, for which King agreed to pay £15. Mr. H. J. Rimmell, Bookseller, of 53, Shaftesbury Avenue, was called and said that he purchased the books and case on November 26th, 1908, from the prisoner under the name of M. Lewis, 84A, Stapleton Road, Tooting. Mr. Holt received no payment.

Mr. Allison, of Bridgwater, who supplied a set of Dickens' works to King in December, 1907, had never received any payment. Mr. Fairburn, Chemist, Northallerton, sent on September 2nd, 1908, a set of the Encyclopædia Britannica, for which King agreed to pay £16. He subsequently took out a summons in the County Court, but could get no satisfaction.

Mr. Crompton, of Eastbourne, was called and gave evidence that he supplied King on October 26th, 1908, with a set of The International Library, for which he agreed to pay £3. Mr. Crompton identified his set of books as being those sold to Messrs. Neville & George, of South Kensington, by the prisoner under the name of M. Lewis, for £1 10s.

Mr. Batten, of Portsmouth, was called and said that he supplied a set of Dickens' works on October 16th last, which he at first agreed to sell to King for £1 15s., but finding that he could not get payment, subsequently agreed to take £1 2s. Mr. J. Westell, of 106, Charing Cross Road, stated that he purchased the set of Dickens on October 22nd for 17s. 6d. from the prisoner under the name of M. Lewis, 84A, Stapleton Road, Tooting, London, S.W.

Mr. Appleton, of Colchester, gave evidence that he supplied King with 8 vols. of Harmsworth's Educator on November 5th, for which he had received no payment.

Mr. Rimmell and Mr. Westell stated that the Encyclopædia Britannica at the present time was not worth more than £7 or £9 to the trade for subsequent disposal; and that the Dickens was not worth more than about 17s. 6d., and the International Library, £1 10s. If higher prices than these were given it would be almost impossible to dispose of them at a profit. Neither of these gentlemen knew of Messrs. R. E. King & Co., as Wholesale Booksellers at 4, Eagle Street, Holborn.

The late Mrs. Cashel Hoey

ALL who knew that charming lady, the late Mrs. Cashel Hoey (who was well known to many publishers and editors), should see a very kindly note in Truth of December 30th, 1908, about that accomplished lady. Here is an extract from it :—

"Her culture was wide. She had studied, read, thought much, mixed with first-rate people, seen and felt vividly the ups and downs of life, and came through the latter the stronger in heart and mind and the keener in her peculiar wit for the experience. Always unaffected and practical, I think she would with pleasure have darned stockings for the universe. There could be no more cheerful worker with her pen, or with her needle."

Jack's Serial Publications

PART V. of "The National Gallery," 100 plates in colour, edited by Paul S. Konody, M. W. Brockwell, and F. W. Lippmann, just published (T. C. & E. C. Jack : London and Edinburgh), contains reproductions in colour of the following pictures :—"The Annunciation," by Carlo Crivelli ; "Christ's Agony in the Garden," by Giovanni Bellini ; "Portrait of the Doge Leonardo Loredano" by Bellini ; "A Family Group," by Lorenzo Lotto ; "The Holy Family," Titian. There are full biographical notes and descriptions of the paintings. "Beautiful Flowers," Part 6, contains some excellent coloured plates of many flowers, with complete descriptions and hints upon their cultivation. Part 7 of "Wild Beasts of the World" contains coloured plates of the Brown Bear, the Sloth Bear, Californian Sea Lions, Walruses, and Common Seals, with full and interesting descriptions.

"The Country Home"

THE January issue of The Country Home (Constable & Co., Ltd.) contains, in addition to many interesting articles, the following :—A Dorset Manor House, by M. Adeline Cooke ; The Game of Football, by Mary S. Campion ; Garden Walks and Edgings ; The Wild Duck, by Frances Pitt ; Part 2 of Hints on Chrysanthemum Culture, by F. W. S. Blyth ; Part 5 of H. B. M. Buchanan's How to Work a Small Holding at a Living Profit ; Lightning Conductors, by John F. Davie ; Some Pretender Glasses, by Egan Mew. The Country Home is fully illustrated with remarkably clear reproductions from excellent photographs, and the first volume, May—October, 1908, bound in neat green cloth would make an excellent volume for presentation.

Good Book Business in America

WE are glad to see from the New York Publishers' Weekly that last year was a "surprisingly good one" for the book trade, and this year promises to be even better.

R.A. Winter Exhibition

MESSRS. VIRTUE & Co. have just published a catalogue to the pictures in the Royal Academy Winter Exhibition. It is a quarto volume, well printed and produced, and contains 150 illustrations, in addition to the complete list of pictures.

The high-class production of The Art Journal is the pride of Messrs. Virtue, and this illustrated catalogue is just as nicely got up. A special memoir of the late George McCulloch adds considerably to its value. To attempt to make a selection of the best pictures is impossible when we are confronted with such an array of talent as Lord Leighton, Sir J. E. Millais, J. McNeill Whistler, J. W. Waterhouse, Hy. Moore, Sir W. Q. Orchardson, J. McWhirter, &c.

A New 25=Guinea Work on Dutch Art

MESSRS. SCHELTEMA & HOLKEMA, the well-known publishers and booksellers of Amsterdam, are publishing a fine work with photogravure reproductions of all the known paintings of

with biographical and descriptive text, by Dr. C. Hofstede de Groot. The forty-two photogravures are very fine, and range in size from 50 by 40 centimetres down. The page of text is exceedingly handsome, but the size is enormous, 26 by 20 inches. With reference to the work the publishers say :—

The Editor of PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR.

Dear Sir,—By the same mail we have forwarded to your address the prospectus of our publication, entitled "Jan Vermeer of Delft and Carel Fabritius."

We commend this prospectus and the accompanying photogravure to your kind attention and consideration.

You will observe that this work is indispensable for art critics, connoisseurs, painters, amateurs, and collectors of old Dutch art. It contains the reproductions of all the known works of these masters, whose art calls forth constantly increasing interest, and the reproductions are so excellently executed that their works can be studied without seeing the originals. The methods of painting, the entire treatment of subjects, how the models posed for the portraits, &c., all this can be learnt from these photogravures. This is of the greatest importance for people who study the works of old Dutch painters, as there is not the slightest doubt that there are more paintings by these masters still extant.

We hope you may find this of so much importance for your readers that you will notice the work. The portfolio contains till yet only a text in Dutch or German language, but we shall at once print an English text as soon as we meet with some interest on the side of the English people. It is our intention to continue to complete this work. As soon as a picture of these masters is discovered, we do our utmost to have it reproduced and publish it in photogravure. Recently Dr. Hofstede de Groot, who is now in America, wrote us that he had discovered another unknown picture of Vermeer. We are going to have it reproduced, and will publish it as a continuation on the work. Never of any painter has been published such a complete work containing reproductions of all his work, and in this size and quality.—Yours faithfully,

SCHELTEMA & HOLKEMA,

Amsterdam.

Suffolk Bookseller's Strange Adventures

HARRY EDWARD HARMER, 53, respectably dressed, described as a bookseller and stationer, of New Market Place, Beccles, Suffolk, was charged with begging in High Holborn on Wednesday evening, December 30th.

After Police-Constable 374 E had described how he saw the defendant accosting two gentlemen, and then entering a shop and asking for twopence towards the cost of a night's lodging, the defendant essayed to make a statement but broke down and sobbed bitterly.

Mr. Arthur Martin, the mendicity officer, said the prisoner told him he left Beccles on business on December 7th, having arranged that his wife should join him in London two days later. He did not meet her—he could not explain the reason—and since then he had been wandering aimlessly about the country, one day finding himself at Reading. During the last few nights he slept on the Embankment. He had two shops at Beccles.

Inspector Caire added that when the prisoner was brought to the station he appeared to have lost his memory. Next morning he told a story similar to that related by the mendicity officer. He added that he forgot all about the business which brought him to London, and also the appointment with his wife.

By the magistrate's direction the police telephoned to Beccles and ascertained that the prisoner's wife was, in consequence of the message, on her way to London.

Subsequently a friend of the defendant's, an accountant, practising at Covent Garden, saw the magistrate in his private room, and undertook to accompany the defendant back to his home.

On this understanding Mr. Harmer was discharged.—Daily Mail, January 1st.

Letters to the Editor

THE POST FREE NET BOOK QUESTION AND THE COLONIES

DEAR SIR,—We have noticed that for some time past the question has been raised in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR as to the supply of net books post free. We sincerely hope that the result of this agitation will be the means of stopping net books being supplied post free. We should like to bring to your notice how this question affects booksellers in the Colonies, by mentioning to you a case in point which came before us recently. A customer of ours objects to our enhancing the net published price of books. You probably know that it is the rule throughout almost all British Colonies to advance the price by about 20 per cent., and this is not at all excessive when the heavy cost of freight and shipping charges is taken into consideration. Our customer, who, by the way, is a medical man, told us that there is a certain firm in Edinburgh, whose name we shall not mention, who has been for some time supplying him with medical books at the net published price, post free. This in our opinion is a direct contravention to the Net Book Agreement, so that the question not only affects booksellers in England, but in the Colonies as well. We sincerely hope that this matter will be seriously taken up by the Publishers' Association, and that an agreement will soon be arrived at which will prevent this sort of thing continuing any longer.

We remain, Yours faithfully,

J. C. JUTA & Co.

Cape Town.

December 16th, 1908.

[It is an unfortunate fact that both booksellers and publishers are divided on this question. Our view, as we have said from the very first, is that if this sending of net books post free becomes general, it will destroy the net book system. To give a customer 4d. in postage is worse than giving him 3d. discount. Unfortunately, again, there are booksellers and publishers who do not believe in the net book system, and would rejoice to see the wretched discount system again predominant, fortunately they are not at present more than a small minority, but unless the spirit, as well as the letter of the Net Book Agreement is adhered to firmly and loyally, their ranks will soon grow.—ED. P.C.]

CHARGING EXTRA FOR NET BOOKS

DEAR SIR,—As one of the earliest and staunchest supporters of the net system, I wish to draw your attention to a practice of some retailers which tends to bring it into discredit with the public, and thereby to seriously jeopardise it. I refer to the practice of making a supplementary charge "for collection."

Being retailer as well as publisher, I quite appreciate the fact that the margin of profit on a net book—especially a low priced one—is very small, but still I would urge that in the interests of the system it is imperative to do nothing to increase the antagonism felt by a not inconsiderable portion of the book-buying world towards it. As is well known, many buyers feel a permanent resentment at having to pay a "marked" price; it seems to them they are actually defrauded if they do not get some reduction. This is a standing trait of the buyer's psychology; it has got to be put up with, but there is no sense in borrowing trouble by clapping on supplementary charges.—Faithfully yours,

DAVID NUTT.

57–59, Long Acre, W.C.

[It was a little remarkable that the next letter in our mail after Messrs. Juta's, complaining of postage being allowed to private customers on net books, was this one from Mr. David Nutt complaining of booksellers making an extra charge for supplying net books because the trade allowance is so small; and yet other booksellers can collect and pay postage! —ED. P.C.]

THE LIBRARY ENCYCLOPÆDIA

DEAR SIR,—It is believed that library practice is now sufficiently developed to warrant the issue of a comprehensive work of reference on the subject. As publishers have refused to accept the risk of so large a nature in such a limited field, it is necessary to issue the work by subscription. The volume will be demy 8vo., containing approximately 700 pages, and will be illustrated wherever it is considered necessary. Only the foremost authorities will be engaged to write on their various subjects, so that the book will be undoubtedly the most authoritative and up-to-date. Obviously the expenses in connection with a work of this size, and of so comprehensive a nature, will be very heavy, and it has been necessary to fix the price at 30s. This price will be increased should the volume be offered for sale after publication, to non-subscribers, to 40s. If the number of subscribers is not large enough to warrant the publication, the work will not be proceeded with.—Yours faithfully, (Signed) ALEX. J. PHILIP.

Public Library, Gravesend.

Obituary

WE regret to announce the death of Miss Charlotte Low, which took place at her residence in Queen's Road, Tunbridge Wells, on December 31st. The deceased lady was the last surviving child of the late Mr. Sampson Low, Sen., and though more or less an invalid for many years, she nearly attained the age of 78 years. The deceased took a great interest in all charitable objects and devoted her time and energies so far as possible for the benefit of others, and was much loved and esteemed by all who knew her.

Trade Notes

FOLLOWING the announcement a few months ago, that the old-established bookbinding business of Messrs. Smith Brothers, of 1–9, Ivy Lane, E.C., had been acquired by Messrs. A. Straker & Son, they now inform us that it has been decided to incorporate the two names and the style of the firm will in future be—

A. STRAKER & SON, SMITH BROS., LTD.

To prevent confusion with firms of similar name they state that they are wholesale bookbinders only, and in no way connected with the printing and stationery trade.

Mr. A. H. Stockwell of 6 and 7, Creed Lane, E.C., has moved to new premises at 29, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

Messrs. Duckworth & Co. have arranged for Mr. W. B. Akerman to represent them in the country in conjunction with Messrs. Chapman & Hall

Notices of Books

From Messrs. George Allen & Sons.—"The Love Family," by Mrs. Spielmann, with fifty drawings (twelve in colour) by Carton Moore-Park. The story of the doings of Mr. and Mrs. Love and their young folk, wherein we view Cupid's machinations at close quarters and his effect upon the future of Angela and Sir Valentine. The drawings are of unequal merit; how delightful, for instance, the one showing Cupid engaged in drying himself after his rose-water tub, and how unsatisfactory the figure of Sir Valentine as he lies listening to Angela playing upon the harp! The letterpress forms a pleasant kind of running commentary to the fifty drawings, and the get-up of the little book is of suitable daintiness.

From the Same.—"Cannes and Its Surroundings," illustrated and described by Amy M. Benecke. It is not often that the practical and the picturesque are so successfully combined as in this volume. The illustrations are things of real beauty, the coloured plates showing up delightfully against their background of coarse dark paper, and yet the book is a mine of useful information made easy of access by a good index and marginal headings. Visitors to Cannes will find it a vade mecum, and motorists may find hints about roads and distances, &c.

From the Same.—"The Varying Year," by the Right Hon. George W. E. Russell. This garrulous and scrappy book is certainly not what we expected from Mr. George Russell. It seems a curiously purposeless string of small talk ranging over a wide field (Oxford life, the London Season, Motoring, Schoolboys, Bishop Wilberforce, Matthew Arnold, Cricket Matches, the Franco-British Exhibition, &c.), and divided under the headings of the months of the year. Remarks upon the weather are a leading feature. For instance, we are told that the effect of March is that "the biliary ducts have righted themselves and the air, soft as butter, soothes our bronchial tubes." Mr. Russell proclaims himself a Londoner of Londoners, and whilst admitting that town dwellers eat too much and take too little exercise, he believes that Dulness is the avenging angel of Rural life. Well!

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—"English Figure Skating," by E. F. Benson; with illustrations. "There are, so we are accustomed to think, but two edges to a skate, and since, whether proceeding backwards or forwards, we can in some sort of fashion turn from any one edge to any other, revolving either to the right or to the left (for we do not see how we can revolve in any third way), we should be disposed to say that the possible limit of turns has been reached. The design, therefore, of this treatise is to put down all that has been ascertained hitherto about the possibilities attaching to the skate when trodden on and, more or less, controlled by a sktaer who performs in what is known as the English style." This paragraph, taken from the Introduction, adequately describes this up-to-date manual on ice figure skating, designed for the beginner and also to help the skater even when he is well on the road to becoming a first-class performer by Mr. E. F. Benson, member of the Skating Club and National Skating Association (First Class), and illustrated with twenty prints from photographs taken by Mrs. Aubrey le Blond. We cannot help thinking that many who have become enthusiasts owing to the booming of roller skating and the great number of rinks which have been opened during the last year or two will read Mr. Benson's book with interest although treating of a somewhat different subject, and the first lengthy frost will find them eagerly practising forward and back edges on the nearest stretch of ice. An index would be a very welcome addition to this capital manual.

From Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd.—"Sir Sleep-Awake and His Brothers," by Mr. G. J. Whitham. This is an adventure tale of the time of the Great Crusade. Sir Sleep-Awake Dormer and his brother, owners of great estates and treasure quarrel through misunderstandings, so the one departs on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, while the other fights the Moors in Spain. The story of how they are sought for through all sorts of dangers and difficulties till they finally meet and are reconciled is told with a briskness and reality which will delight the boyish reader. There are a few good illustrations by N. Tenison. Such books are a useful handmaid to history.

From Messrs. Chatto & Windus.—"From Island to Empire," by John S. C. Bridge. With Introduction by Admiral Sir Cyprian A. G. Bridge, G.C.B. A short history of the expansion of England by force of arms, beginning with the Elizabethan seamen and the struggle with Spain, and concluding with an account of the Boer War. The style is admirable, being dignified, lucid and entertaining. There are several maps and plans, and a Table of the British Empire giving the names of all English colonies and possessions with the dates and method of acquisition.

From the Same.—"Joyce Pleasantry," by George R. Sims. A volume of short stories dealing with the life of the middle and lower classes in the direct and forcible style with which the name of Mr. Sims has for so long been associated. The author has a fecund fancy, and his method is vivid and life-like. His work has introduced him to strange scenes and stories, and those which go to form the present collection are written from actual intimacy with the phases of life described.

From the Same.—"The Little Flowers of St. Francis of Assisi." Translated from the Italian by T. W. Arnold, M.A., with a Note by Dr. Guido Biagi. Both printer, binder and publisher have dealt generously with this beautiful edition of a great classic. The type is particularly choice, the margins wide, and the illustrations well chosen and excellently reproduced. The cover design in red and gold is a replica of a binding embodying the arms of St. Francis, by Aldus Manutius of Venice, date circa 1500. Dr. Biagi's sympathetic note is both interesting and scholarly.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—"A Little Summer at Assisi," by Clemence North. The output of what may be called Franciscan literature shows no signs of diminishing. The present slim little volume is unambitious in its form and tells of the effect upon the characters of three English maidens of a summer spent in the Umbrian town of Saint Francis. They go to La Verna, to the Carceri, to San Damiano—who that has trodden the Saint's path can ever forget it!—and though it is all very slight and rather décousu it is to the disciple so understandable, evoking the very emotions which he has himself felt in similar places. We are even prepared for the "Brother Train" in which they travel Northward.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—"Some African Highways," by Caroline Kirkland. With Introduction by Lieut.-General Baden-Powell. Miss Kirkland has all the intuition and vivacity of a woman, combined with the adventurous spirit and strength of purpose of a man. She started from Naples en route for Mombasa three years ago, and travelled through Uganda and the Transvaal in company with her mother and an Italian maid. Miss Kirkland, who is an American lady, contributed an account of her adventures and observations to the Chicago Tribune, and these are embodied in the present volume. The book is bright and attractive with its yellow cover, admirable pictures, and pleasant, gossipy style.

From the Same.—"God's Message through Modern Doubt," by theRev. E. Aldom French, is the work of one who has evidently felt to the full all the modern difficulties in the way of orthodox Christian belief, and yet has retaned his faith. He has passed through his Slough of Despond and surmounted his Hill of Difficulty, and can hold out a hand to guide others to the Land of Beulah. Though apparently originally composed as sermons, the wide literary knowledge and cogent argumentation of the book make it, perhaps, even better suited for personal enlightenment and private meditation; and it may well prove helpful to the Christian to hold fast to his belief in the Bible, in miracles, and in immortality in spite of the higher criticism, in spite even of such deeper problems as the waste and suffering of life.

From the Same.—"The Second Edition of Edward FitzGerald's Rubáiyát of 'Omar Khayyám.'" Edited by Edward Heron-Allen. Mr. Edward Heron-Allen has for some years been well known as a linguist of considerable attainments, and as a distinguished student of Eastern life and literature. Few Englishmen are so well fitted as he to undertake the task of writing lengthy notes on FitzGerald's wonderful translation of the Persian poet. Each quatrain is printed on a separate page, and is succeeded by scholarly notes revealing vast reading and much cultured taste. The Introduction embodies a particularly interesting letter from Professor Cowell.

Messrs. Gay & Hancock have issued a third edition of that popular book, "Pushing to the Front, or Success under Difficulties," by Orison Swett Marden. Perhaps no book since the appearance of Smiles' "Self-Help" has contained more wisdom upon the art of "getting on."

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton send "The Minister's Diary for 1909," a handy pocket-book for the use of clergy and ministers, now in its thirty-third year of publication, containing besides a diary pages for special services, visitations and other pastoral engagements. We note that while the Sunday lessons are those of the Church of England, the list of religious societies excludes all but those of Nonconformists. It might be better to issue the diary in two forms—one for Church clergy, the other for Free Church ministers—and this we understand Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton intend to do in future years.

From Messrs. Jarrold & Sons.—"The Little Town in the Valley," by Constance Nevill. A pleasant account, illustrated from photographs, of a little town which we confess we have been unable to identify. It has a castle, an ancient church, an old-world street of stone-built houses, a quiet river, a town hall. Soldiers are quartered near. Perhaps our readers will be cleverer than we are and discover where it lies. Its pages breathe a simple piety which is probably the frame of mind generally induced by a long residence in just such a little town.

From Mr. John Lane.—"The Well of Saint Clare," by Anatole France. A translation by Alfred Allinson. Those who are unable to read in the original the delightful series of stories which are grouped under the name of the Well near Sienna, where the author met the Reverend Father Doni, cannot do better than buy this excellent translation. We say "buy" advisedly, for this is the kind of book one returns to again and again. It is all such wonderfully good reading, bearing the impress of the master hand, so full of laughter and of tears, of pathos and of deep insight. This series of translations of the works of Anatole France, which is being issued by Mr. Lane, is marked by a thoroughness and finish which is deserving of all praise.

From Mr. Eneas Mackay Stirling.—"The Edinburgh Periodical Press," by W. J. Couper, M.A. Vol. 2. Mr. Couper's labour of love is now completed; his two scholarly volumes stand as a record of his patient industry, and will prove serviceable to students for the purposes of reference. The second volume consists entirely of a bibliographical account of the newspapers, journals and magazines issued in Edinburgh from 1711 to 1800. The work has been prepared with thoroughness, and is, we believe, quite reliable.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. send us "William Morris," by Alfred Noyes, one of their "English Men of Letters" Series. William Morris was a many-sided man: painter, printer, manufacturer, squire, Socialist, but above and throughout all, a poet. It is therefore in the fitness of things that his life should be written by Mr. Noyes, himself a poet of no mean powers and promise. This eminently readable little memoir is no mere compendium of previous records, but a first-hand appreciation of one artist by another, and is worthy of both.

From Messrs. Marshall Bros.—"Glimpses of Indian Life," by Miss Henrietta S. Streatfield, is a record of two and a half years' sojourn among the Protestant missions of India. Miss Streatfield modestly disclaims any literary merit, but her book has the interest which always belongs to the faithful and simple narrative of things actually seen. She describes with picturesqueness the strange life and scenery of the East, and her enthusiastic account of the great evangelical work now being wrought among the women of India cannot but help to awaken among her readers a deeper interest in the work of foreign missions. There are some excellent illustrations from photographs taken specially for the book.

From the Same.—"Life Radiant," by Sophia M. Nugent, is an account of the life of the Rev. Francis Paynter, for thirty-six years Rector of Stoke, near Guildford. Mr. Paynter was a man whose whole life was, in the words of St. Paul, "sanctified and meet for the Master's use and prepared unto every good work," and Miss Nugent's loving and faithful record of it may well serve, as she hopes, to inspire the reader to follow in his footsteps. The book is handsomely got up with photographic illustrations.

From Mr. Elkin Mathews.—"Man and Maid," by Arthur Gray. It would be easy to laugh at this strange little book, with its amazing avalanche of capital letters (Mr. Gray has a quite unreasonable belief in their impressiveness), did we not so heartily agree with the subject matter—"The Cult of the Child," so our author calls it; the insistence upon the sacred rights, more especially of the unborn child. So much study is devoted to the favourable development of the child after birth, and so little to the equally important subject of heredity and ante-natal conditions. Whilst designed chiefly for men's ears, this call for serious thought upon a serious subject should appeal equally to women. When marriage comes to be based upon a feeling of the deep responsibility of parenthood, we may look for the arrival of the Superman.

From the Same.—"Pan Worship and Other Poems," by Eleanor Farjeon. There is a good deal of poetic vagueness about Miss Farjeon's work, but amid more ambitious, and to us less attractive, pieces we light upon such a gem as "Dream Ships," on page 37, and immediately acknowledge that here is the true note of poesy. The book is worth buying for this alone, but there are other poems of a like grace and beauty. If Miss Farjeon will ruthlessly avoid too unstudied a form of utterance and will remember that what comes easiest to her pen may not be the best she can give us, then she should undoubtedly make her mark.

From Messrs. A. W. Penrose & Co., Ltd.—"Penrose's Pictorial Annual." This is Volume XIV., 1908–9, of "The Process Year Book," edited by William Gamble. This work will be found very useful by all who are interested in the production of illustration by any of the many mechanical processes. There are over fifty contributions, for the most part by experts, and more than three hundred and fifty specimens of process work in black and white, in tint and in colour. Many of the coloured illustrations are screamingly vulgar; fortunately the majority are at least in good taste, and many are exquisite. A work like this has to be representative of art as it finds it. The cover design is simply blinding.

From Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd.—"The First George in Hanover and England," by Lewis Melville. 2 vols. It is with George Lewis the man rather than George I. the King that this voluminous and handsome work is concerned, and a great part of it is devoted to a detailed account of those fifty-four years of his life that were spent at Hanover—a subject not before treated at length by any English writer. In Mr. Lewis Melville's opinion, neither the character nor the conduct of George I. have received justice at the hands of English historians, and a successful attempt is here made to remove the several misunderstandings generally accepted without question in this country. A great deal of fresh and most important material is presented to the English reader in a style not only readable but also fascinating. The character of the King is analysed with no small amount of psychological insight; and the life of the Court, with its jealousies and intrigues, is dealt with in a vivid and life-like manner. Mr. Melville has, indeed, written a work of much more than passing interest, for the volumes will take a permanent place in the history of Hanover and England. By the kindness of the Duke of Cumberland and Count Alexander von Kielmansegg many interesting portraits and sketches are included.

From the Same.—"The Life of Sir Isaac Pitman, by Alfred Baker. This is one of the most interesting biographies that has come under our notice for some time. It is the first authoritative memoir of the inventor of phonography, and Mr. Baker has had full access to family papers. Sir Isaac's name is, of course, famous in connection with his system of shorthand. Originally thought out early in the thirties, it was embodied in 1837 in a small book, entitled "Stenographic Sound-Hand," in 1842 the first number of The Phonographic Journal appeared, and by degrees the system was perfected, the improvements and additions lasting over a long period of years. It is impossible to say how deep an influence upon national life in nearly every department shorthand has exercised. But quite apart from this subject, which Sir Isaac made peculiarly his own, the record of his strenuous life which covers practically the whole Victorian era (1813–1897) is of great interest. He was a many-sided man, a man of deep religious feeling, and endowed with many noble qualities, and Mr. Baker has made good use of the excellent material placed in his hands.

From Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd.—"Pictured Puzzles and Word Play, a companion for the Twentieth Century Standard Puzzle Book," edited by A. Cyril Pearson, M.A. This book, profusely illustrated, is full of anagrams, puzzles, palindromes, charades, riddles, and other ridiculous odds and ends. Here is a specimen:—

> "Why is every angler ipso facto an Ananias?" The Editor says, "Although no such method was asked for or expected, we find that the very letters of the question can be recast into a most apposite reply! Our answer by anagram runs thus:—
> "A liar, he spins gay fancies to a woven yarn."
> And the Editor adds "Question and Answer are spelt with the same letters."
> "Why is every anagram maker ipso facto an Ass?"
> Although no such method was asked for or expected, we find that the very letters of the question can be recast into a most apposite reply! Our answer proved by anagram runs thus:—
> "An anagram maker ipso facto wastes own time with others"
> And the Editor adds "Question and Answer are spelt with the same letters." Mr. Cyril Pearson, M.A. must not be offended—unfortunately, both anagrams cut both ways!

From the Same.—"Voices of Nature," compiled by Mr. E. A. Baker, is a charming and pocketable anthology of prose and verse selections in praise of the simple life. It invites the reader to "come and make his calm retreat among green leaves and blossoms sweet." The selections range over English (and American) literature from Wordsworth to the present day; they are chosen to represent every phase of Nature, and to suit every mood of the Nature-lover: it is a book to make a friend of.

From Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson, Ltd.—"The Kalendar of Shepherds: being Devices for the Twelve Months." This is one of those books calculated to delight the fastidious. "Le Compost et Kalendrier des Bergiers" was first printed in Paris in 1493, one copy of this edition being still preserved in the British Museum. In the book now before us each month is treated thus:—on the first page is its name and number of days, followed by a couplet from Tusser's "Five Hundred Pointes of Good Husbandrie" (1599); on the second is a woodcut faced by a black letter copy of a rhyme and prose passage comparing each month with the twelve ages of man (in periods of six years each): these are translations from the French original. Breton's "Fantasticks" (1626) provides the letterpress of the last four pages. The peculiar treasure of the book lies in the unique series of woodcuts representing man's occupation throughout the year and giving a vivid picture of country life in the Middle Ages. We recommend collectors to secure a copy of this book, to which Mr. Diplock contributes an interesting introduction, for we believe it will rise in price as copies get scarcer.

From Messrs. Sisley's.—"Vincenzo Bellini," by William A. C. Lloyd. It seems strange that in these days of Wagner and Brahms a panegyric upon Bellini should be published. Mr. Lloyd's memoir is spoilt by exaggeration and want of judgment. Who, for instance, will agree that "it would be difficult to say that he (Bellini) does not rank with the greatest names in the art of all ages and all countries on account of two of his works?" The book contains a full account of Bellini's life and a detailed analysis of his works; in all this Mr. Lloyd is interesting enough, but the conclusions which he arrives at do not appear to us to be sound.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"Selected Speeches," by Sir Edward Clarke, K.C. Sir Edward Clarke confesses in his preface that the object of this book's publication is that he may be remembered by a portrait rather than by an epitaph. This book is his portrait. He has put all of himself into these speeches, so lucid, so informed by high ideals, so felicitous in phrase. There are thirty-two speeches in all on subjects as widely different as the Liquor Traffic and Parliamentary Privilege. The four forensic speeches included are of special interest.

From Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell.—"When Women Reign," by Mr. Jesse Wilson. Weary of political strife and national corruption, Mr. James Cliffe puts himself "into a long comatose," and wakes in 1930 to find a changed England. Women have won the franchise and are using their power remorselessly. How the Women's Parliament becomes more and more tyrannical, how the men revolt, and how after their brief reign women return with joy to their natural sphere, may be read in Mr. Wilson's brisk and amusing pages.

Mr. Fisher Unwin has issued a third impression of Mr. Whitechurch's novel, "The Canon in Residence," which first appeared in 1904. This is sufficient evidence that the book contains something more than the usual run of novels.

From the Same.—"The Baronet's Wife," by Florence Warden. We have every confidence in recommending this capital novel to all who like an exciting account of the gradual detection of mysterious crimes—a healthy, amusing, well-written story.

From Messrs. Rowland Ward, Ltd.—"The Game Animals of Africa," by R. Lydekker. In no region of the world have greater advances been made of late years in our knowledge of big game animals than is the case with those of Africa. In consequence of this rapid advance, even naturalists find it difficult to keep themselves abreast of the present state of knowledge; while in the case of sportsmen this is an absolute impossibility. Mr. R. Lydekker has therefore written and Mr. Rowland Ward has published, this volume in which will be found descriptions of all the species and races of African game quadrupeds at present recognised by zoologists. The author has largely availed himself of first-hand descriptions by African sportsmen, so that in the matter of habits, &c., the book is thoroughly trustworthy. The work is lavishly illustrated, and while it will appeal largely to the scientific naturalist it will be quite indispensable to the African big game sportsman; and, as it is issued in small crown 4to. form, it will not be too bulky to be carried on the march.

From the Same.—"With Rifle in Five Continents," by Paul Niedieck; translated from the German by H. B. Stanwell, with 32 full-page illustrations from photographs and 174 illustrations in the text. This is a work which will interest all lovers of sport, and especially those who love true tales of adventure in the great wild hunting grounds of the world. The author says: "It has been remarked to me by one who ought to know that 'if you describe hunting experiences in foreign countries, and want to be believed, you must lie.' I have, however, refrained; and have related only facts." We think that any sportsman reading Mr. Niedieck's book will agree with us that it bears the stamp of truth in its modest record of sport among the most dangerous land animals of the world. The author is a born hunter—keen, cool, confident and successful. The illustrations are excellent.

From Messrs. Williams & Norgate.—"The Incarnate Purpose," by G. H. Percival, is a series of thoughtful and carefully reasoned sermons on the Spiritual Unity of Life. Accepting ex animo the modern evolutionary view of human existence, the writer seeks to justify on a rational basis such fundamental tenets of religion as the Immortality of the Soul, the value of Prayer, the reality of Free Will, and the spiritual efficacy of Pain. His book should be read by all those thoughtful men who feel the need of reconciling the incontrovertible facts of science with the deeper instincts of the heart.

From the Same.—"The Ethics of the Christian Life," by Dr. Theodor von Haering, Professor of Dogmatics and Ethics in Tübingen University; translated by the Rev. J. S. Hill, B.D. This is Volume 25 of Messrs. Williams & Norgate's valuable "Theological Translations Library," through which Sabatin's "Religions of Authority," Pfleiderer's "Primitive Christianity," Harnack's "History of Dogma," and many other important theological works have been introduced to the English public. Professor Haering's book is well worthy of a place in this distinguished company. As a member of the Evangelical Church of Germany he writes from a strictly Protestant point of view and with the needs of his own denomination before him. Nevertheless, his book is of wide general value from its breadth of outlook, its careful analysis of the fundamental principles of ethics and the sincere yet reverent spirit with which it seeks to interpret the Christian Gospel in the language of the age.

Keep in Touch with the Trade

By Advertising in "The Publishers' Circular"

"The Publishers' Circular" is read by booksellers, librarians, and all connected with books and literature at home and abroad. It possesses certain features which make it indispensable, and there is hardly a bookseller in the country who does not read and study every number.

The up-to-date Trade information; the List of Books Wanted: and the detailed particulars of New Publications are some of the weekly features which ensure its being bought and read by booksellers, librarians, and large bookbuyers generally.

"The Publishers' Circular" is therefore an excellent medium for Publishers' Announcements. An advertisement in its pages is the most effective and economical means of reaching the men whose business it is to buy books, and who respond to book advertising more than any other class.

Booksellers having rare or second-hand books for disposal should try the effect of an advertisement in "The Publishers' Circular." We are every day receiving fresh testimony as to the efficacy of our advertising columns in this respect.

All communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to the Manager at the Offices, 19 Ada... Street, Adel... Strand, London W.C.

THE LAMB SHAKESPEARE

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

In The Lamb Shakespeare for Young People, based on Mary and Charles Lamb's Tales from Shakespeare, an attempt is made to insert skilfully within the setting of prose those scenes and passages from the Play with which the young reader should quite early become acquainted. To carry this out adequately the narrative as set forth by the Lambs has been freely adapted. It is believed that this form of presenting the chief Plays to the young will, in accordance with a widely-expressed wish from many educational experts, commend itself to teachers and others. Each volume is illustrated by artists who endeavour to reproduce the chief scenes of the action as they would be visualised by the young, while a further feature is made of Songs from the Plays set to the best music, arranged for school use by T. Maskell Hardy. Issued in the following styles, with Special Cover Design, Imperial 16mo, about 7½ × 5½ inches:—Cloth gilt, 1/6 net; leather, 2/6 net. Parts I. to VI., each 1s. net. Numerous Illustrations in Colour and Black and White.

Note what H.M.I. says:—"The value to teachers of such a complete Manual as the Six Parts make will be very great. There is a clear, definite, graded course—each point in it being a point arising naturally and definitely out of what has preceded it, and all the exercises suggested being on what children like, common, homely, 'friendly' objects, both natural and artificial. It will make the teacher's task of getting the children to see at once the points which they must seize upon when drawing an object, an easy one, and it will place the teacher himself on right lines of thought as regards Object Drawing."

Publishers' Circular

"Better School Books"

"The Eye as an Aid to Memory"

For many years past, in our Educational numbers—(they are called so because they contain the announcements of the principal educational publishers and are sent to the principal schoolmasters)—we have urged upon the makers of school books the need for more consideration for young eyes and young brains.

Without for a moment claiming that The Publishers' Circular has been more than one of many influences which have brought about an improvement, we may at least claim that it has helped. If you hold a view strongly and are in a position to put it plainly before many thousands of people who are interested in the subject, some result must follow—though it does not follow that the result is what you wish always. But on this particular question there surely can be no two opinions: the object of school books being to give information, the better they are adapted to the purpose the sooner will the object be gained.

To give children books in small crowded type badly arranged is like giving soldiers rifles with poor and badly-adjusted sights. Holding this view so strongly, it was a pleasure to come across the following little article in The Daily Mail the other day. Its immense circulation makes Lord Northcliffe's paper one of the greatest educational powers of the day:—

BETTER SCHOOL BOOKS

THE EYE AS AN AID TO MEMORY

"The striking difference between the school books of to-day and those of even a few years ago is shown at an exhibition of the latest school books and scientific instruments, which is being held at St. Paul's School in connection with the annual meeting of the Incorporated Association of Assistant Masters in Secondary Schools on January 8th.

"Greater attention is now paid to the arrangement of the text, with a view to its being easily 'visualised,' so that the eye assists the brain in the task of memorising.

"Not only is the letterpress clearer in the modern text book, but the margins are wider and the type is differentiated to distinguish between subject matter of greater and less importance.

"The old days of badly-printed grammars filled with crabbed text, and of lexicons in type so small as to be a serious strain upon the eyesight of the young, are past, with great benefit to the convenience both of master and pupil.

"Among the new school books of interest in the exhibition is the commencement of a series of county geographies, which deal brightly and fully with the geology, history, manufactures, and notabilities of the counties of which they treat.

"A new line in English literature is followed in a well-annotated edition of some of the less well-known works of English prose writers, such as Hazlitt's 'Characters of Shakespeare's Plays' and Defoe's 'Memoirs of a Cavalier.'"

A visit to the exhibition showed that great improvement is being made in many ways in the matter of school-book production, and encourages the hope that books which are badly adjusted for the sight and understanding of the young will disappear from our schools.

Education in Rifle Shooting

One of the most important and satisfactory educational movements of recent years has been the formation of rifle clubs in the United Kingdom and in our Colonies and Dependencies. There are thousands of these clubs now, and in many of our best colleges and schools, in our large industrial concerns, in the staffs of our chief newspapers, the rifle club is now to be found. It is, of course, quite possible to overrate anything, even the value of a quarter of a million of trained rifle shots; but it is equally easy to underrate their value. Recently, in one of our daily papers, a writer stated his conviction that fifty thousand seasick Germans could land on our shores and take England, and that our Territorial Army would be mere sausage-meat for them. They would find it so indigestible that they would soon wish themselves back on the sea. They know a safer way than that.

Education in History

From a German School Book of 1950

"There was once a country called Great Britain. There were forty million people in Great Britain—very proud people, because they had the biggest navy in the world, and their navy had made them so great and rich and powerful that nobody for nearly a hundred years had thought of attacking them. They said their navy must be double as strong as any other navy and ten per cent. over—(the Conservatives created the 'double standard' and the Liberals added the ten per cent. margin). They said they had the ships, and the men, and the money—and 'Let 'em all come!'

"And one fine morning they did come. And then these proud Great Britons discovered that though they had the ships and the men and the money they hadn't got any food—not in the country. They had nearly all their bread stored for them in foreign countries, thousands of miles away, instead of having it stored in their own islands, as they easily might have done.

"These proud Britons had never dreamed of being hit below the belt; they said it was not fair fighting to destroy their foodships and run away from their warships; and they began to get very hungry and angry. And they sent to their Prime Minister, who was playing golf on Plymouth Hoe, to ask where their food fleet was. And he said he could not see it, because it was not in sight; but they need not fear, he had wired to Canada for a million tons of wheat and to Australia for another million, and, with luck, they would get some of it through in a month or two. And he went on to finish his game, caught cold, and then went off to Biarritz, and said nothing but very urgent communications were to be sent on to him. But he left forty million empty stomachs behind.

"Then Lord Roberts, at the head of a million empty soldiers, marched to the Houses of Parliament, and he said, 'Take that Bauble away! Where is the key of the Corn Stores?' But nobody could find it, and Mr. Winsome Churchill said the Prime Minister had gone off with it. So they broke open the door and found nothing but Blue Books on 'Food Supplies for War Time.'

"Then Lord Roberts got a telegram from the German Emperor, with a plan of campaign, saying, 'Trust me, I am your true friend. Give me your fleet, and I will give you food.' And Lord Roberts gave him the fleet; it was no use, it was starving.

"And that is why we are all now served by English waiters in our German hotels. And that part of our Empire is now called Germanglia, and fifty per cent. of our best corn is grown there for us by our English subjects, who also bake our bread for us and eat our black bread and horse flesh.

"And the last King of England was called 'Lackbread,' for it was in his time they were conquered by famine. But it was the Lackbrains, his ministers, who caused the downfall of him and his proud people. They said it would 'upset the corn trade' in peace time if they stored corn for war time. So they slept on, letting thirty-five millions out of their forty millions exist on a few weeks' supply of foreign food, with nothing to keep them alive in war time. But hanging them did no good; it was too late. If they had taught in their schools that money and ships and men are no good without bread, then England would be England still, instead of being in Germany. This shows what school books can do."

The Visit of the French Booksellers' Assistants to London

LAST week we gave, in French, extracts from the account which our French friends have published, in which they refer so sincerely, and warmly, and charmingly to the kindness with which they were received when in England. One of our readers has suggested that we might repeat the account in English, but we had already last July devoted several columns to describing the visit in English. Surely every bookseller's assistant knows enough French to read a simple account such as that referred to; if they do not, then it is their misfortune—if not their fault—and they ought to begin to learn at once, especially as they are expected to return the visit of our French friends, and to understand something of the language will certainly add to the pleasure of their visit. Let us add the following sentence from the message in French sent by Mr. Edwin Pearce, Hon. Sec. of the Associated Booksellers, to the French Committee:—

> "Vive l'Entente Cordiale! qu'elle devienne encore plus assurée pour le bonheur de nos chères patries!"

As only one of our readers has asked for a translation, and as he knows French, we think it will be unnecessary to give a translation, but will with pleasure do so even if only half-a-dozen of our readers are unable to read French, and say so.

Notes and Announcements

"ANNE OF GREEN GABLES" (published this week by Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd.) will soon be spreading over the kingdom like a lovely April day—all sunshine and showers. It is an idyl of Prince Edward Island by L. M. Montgomery. Anne steps out of her book and captivates the reader just as she does everyone in the story. Books which "boom" in America do not always do so here, but this one will. The Prince Edward Islanders ought to be proud of "Anne of Green Gables." To most people, we fear, so far their island has been little more than a name and a charming Black Prince on a postage stamp, the King as a boy in Highland costume. Now we shall know it as a land of violets and apple blossom, of charming people and of irresistible Anne—with the e, she insisted on that. The humour is delicious and the writing admirable.

Mr. Heinemann announces for publication on the 28th a new volume of "Memoirs," by Baron de Fréuilly, who lived in the years 1768–1828. The book is one of exceptional interest, as the Baron started under the Royalist regime and survived the Terror, to be made a peer of France at the Restitution. The Baron thus lived through the most interesting period of any history in the world, and as a man of good education his writing has all the charm of the brilliant society of those days. There is an introduction by M. Arthur Chuquet, Membre de l'Institut.

The book of Mr. Pinero's play, "The Thunderbolt," which was produced last year at the St. James's Theatre with great success, is to be published by Mr. Heinemann on the 21st.

Books which Messrs. Macmillan have ready, or just ready, are: "One Immortality," a novel, by Mr. H. Fielding Hall—("There are three loves," says the author, "that make and keep the world: the love of man and woman, the love that draws families into nations, and the love that holds the world to God. This book is about the first")—; revised edition, in the charming Eversley Series, of Professor Walter Raleigh's volume on Shakespeare; "The Religion of the Common Man," by Sir Henry Wrixon; a little volume by the Bishop of Southwark, entitled "The Fulness of Christ"; an important work, illustrated, on "The Acropolis at Athens," by an American scholar, Dr. M. L. D'Ooge; and a work on "The County Lieutenancies and the Army, 1803–1814," which is written by the Hon. J. W. Fortescue, and may be described as an "overflow" from his "History of the British Army." In view of the light thrown on the subject of the recruiting of the Army during the Boer War, the publication of Mr. Fortescue's new work has been specially approved by the Secretary of State for War.

Books which Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. have nearly ready are:—"The Scottish Staple at Veere: a Study in the Economic History of Scotland," by the late John Davidson, M.A., D.Phil. (Edin.), and Alexander Gray, M.A., with numerous illustrations. "Vectors and Vector Diagrams, applied to the Alternating Current Circuit; with Examples on their use in the Theory of Transformers, and of Single and Polyphase Motors, &c.," by William Cramp, M.I.E.E. and Charles F. Smith, M.I.E.E., Assoc.M.Inst.C.E., with 113 diagrams. "Unemployment: a Problem of Industry," by W. H. Beveridge. "Letters to an Elector," by J. H. Balfour Browne, K.C.

Mr. Eveleigh Nash is publishing a book entitled "A Favourite of Napoleon," being the English translation of "Memoires of Mademoiselle George." Her candid criticisms of Napoleon, Josephine, the Emperor Alexander of Russia, Madame De Stael, and others, bring fresh light upon the events of this deeply-interesting period and make the book one of the most remarkable Napoleonic documents of recent times. Mr. Nash also publishes the following novels: "The Whispering Man," by H. K Webster, and "After the Pardon," by Matilde Serao.

"Fairbairn's Book of Crests" will be re-issued immediately by Messrs. Jack at a popular price. As this standard work has always been somewhat costly it will be good news to many engravers, draughtsmen and designers that the work containing all the latest revisions and additions will shortly be obtainable at a very moderate figure. The latest edition which is to be re-issued contains no fewer than 5,000 engravings and 30,000 entries.

Mr. Charles Battall Loomis has won a high reputation in the United States as a humorist, and the announcement of a new volume of stories from his pen is of interest. It is entitled "A Holiday Touch and Other Tales of Undaunted Americans," and is full of that odd combination of American buoyancy and unobtrusive pathos which is Mr. Loomis's greatest charm. This volume will be published by Messrs. Bell on Tuesday.

Messrs. George Bell & Sons announce for immediate publication: "Canadian Types of the Old Regime," by Professor C. W. Colby, who occupies the chair of History in McGill University, Montreal, and who thoroughly understands the attitude of French Canadians towards their own past. "Builders of United Italy," by R. S. Holland. An attempt to provide a popular introduction to the study of one of the most fascinating periods of modern European history. Portraits of great interest are included in the work.

Messrs. Bell's edition of Leland's "Itinerary" is fast approaching completion. The fourth volume, containing Parts VII. and VIII. of the "Itinerary," was published on January 13th, and the fifth and last volume will, it is hoped, be ready later in the year.

The Romance of the East Series, the first volume of which is to be issued immediately by Mr. John Murray, at the modest price of 2s. 6d., is sure of a warm welcome from all who are interested in romance, or attracted by the call and glamour of the East. In this series the great storehouses of Oriental romance will be opened for the first time to the public. Tales from the Sanscrit, from the Chinese, from every language of the East possessing a great literature will appear in due course. From these vivid narratives of old-world romance it will be possible for the reader to glean much information of vanished races and the greatness of Empires that have passed away. Mr. Claud Field, in "Tales of the Caliphs," gives us the genuine romance of history, authentic anecdotes of Caliphs of Bagdad and Cordova, and marvellous adventures of Haroun-al-Raschid, concerning which even "The Arabian Nights" is silent. Sir Arthur Wollaston, in "Tales Within Tales," has retold in simple yet picturesque English the delightful animal stories of Pilpai. Others are to follow from the pens of Mr. Stanley Lane Poole, Dr. Barnett, Mr. Lionel Giles, &c.

"Popular Electricity," by W. Hibbert, F.I.C., F.C.S., A.M.I.E.E., will be published by Messrs. Cassell on the 29th inst. The book, which is fully illustrated, deals with electricity from a popular point of view.

The text of the laws of Howel the Good is about to be published by the Oxford University Press under the title of "Welsh Medieval Law: a 13th Century MS. in the British Museum"; the oldest and best of its class, is reproduced with translation, introduction, appendix, glossary, index and map, by Mr. A. W. Wade-Evans. The book is intended primarily for the student of the political history of Wales, but it will probably interest a much larger public.

Mr. John Milne informs us that his new work "How to Skate on Rollers," by Rinker (1s. net, cloth 1s. 6d.), owing to the large number of subscription orders, is unavoidably delayed, but delivery will be made as soon as possible.

The Oxford University Press is about to publish a volume entitled, "The Moral System of Dante's Inferno." Mr. W. H. V. Reade, the author, thinks that there is still an opening for students to modify, or even to revolutionise, some of the common opinions concerning the "Divine Comedy."

Messrs. Seeley & Co. will shortly publish three timely books:—"A British Officer in the Balkans," by Major Percy Henderson; "Behind the Veil in Persia and Turkish Arabia," by M. E. Hume Griffith; and "Amongst the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Frontier," by Dr. T. L. Pennell.

Messrs. J. Griffin & Co., London and Portsmouth, will publish immediately a volume of articles, entitled "Is Invasion Impossible?" by Lieutenant A. C. Dewar, R.N. This will comprise reprints of a series of articles that recently appeared in The Morning Post and United Service Magazine, which were much commented on at the time they were published; an appendix will be added, and the book will be issued at 1s. net in paper wrappers.

We note that in their new extra large type editions of "Sacred Songs and Solos," compiled and sung by Ira D. Sankey, Messrs. Morgan & Scott have added a Consolidated Index, facilitating reference to any hymn in the combined volumes. This firm is bringing its whole output into line with the spirited forward policy which we have been pleased to observe during the past twelve months, a transformation with which the late Mr. R. C. Morgan was closely associated, and which met with his unqualified approval.

The new and forthcoming publications of McDougall's Educational Company, Ltd., London and Edinburgh, include:—"Girls' Suggestive Arithmetics—Books I., II. and III., and Teachers' Books to correspond"; "Suggestive Lessons in English—Books I. to VI., and Teachers' Books to correspond"; "History for Scottish Schools—Book I., Scotland, as a Separate Nation, Book II., Scotland as Part of the Empire, Book III., Modern Times"; "Tales from History—Books I. and II."; School Classics—(1) Legend of Montrose, (2) Gulliver's Travels, (3) Kingsley's Heroes; "Suggestive Graph Book"; "History Chart Book"; "British Physical Education for Girls"; and in their Supplementary Readers—Junior No. 8, "Little Violet"; Intermediate No. 9, "The Story of Bertha"; Intermediate No. 10, "A Visit to the Circus."

Booksellers are always glad to hear of religious books that are selling, and we are able to name three of this season's publications which come in this category. These are: "The Spirit in the Word," by Rev. David M. McIntyre; "Peru: Its Story, People, and Religion," by Geraldine Guinness; and "Go-To-Bed Stories," by Lettice Bell. These books, apart from their intrinsic literary merits, indicate a spirited forward policy on the part of the publishers, Messrs. Morgan & Scott, Ltd

Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co. have ready for immediate publication a new edition, thoroughly revised and brought up to date, of their most useful shilling work, "All About Income Tax, House Duty, and Land Tax" (ninth edition), being a plain, practical guide to taxpayers on assessments, appeals, reductions and repayments, with examples of the official forms correctly filled; also "The Art of Modern Conjuring, Magic and Illusions," a practical treatise on the conjuror's art, magic, illusions, thought-reading, and tricks, especially suitable for performance in the drawing-room, with more than 200 photographic illustrations; and have just issued "The Long Arm," one of those strenuous romances of modern life that have won for Mr. E. Phillips Oppenheim the large vogue which each new volume from his pen commands.

Messrs. Skeffington will publish immediately a new volume of village sermons, entitled "The Country Pulpit," by the Rev. J. A. Craigie; also a little book of "Short Addresses for Holy Week," by the Rev. W. V. Mason. "Passiontide and Easter" is the title of a volume of addresses by the Rev. Vivian R. Lennard, which will be issued shortly.

The Rev. Canon C. R. Ball has written a new manual entitled "Confirmation: Before and After," which Messrs. Skeffington are bringing out at once.

For £275 Mr. Wm. Brown, of 8, Castle Street, Edinburgh, offers a remarkable collection of the First Editions of the works of Charles Dickens, with all the original illustrations by "Phiz," Cruikshank, and others, and extra illustrated by the insertion of more than 300 plates by Onwhyn, "Phiz," Pailthorpe, Sibson, "Sam Weller," "Peter Palette," &c., and two autograph letters of Charles Dickens; 55 vols., royal 8vo. to 12mo., from the original parts and cloth, in green Levant morocco extra, gilt tops, uncut, by Riviere & Son, £275, 1836–81. The series includes all the important works of the novelist, and most of his more out-of-the-way volumes. "It should be observed that, apart from the time involved, it would cost much more than the price quoted above to collect the volumes in uncut state, and bind them so sumptuously."

A book intended to serve as a text-book for the highest forms in schools, particularly for those preparing for local and other similar examinations, and also as an introduction for those taking this period in examinations at the University, is Mr. J. A. R. Marriott's "The Remaking of Modern Europe: from the outbreak of the French Revolution to the Treaty of Berlin, 1789–1878." It contains a sketch of European history from the outbreak of the French Revolution to the Treaty of Berlin, presenting a vivid picture of the Revolutionary period, of the rise and fall of Napoleon, and of the larger movements of European politics since Waterloo. It forms a volume of Messrs. Methuen's new series, entitled "Six Ages of European History."

In future The Magazine of Commerce will be published from No. 1, Amen Corner. The trade, therefore, is asked to note that the February number must be obtained from that address, and not as before from St. Clement's Press. The Magazine of Commerce, it may be noted, is the oldest established and most successful periodical of its kind in this country. Booksellers and stationers who number amongst their customers business men should not fail to bring The Magazine of Commerce under their notice. Advertising material, &c., may be obtained from the publishers

The first novel to be published by Messrs. Methuen this year is Mr. H. B. Marriott Watson's "Flower of the Heart," a story of the countryside and the heart of the city—in other words, the Stock Exchange.

Messrs. Methuen's new publications include a new book by Mr. R. R. Marett (Fellow of the Royal Anthropological Society), entitled "The Threshold of Religion"; and a new and revised edition of "Readings on the Paradiso of Dante," by the Hon. William Warren Vernon.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will publish immediately a new historical work, entitled "King's Favourite," being the love story of Robert Carr, Earl of Somerset and Lady Essex, by Mr. Philip Gibbs. The story of Robert Carr has never been fully told before, yet in the State papers of the nation there are the fullest and most vivid details of his career, of which the author has now made full use.

A new novel with a strong hunting interest, entitled "The Straw," by R. Ramsay, author of "The Key of the Door," will shortly be published by Hutchinson & Co.

Rita's new novel, entitled "The House called Hurrish," is published by Messrs. Hutchinson & Co.

The publisher of The Churchman (edited by the Rev. Dr. Griffith Thomas) has found it necessary to go to press with a second edition of the January issue.

In proposing the toast of "The King," the Chairman said we were to be congratulated upon having reigning over us a King who was not only deeply honoured and respected in our own country, but commanded the respect and admiration of the whole world.

After the toast of "The King" had been duly honoured, the Chairman proposed the health of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales and all the members of the Royal Family.

In proposing the toast of "Our Guests," the Chairman said:

"It is with great pleasure that I now rise to propose the toast of 'Our Guests.' I realise as I look round this brilliant company that we are surrounded by friends and well-wishers, and certainly it is a grand opportunity to prove to our wives and families that bookselling is a terrible business and the bookseller a most hard-working man, especially at a public dinner. (Hear, hear).

"It is difficult among so many guests to particularise a few, but I should like on behalf of the London members of committee to thank very heartily those of our confrères who have travelled from such distant places as Bristol, Birmingham, and even from Newcastle, to take part in our anniversary celebration. (Applause).

"I would also say how pleased I am to welcome representatives of our leading newspapers. We only meet them as a rule when a big engagement is in progress on the battlefield of Wellington Street and it is only right that they should have the opportunity of seeing us under more favourable conditions, with the war-paint washed from our faces and the surroundings peaceful and fraternal.

"My greatest pleasure, however, this evening is to voice your welcome to a gentleman who is certainly the highest dignitary in the book world of this country. (Applause). Dr. Fortescue is well known by name to us all as the Keeper of the Printed Books of the British Museum, and the author of those valuable indices that have helped to make the contents of the Museum so accessible to the general reader and student. I have a very distinct recollection as a youth of my first visit to the Library, and the feelings of awe and reverence that filled me as I entered the Reading Room and looked around that vast assemblage of the literature of all ages and nations are with me still. You can imagine, then, how pleased I am to have seated by my side the presiding genius of that wonderful place and to be able to give him a most cordial and hearty welcome.

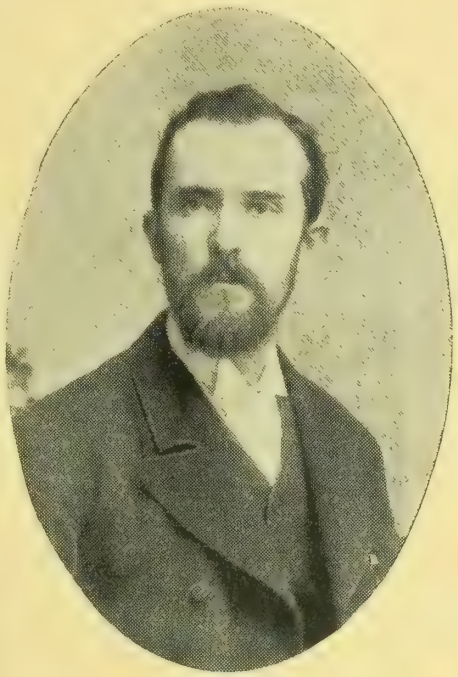
"Associated with Dr. Fortescue in his work is another gentleman whom we are all very pleased to welcome. Mr. Barwick, the Superintendent of the Reading Room, occupies a position which perhaps brings him more into touch with the general public, and while expressing our pleasure at his presence, I am glad to be able to take the opportunity of testifying personally to the unvarying kindness and courtesy which is always accorded to visitors and readers. I am not alone in my experience, for similar remarks have been made to me from many quarters. (Hear, hear, and applause).

"Before sitting down I should like to say how pleased I am to be able to express my thanks to another gentleman who has greatly honoured us by accepting our invitation. Mr. Herbert Baily—(cheers)—the able editor of our finest art magazine, the Connoisseur, is well known to very many of us, and esteemed by all. He is a man who has strong sympathies for things antiquarian, for old furniture, old lace, old plate, old pictures, old prints, and especially, as I well know, for old books. Consequently, his presence among antiquarian booksellers is most fitting, and we are delighted that he should be in our company this evening. (Cheers).

"Gentlemen, Members of the International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers, I ask you to join me in drinking the toast of 'Our Guests,' coupling with it the names of Dr. Fortescue and Mr. Barwick."



The toast being duly honoured, Dr. G. K. Fortescue rose to reply:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, who have been so exceptionally kind and, I am afraid, so exceedingly injudicious, as to ask me to reply for the guests. I can only say there is no guest who is so grateful as I am for the excellent dinner and delightful entertainment provided for us. (Hear, hear).

"In responding to this toast, I may say that I represent an institution which I suppose is more deeply indebted to the antiquarian booksellers of London than any private collection or anything else in the world. I could gladly quote a hundred instances in which the booksellers of London and of the United Kingdom have shown a spirit of extraordinary generosity and patriotism in dealing with the Museum. (Hear, hear). I could tell you again and again of books which the Museum could never have purchased if it had had to go into the open market, but which have been offered to them by the booksellers, many of whom are present this evening.

"I saw in one paper to-day that the British Museum now contained about thirty-five miles of bookshelves and two million of books. That was a tremendous under-statement. The number of books was nearer four million than three million, and our shelves extend to forty-eight miles. (Applause). If it were possible to estimate all books printed since 1800, I take it we have not more than a third of them, and it will take many hundreds of years before we can say we have all the books that are printed. We have lately been devoting ourselves to making the collection of incunabula as complete as possible. After exertions extending over many years we have acquired about ten thousand incunabula. The greatest number of books printed before 1500 was twenty thousand; some people, very good judges, estimated it at thirty thousand. This proves how very far from complete we are at present.

"The Museum itself owes more to one bookseller than to any other benefactor, and I myself am under the deepest obligation to that bookseller. This was George Thomason, of the 'Rose and Crown' in St. Paul's Churchyard, who died in 1665. In 1641 he made up his mind he would collect every book, pamphlet and newspaper that came out during that time. Between 1641 and 1663 he collected twenty-four thousand volumes which, through the generosity of George III., passed to the British Museum. These are often called the King's Pamphlets; I prefer to call them Thomason Pamphlets. (Hear, hear). Milton presented Thomason with a copy of each of his works, putting his name upon the title-page of each." (Applause).

MR. B. D. MAGGS

Chairman of the Second Annual Dinner of the International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers, at the Criterion, Wednesday, Jan. 13th.

Mr. G. F. Barwick, in a few words, expressed his gratitude for having been invited and the pleasure it gave him to be present. He was grateful for the kind words which had been spoken respecting his position as Superintendent of the Reading Room. He was glad to help visitors to the Museum whenever possible, but it was not to the booksellers he had a chance of offering any help; they knew far more about books than he did. All he could do really, he said, was to help an American who came to the Museum in search of a pedigree, or some faddist from the country who could not understand the catalogues, or perhaps some man from Yorkshire who had only ten minutes in London and wanted a book in a hurry. (Applause).

Mr. J. T. Herbert Baily then rose to propose the toast of "The Association." He said he was deeply flattered and honoured by being called upon to propose this very important toast. As he came into the room this evening he met an old friend, and, being anxious to discover a few notes on which to base his speech, he asked his friend for advice; whereupon he was told to make it as brief as possible. (Laughter.) He had, however, discovered a very important piece of information since he had come into the room. This was Dr. Fortescue's remark which must have given great satisfaction to members of the Association—that there were forty-eight miles of bookshelves in the British Museum. But he had said, what about the new building which was rapidly being completed? Well, Dr. Fortescue had informed him that then there would be another forty-eight miles of empty shelves to be filled. (Applause.)

He referred to the extraordinary method adopted by the Secretary in inducing him to give the toast of "The Association." Some time ago a distant voice on the telephone had remarked that, as he knew everybody in London perhaps he could obtain some important statesman to come on January 13th (Laughter.)

He replied that he should be only too delighted, but he believed they were occupied in making provision for Old Age Pensions and the abolition of all taxes upon books, and would therefore be unable to come. (Laughter.) The Secretary then asked if he knew any prominent Socialists, but at a moment's notice he feared it was impossible. Mr. Bernard Shaw and those sort of people were very much in request and difficult to get to a trade dinner. He understood that a good many of the antiquarian booksellers were Socialists, and that they had some arrangement for dividing their profits. (Laughter.) Finally the Secretary said—would he do it himself? Well, here he was; and being here he thought of telling them a story, but he was afraid they would find it very depressing. It referred to an American gentleman who was a great buyer of Caxton's and other priceless early prints. This gentleman had made a journey to England, where he had sojourned for a time, no doubt intent upon securing bibliographical treasures. When he returned to America, and his 400-h.p. motor-car was waiting for him at the docks, he asked his negro chauffeur for news of his home during his absence. "Well, Mas'r!" said the negro, "it seems an age since you went from home. Poor Fido's dead." "What,

MATHEMATICS

Cassell's Elementary Algebra. By V. M. TURNBULL, M.A., Senior Mathematical Master at the Perse School, Cambridge. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"This is an excellent Elementary Algebra which takes one as far as geometrical progression, with a short section on indices and logarithms. Revision examples are given at various stages; a large number are original . . . easy, simple equations are introduced early, and the solution of the quadratic equation with numerical co-efficients is placed before the solution of simple simultaneous equations. 'Graphs' are well treated, and the graph illustrations of the variation of functions, with special reference to the roots of equations, are extremely good. The book should prove a valuable addition to the elementary mathematical school books."

you scoundrel ". said the American, "my favourite dog dead ?" "Yes, Mas'r ! " responded the chauffeur ; "you see, the little fellow was in the barn when it was burnt down." "What, you scoundrel ! " said the gentleman, growing exasperated, "my five-hundred dollar barn, where I keep all my beautiful books, burnt down. How did it get burnt down ?" "Well, Mas'r, sparks from the house set it on fire." "What, you scoundrel ! House on fire. How did it get on fire ?" "Well, Mas'r, your old mother wanted candles in the room when she died, and they set fire to the curtains." "What, you scoundrel ! My mother dead ?" "Well," said this mournful tale-bearer, "you see, when she heard that your wife had run away with the gardener she fell down dead suddenly from heart failure." After the loud laughter which greeted this story had subsided, Mr. Baily said that they evidently had not found it so depressing after all. He followed with some good-humoured banter over the Association's change of nomenclature in the second year of their existence, from The Second-hand Booksellers' Association to The International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers. In extenuation of their offence, he recalled that certain firms in Bond Street did not call themselves dealers in secondhand pictures. They call them "old masters," said Mr. Baily naïvely, and his audience roared with laughter. He told another story, which was well received, of a young collector who, after considerable effort, had managed to save 4d. This person then went to a secondhand bookseller's shop and asked for a copy of the "Last of the Mohicans," which was priced at 1s. After a lot of wrangling he secured the book for 4d. ; then, turning round to the shopman, he exclaimed triumphantly, "That's 1d. a Mohican ! " (Laughter.) Subsequently Mr. Baily pointed out that a secondhand bookseller needed to exercise the greatest discrimination in his calling, and observed that only after a long and arduous life of toil could he properly understand the business in which he was engaged, his remarks being warmly endorsed by the company. He touched upon the importance of the Association in uniting them all together, and concluded with a peroration regarding the moral and intellectual value of the books sold as "old," which he said contained between their covers the greatest thoughts of the human race. (Prolonged applause.)

Mr. Henry F. Stevens (Vice-President) in replying for the Association, thanked Mr. Baily for the kind and eloquent manner in which he had proposed the toast of this Association, also the company for the manner in which they had received the toast. He would like to tell those present of an antiquarian bookseller he read about in an old book who was requested to make a speech or lose his head. Contrary to expectation, he chose the latter alternative. (Laughter.) Although no such fate awaited him, he was somewhat at a loss to know how to treat the subject, because so much had already been said relating to this Association ; but it had occurred to him, if he could possibly find out something to say about booksellers in olden times—prehistoric times—it would prove interesting. (Hear, hear.) He went to the British Museum ; but search as he would among the forty-eight miles of books, he could find nothing about booksellers of that period, so he came away wondering what on earth he should speak about. As he was leaving the Museum, he asked the porter at the lodge, "Can you tell me anything about the booksellers of Ancient Rome ?" The porter asked him to step into the lodge, and said he thought he could find something. (Laughter.) "Turning to a huge Encyclopædia, which nearly filled the porter's room, we found the following under 'Booksellers in Rome': 'Little is known of the history of booksellers in Ancient Rome, but something may be found about it in a certain book of Livy.' Unfortunately, our copy of that work has been lost, and on making inquiries, we find everybody else's copy is lost. (Laughter.) So it appeared useless to try to trace that source. Everything comes to him who waits, however, and a day or two afterwards I happened to be looking through some old books, when, to my surprise, what should I find but a copy of the lost book of Livy. (Laughter.) I found it was printed in Rome in the year A.D. 5 B.C. (Laughter.) On turning this over to see if I could find anything about booksellers, I came across a description of bookselling which convinced me that our society of the present day is a re-incarnation of the society which existed at Rome nearly 2,000 years ago. (Laughter.) When I tell you the officers of that society dwelt in the same towns, and lived in the same streets, and their names were the same, making allowance for the transition of the Latin roots, Latin roots became merged in the Gaelic, Teutonic, &c., you will, I am sure, be convinced that there is no room for doubt. I will instance a few :—

Praeses super ripam.—The President (Mr. Maggs) dwelling on the banks of the river—i.e., the Strand.

Sobrius Magus—the sober and learned one. Livy was evidently so struck with the virtues of this extraordinary man that he breaks forth into verse in his honour :—

Sine quâ non et librorum
Pro bono publico pons asinorum
Etiam quantum suff Cockalorum.

A passage I found extremely difficult to render into English verse, but catching the evident spirit of the Latin, I respectfully submit :—

His learning it was deep
And his sobriety was such
He never drank a cocktail for Fear he'd take too much. (Laughter.)

Who can doubt the ancestry of our esteemed President ?

Custos thesauri in foro feni—the guardian of the treasure—dwelling in the Market of Hay.

Tomaeus Confabularius—Thomas the Chatterer. Evidently the progenitor of our well-loved Treasurer, Thomas Chatto, whose words of wisdom carry such weight when in our monthly conclaves he addresses us on the solemn matter of the reckoning of our sestertiæ.

Scriba—the Secretary.

Franciscus Carus Laci—the free and easy one of the Lake. Evidently the ancestor of our worthy Secretary, Mr. Frank Karslake, who evidently believes in keeping the Lake business in the family, for I see with him the Lady of the Lake, also the Lakelets—all residing in Pond Street ! (Laughter.)

Gualtherus Laterna—Walter the Lantern. Evidently of the family of our Walter Leighton, that bright shining lantern of learning we hope shortly to see guiding this Association from the Presidential chair. (Applause.)

Benignus Dolabellus—which can only translate as the 'kindly and handsome one, with the dollars,' evidently an ancestor of our one-and-only Bertram Dobell. (Laughter.)

Georgio Gregario cum globis—George the Herder—evidently of books, if one recollects the immense stock now in the possession of our worthy Consul at Bath Cum globis would suggest maps or globes but I think it refers rather to the family fondness for bowls and skittles. (Laughter.)

Gulielmus Plumosis ex mediis comitatibus—William the Downy-one, from the Midland Settlements. Evidently the ancestor of our genial Consul from Birmingham.

Josephus Jucundus—the Jovial Joseph

Gulielmus Favonius et Filii—William Westerly Wind & Sons.

Jacobus Tenuis—James Thin, of Edinburgh.

Ille caverni leonorum—He from the den of lions. The undoubted ancestor of our Walter Daniel. I once knew a Mr. Daniel whose wife's name was Leonora Daniel, another instance of keeping the lion-taming business in the family. (Laughter.)

Carolus Serrarius—Charles the Sawyer.

Gulielmus Fasciculorum—William of the Bundles or Faggots—hence Wm. Fagg.

Gulielmus Fabulator ex comitate Lancastriæ—The tale pitcher 'who coomes fra' Lancasheere.'

Custodes principales librorum fratres—The brothers, the chief custodians or warders of books—evidently 'in the vernacular the 'chief or 'ead wards.'—(Laughter.)

Albus omnis meus oculus cum specularia nova—The white or innocent one ; all my eye. I failed to identify him at first, but the clue comes in specularia nova. I thought at first this meant 'with new speculations,' but more literally I think it can best be rendered 'with a new window.' Hence, we get our esteemed colleague, Albert My-eye-ers. (Oh ! Oh ! and laughter.)

Ex officio Dux tres coloniarum—A member of the committee by reason of his office, the leader of the three colonies. What can this mean ? I almost despaired of solving it, but the interpretation dawned upon me suddenly, and I flatter myself I have made one of the most important and interesting bibliographical and historical discoveries of the age. (Laughter.) Strange and incredible as it may appear, we have in those few mysterious words evidence that the "knock out" was known to the Ancients

"Will outbid all rivals."—Bookman. "Certainly wonderful."—Athenæum. "It has remained for Mr. John Long to undersell all rivals by his 'Carlton Classics.' The copy before us—Thackeray's 'English Humorists'—is extremely well printed and nicely got up, and must certainly be reckoned as the last word in cheap editions."—Daily News.

—nay, more, practised in the most scientific and up-to-date method of modern times. Gentlemen, you have only to find the synonym of 'Colonies,' and the phrase becomes as clear as day: 'The master of the three settlements.' I am glad to be able to tell our friends and guests that no such office exists in our Society; in fact, there is no necessity for it, as all such practices died a natural death on the advent of the new system of selling books by the thousand words or by weight. (Laughter.)

Last but not least on the list comes Jacobus Treoscula—James Three-kisses. Clearly the ancestor of our genial James. In the transmigration of this family to Cornubia the Latin name became merged in the Celtic, and oculum became kiss. But Trekiss would sound silly, so another attribute of the family had to be added to the patronymic; hence we get Tregaskis. (Laughter.) You will all thoroughly recognise the wisdom of the committee in choosing our genial James to respond to the toast of 'The Ladies,' for what could be more suitable for the purpose than natural gas and kisses?

Mr. Albert Myers then rose to propose the toast, "The Ladies." "On looking around me," he said, "I think it would be politic to describe this as the toast of the evening. It is just a fortnight ago since I was threatened with this honour, and from that day to this I have neither slept nor tasted food. (Laughter.) But if I have not tasted the ordinary food I have at least devoured every book from which I could gather anything concerning woman. (Laughter.) Having exhausted my own stock, I spent many weary days at the British Museum. I want to be particularly careful not to exaggerate, so I won't say I read every book. There were three I did not read. They were in Russian. I have been exploring the wisdom of the centuries, and during that time I have not come across a single man who understands woman. (Laughter.) I have made no headway in the study of the sex. In these circumstances I thought the best thing I could do would be to seek the assistance of a lady whose name has been heard of late. So I wrote to Mrs. Spankhurst—(laughter)—to ask her what I should say. Her reply was characteristic. She says:—

> Dear Sir,—I am obliged by yours of the 4th inst., and could not help smiling at your childlike simplicity in thinking you could understand the sex, of which I am so worthy a member. The man who could has not been born. You have probably heard of a book called 'The Light of the World.' Well! that is another name for woman. And what a part she has played in the life of the Universe. Without her the Albert Hall would have closed its doors, and Caxton Hall would have been in the hands of the receivers. I am unable to speak of myself; my virtues are known and appreciated by every member of the Universe. (Laughter.)

I have said that we do not understand woman. But upon one thing I think we are all agreed: that woman is the poetry of the world in the sense that the stars are the poetry of Heaven. (Hear, hear.) Clear, light-giving and harmonious, they are the terrestrial planets that govern mankind, and I am convinced of the hearty response you will give to this toast of 'The Ladies and Mr. James Tregaskis.'" (Prolonged applause.)

Replying for "The Ladies," Mr. Tregaskis said:

"Mr. Myers and Gentlemen.—Some time ago, meeting the Chairman, I asked if I could be put on to a toast for the dinner, and was given this pleasant task of replying for the ladies. I worked at it, and have worked at it for six months, to make it go with a swing. (Laughter.) I have tackled Dr. Fortescue's forty-eight miles of literature, I have resorted to dear old Burton. I read, I made copies, extracts; I wrote the thing about forty times. I got it typewritten, and then I read it to the children. They said, 'Father, it's lovely!' (Laughter). But of course one gets from one's family circle all sorts of compliments. I thought the best thing to do would be to go outside. I went to dear old Karslake. It was in nice form, nicely written, it was epigrammatic, it was fine, it was literature. He said, 'My dear boy, the girls will like it, the women will like it; but the men won't have it at all. It's too thick!' I have chucked up fishing in Norway for it. I thought it alright.

"Mr. Myers and Gentlemen.—You have talked very nicely about the ladies, but you are not to bamboozle us. We are women, we are mothers, we are daughters, we are sweethearts—I am not a Suffragette—and I want to talk to you about domestic matters. (Oh, oh.) What do you do from the time you leave home about eight o'clock in the morning, till the time you get home? You go away with a little black bag, and you go to your Russell Street, you go to your Strand, or to your Brewer Street, or your Charing Cross Road; and you, Albert the Good, you go to your Holborn—or you say you do! I want to know what you do. (Laughter.) We are women, mothers, daughters, sisters. What do you do? Shame on you! You return at twelve o'clock at night, reeking of cigars, hands covered with chalk! We are women, and we have our feelings! Tell us what you do! (Laughter.)

"Mr. Myers and Gentlemen.—We are not cross—we thank you for what you have said; but will you ask us next year? If so, on behalf of the ladies, I thank you."

The toast of "The Trade Journals," coupled with the names of Mr. Marston, Mr. Murray and Mr. Whitaker, was then proposed by Mr. E. F. Wesley:

"There is another trade journal which I suppose our esteemed secretary represents, and therefore, with your permission, I should like to add Mr. Karslake's name. I think this is a very happy opportunity of thanking the trade journals collectively and personally for their intelligent advocacy of everything that is best for the Trade in all its departments. (Applause.)

"We owe much to their accuracy and their kindness in all their dealings, and we have to thank them for joining in the committee and for their advice.

"The Bookseller has had a very long career, so has THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, The Clique not so long, but equally useful, and also The Book Auction Records. (Applause). They do their work and help us, and we thank them most heartily for all their kindness and for all that they have done for us, and I would wish you now to join with me in drinking the toast of 'The Trade Journals,' represented by Mr. Whitaker, Mr. Marston, Mr. Murray and Mr Karslake."

Replying on behalf of The Bookseller, Mr. G. H. Whitaker said that last year when he proposed the toast he ventured to predict a very brilliant future for the Association. He felt sure, from the progress that it had made during the last twelve months, that what he had foretold last year had been very amply fulfilled. Such a large gathering as that present gave the most hopeful promise of a brilliant future.

Mr. E. Walton Marston, responding for THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, said:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen.—As the representative of one of the trade journals included in the toast, I thank you all most heartily for the kind way in which you have received it. I am sorry my father, Mr. R. B. Marston, was unable to be present this evening, for he would have done much more justice to the occasion than I possibly could. I may mention, although it may not interest you, that this is the first occasion I have been called upon to speak in public. I hope, therefore, you will receive what I have to say with very great indulgence. (Applause.) I may add that until four o'clock this afternoon I had no idea I might be called upon to say anything, and this fact has weighed very heavily on my mind the whole evening. Were it not for fear of the awful fate of the Antiquarian Bookseller referred to by Mr. Stevens I would have tried to escape. I thank you all, ladies and gentlemen, for your kind appreciation of the toast." (Applause).

Mr. Murray, replying for The Clique, in the course of an interesting and amusing speech stated that he also was not aware that he would be expected to say anything and had come quite unprepared. He reminded the members of the I.A.A.B. that it was he who suggested the alteration of title from "secondhand" to "antiquarian." "Secondhand" was a phrase he did not like at all; it did not sound nearly so impressive and important as "antiquarian"! (Laughter.) The flourishing state of the Association was very gratifying, and he, in common with the other trade paper representatives included in the toast, would do all he could to promote their interests.

Mr. James Tregaskis proposed the health of "The Chairman," and, after the reply, Mr. Karslake, in an able and telling speech, stated how gratifying it was to all connected with the Association to see so many members and friends present. He referred in warm terms to the guests for their brilliant and entertaining speeches, and whilst disclaiming that the publication he was connected with was a trade journal, he joined the trade journals in their expressions of goodwill.

The thanks of all were due to the artistes for the splendid musical entertainment, to the Hon. Sec. of the Association (Mr. Frank Karslake), and the Dinner Committee for the way they have again worked to make the Dinner a success.

Greenland Mapped at Last

THE WORLD'S LARGEST ISLAND

A COMPLETE map of Greenland, the world's largest island, if we call Australia a continent, is published for the first time in Petermann's Mitteilungen, the great German geographical magazine, from surveys made during two years past by Dr. Mylius-Erichsen, who lost his life when returning from his completed work. Says a correspondent of the New York Sun :—

THE COMPLETED MAP OF GREENLAND.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST ISLAND.

"The trend of the north-east coast is very different from what geographers had supposed. It had been marked on all previous maps as probably extending from about 78° north latitude in a general north-west direction to the Independence Bay of Peary. In fact, it extends for about 300 miles in a north-easterly direction till its most eastern point nearly touches 12° west longitude from Greenwich.

"About forty years ago Dr. A. Petermann spread the view that Greenland probably extended across the Pole and down the other side of the earth to the neighbourhood of Bering Strait. With this idea in view he wrote the instructions for the second German North Polar Expedition under Captain Koldewey, who was sent out to complete if possible the mapping of the east coast.

"He succeeded in reaching by a sledge journey only 77° north, a little beyond Cape Bismarck. We now know that more than 1,000 miles of tortuous coast-line stretches between his highest north and the northern shores of the island.

"Then, in 1905, the Duke of Orleans on the steam-yacht Belgica pushed over 100 miles to the north of Cape Bismarck, but fog prevented him from making a satisfactory survey of the coast-line. Meanwhile, Dr. Mylius-Erichsen formed the plan of making a complete survey of the unknown coast of Greenland from Cape Bismarck north till he joined his survey with that of Peary, and thus complete the map of the island.

"He started on the steamer Denmark from Copenhagen on June 25th, 1906, picked up three Greenlanders and a lot of Eskimo dogs that had been sent to the Faroe Islands to meet him, touched at Iceland, pushed for fourteen days through the ice of the Greenland sea, and reached Koldewey Island on August 13th.

"On the next day he had an easy journey in the ice-free coastal waters to Cape Bismarck, and in the inlet behind it he found a suitable place for the winter quarters of his ship. The little harbour was named Denmark Haven. In the late summer he sledged supplies northward to make provision-depots for the long journey of the following spring, and he also surveyed the coasts both north and south of his winter camp as long as daylight lasted.

"On March 28th last year the great sledge journey was begun. Mylius-Erichsen, Lieutenant Hagen, and the Greenlander Brönlund were to survey every mile of the coast until their explorations joined those of Peary at Independence Bay. Lieutenant Koch, the artist Bertelsen, and the Greenlander Gabrielsen were to push north of Peary Channel to complete the exploration of the eastern edge of Peary Land, which Peary had explored as far south as Wyckoff Island.

"Two detachments went along for weeks to carry food for the survey parties. As it left the ship the expedition numbered ten men, ten sledges, and eighty-six dogs."

The lives of the explorer and of two of his companions were really sacrificed to his mistaken notion of the shape of the northern coast of Greenland. Instead of being practically a smooth curve, as he thought, it presents great peninsulas and inlets, so that his food-supply gave out before he could find his way back to his base. His body, together with the notes of his survey, were found later by a search party. To quote further :—

"Hagen died on November 15th and Mylius-Erichsen ten days later, when only a few miles from the food cache. Brönlund reached it in the moonlight, and when the spring search party this year found his body there it was evident that he had lived for several days after his arrival, but his strength was too far gone for recuperation.

"With trembling hand he filled several pages in his notebook with a description of their wanderings and sufferings and told where his comrades had died. It was impossible to discover and bury their bodies, because the new-fallen snow was very deep. The last honours were paid to Brönlund, and he and his comrades now lie on the great island whose mapping they completed.

"It was wonderfully fortunate that the bottle containing the survey sheets was found slung around the neck of Brönlund. Perhaps the great result of this exploration would never have been known if it were not for this fortunate circumstance. It is thought that Mylius-Erichsen probably did not venture to carry his diaries and collections over the inland ice with him, but left them in some safe depository at Denmark Fiord, where they may ultimately be recovered."

Education and the Principal Aim of Woman

IN one of the Philadelphia public schools is a girl whose forebears held that the principal aim of the life of a woman is marriage. This little girl is well up in most studies, except geography. The other day her teacher sent to her mother to see that the girl studied her lesson. The next day showed no improvement, and the teacher asked her whether she gave the note.

"Yes, ma'am," was the reply.

"And did your mother read it?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"What did she say?"

"She said that she didn't know geography an' she got married, an' my aunt didn't know geography an' she got married, an' you know geography and you haven't got married."—Newsbook.

An American Publisher's Removal

THE publishing department of Paul Elder & Company will be returned in February from New York to the home office in San Francisco. Promptly after the earthquake of April, 1906, the firm erected an attractive building in San Francisco's new business centre on Van Ness Avenue, in which they continued their local and retail business, but found it necessary temporarily to remove their publishing interests. The rebuilding of the city, already so far advanced, the rapid resumption of normal business conditions and especially the renewal of adequate facilities for printing and publishing have now enabled the firm again to concentrate all departments in their San Francisco quarters.

After January 20th, 1909, temporary address, Paul Elder & Company, Publishing Department, Van Ness Avenue, Corner Bush Street, San Francisco.

"Conquering the Arctic Ice"

THIS book of Arctic exploration by Captain Ejnar Mikkelsen has an interest of its own, in so far as the author started on his voyage with no intention of reaching the North Pole. Persistent rumours had existed of undiscovered land lying to the north of Alaska and west of Bank's Land, and the stories of Eskimo natives who professed to have seen this new country derived some support from the theory that the drift and nature of the pack-ice in these regions could only be explained by assuming the existence of an undiscovered island or continent. Captain Mikkelsen has proved that no undiscovered land lies in the region of his expedition, and that the possibility of any further discovery in this direction is practically excluded. But a series of soundings along the north coast of Alaska have also enabled him to establish the important fact that the

CAPTAIN EJNAR MIKKELSEN.

Continental Shelf lies close to that coast and does not indicate any connection with land further north. Flaxman Island became the headquarters of the expedition and the starting-point of the sledge journey over the ice during the winter months. The ship, the Duchess of Bedford, became a wreck in the course of the winter and was abandoned next spring, the crew being sent home by a passing whaler. While the ice was slowly wrecking his ship, Captain Mikkelsen and Mr. Leffingwell were occupied with the preparation and execution of an ice trip which will certainly rank as one of the most daring on record: during those months of 1907, the party was reported lost, as every newspaper reader will remember. After surmounting incredible difficulties, Captain Mikkelsen returned to find his crew living in a house constructed from the fittings of the Duchess of Bedford. He returned to civilisation along the Alaskan coast, via Nome and Yukon, a distance of 3,000 miles, the longest sledge journey ever made by an explorer.

The book is an extraordinary record of wonderful tenacity and perseverance in face of difficulties apparently insurmountable. Financial troubles, storms and blizzards, the dangers of the ice, all were alike encountered with unvarying patience and determination. A feature of the book is the remarkably full and accurate description of Eskimo life and manners. Captain Mikkelsen lived in the closest intimacy with this people, and those who are accustomed to regard them as savages of a very low type will be agreeably enlightened by a perusal of these pages, illustrated with a large number of very interesting photographs and other illustrations.

The book has just been published in most attractive form, fully illustrated, by Mr William Heinemann, without whose assistance the expedition would not have been possible.

Nature Study in Schools

IN the London County Council Schools of Arts and Crafts an exhibition was opened on January 8th which is intended to illustrate the subjects under discussion at the conference of London teachers. By far the most interesting exhibits are those which relate to open-air school work. History rambles in London are also illustrated. Another section deals with educational excursions. It will be a surprise to many people to learn that parties of boys, numbering as many as fifty, have made excursions of a week's duration to places so far away as the Welsh border and the Isle of Wight. These boys came from the very poorest elementary schools. It is due to the headmasters of the schools, working in some cases in conjunction with the Children's Holiday Fund, that the necessary money has been obtained for these excursions. Hitherto they have not been officially recognised, and have only taken place in the Easter holidays. Now, however, there is a clause in the code permitting a week's absence from school for the purpose of such excursions, and it is hoped this will give a fillip to the movement.

Bacon's Excelsior Maps

MESSRS. G. W. BACON & CO., LTD., are now issuing a new series of their well-known Excelsior Wall Maps. The new series is coloured geographically instead of politically. The heights of land are shown by different shades of green and brown, and the depths of water by varying shades of blue. The same bold outlines and lettering as in the original series are retained throughout.

The contours have been prepared with the greatest care from Governmental and other surveys, and these maps will certainly rank as among the most popular, useful and satisfactory aids for carrying out modern ideas of teaching geography.

The maps now ready are Europe, Asia, Africa, North America, Australia and the British Isles. The size is about 5 feet by 4 feet.

A section of the map and full catalogues of other teaching aids for geography will be sent free on application to G. W. Bacon & Co., Ltd., 127, Strand.

Chapman & Hall's Annual Staff Dinner

A most enjoyable evening was spent by the staff of Chapman & Hall at the Horse Shoe Hotel, Tottenham Court Road, on January 5th. Dinner was served at 7 o'clock, after which a most excellent and varied programme of music and recitals was proceeded with. Mr. Arthur Waugh, managing director of the company, presided. Those present were Messrs. G. Etheridge, W. B. Akerman, J. C. Pilcher, W. B. Francis, B. W. Matz, Frank Speaight, Roland Truslove, A. Dykes Spicer, J. G. Bain, Harold Bayley, W. J. Roberts, A. J. Gibbons, E. F. Gibbons, G. H. Page, Edmund Roberts, A. E. Dunnett, F. J. Evans, H. Worrell, W. Collins, G. O. Thomas, H. B. Moody, and W. L. Jones. There is no doubt that the spirit of Dickens has entered into every member of the firm, and the few friends who were present seemed also to have caught the infectious geniality.

After the usual loyal toasts, Mr. Arthur Waugh proposed the toast of the evening—"Prosperity to the Firm of Chapman & Hall." He said that there was such a good feeling of fellowship in Henrietta Street that the newest recruit was always made at home, but that when he compared his own seven years of service with the long careers of many of those whom he saw around him that evening he could not but feel humble. With many topical and personal references Mr. Waugh then recounted the personnel of the firm since the year 1871, when the oldest present member of the staff joined the office, and ended by assuring those present that it was upon such records of long and faithful service that the prosperity of the firm had depended in the past and would assuredly depend in the future. There were said to be employers of labour in the City of London to-day who boasted that they could get out of a man all the good of which he was capable in the course of a couple of years, and that then the man was useless. But the history of labour, like the record of Rehoboam of old, went to prove that one incalculable gift which youth could never bring was the gift of experience, and at Henrietta Street they had learnt, while taking each man's censure and reserving their judgment, to rely as much upon the wise experience of the old as upon the eager impulses of youth. Herein, he believed, lay the secret of the firm's continued prosperity and of the cheerful faces among which it was his privilege to work from day to day.

There were only two other toasts on the list—that of "The Chairman" and that of "The Guests." Mr. W. B. Akerman, who, although not by any means the doyen of the staff, has nevertheless represented the firm as country traveller for twenty-eight years, proposed the former. In the course of his remarks he alluded to the long list of notable names in literature connected with the firm since its formation, including such names as John Forster, George Henry Lewes, John Morley (now Viscount Morley), Mr. George Meredith, Anthony Trollope, and Mr. W. L. Courtney. With such a glorious past, and from what they had heard from the chairman that night, he felt that the outlook in the future with Mr. Arthur Waugh at the helm indicated that the traditions of the great house were likely to be carried on in the future. Mr. B. W. Matz proposed "The Guests."

During the evening Mr. Arthur Waugh recited a poem written in honour of the occasion, from which we quote the following verses :—

HOW DICKENS AND HALL MET

I.

'Tis more than seventy years ago that there was wont to stand
A humble little bookshop at 186 the Strand :
And there one rain-swept winter night a young man might be seen
Enquiring if they'd got the new Old Monthly Magazine.
The man behind the counter very quickly fetched it down.
The boy, no doubt, had thought it cheap at three times half-a-crown :
For as he turned it, eager as a miser in the mint,
That evening, the first time in life, he saw himself in print !
He tucked it 'neath his jacket, and strode out into the sleet,
And his heart was beating louder than the traffic in the street.
A simple, common incident ! Yet one to touch us all,
For the lad who bought was Dickens, and the man who sold was Hall.

II.

Two years went by, and once again that casual couple met,
On a night that no one present here is likely to forget.
The tables now were turned : it was the bookshop's turn to call—
And the man who sold was Dickens, and the man who bought was Hall !
Long time they sat and chatted over Seymour's sporting scheme,
Till Mr. Pickwick rose to life, like Ilion from a dream ;
Till Mr. Pickwick, wreathed in smiles, awoke the world to laughter,
And Dickens and his publishers were one for ever after.

Mr. Frank Speaight, the famous Dickens reciter, who was one of the guests of the evening, entertained the company with three recitals, the last of which, his own version of "Casabianca," caused such fits of laughter as to make one feel a little anxious about the sides of his audience.

During the rest of the evening songs were given by Messrs. H. T. Worrell, W. B. Francis, H. B. Moody, A. E. Dunnett, A. Dykes Spicer, F. J. Evans, E. F. Gibbons, Roland Truslove, W. L. Jones and B. W. Matz, and a right good festive occasion was brought to a close with "Auld Lang Syne."

The following "howlers" by schoolboys are given in the new number of The University Correspondent :—

To kill a butterfly you pinch its borax.

The bloodvessels are the veins, arteries, and artilleries.

A ruminating animal is one that chews its cubs.

Algebra was the wife of Euclid.

The masculine of vixen is vicar.

Great Work of the School Teacher

How little the world knows of those who are doing its most arduous and often its most important work! In education, for example. The headmasters of the public schools are honoured and well known. The assistant-masters, too, have their place in the social world. But what of the men who are charged with the far more difficult and equally important task of educating the masses? Why is their work not better known and more generously recognised?

At the King's Hall, Holborn, on January 7th, commenced a conference of London teachers, mostly drawn from elementary schools. Here one could see what manner of men and women they are who are helping to shape the future of England by moulding the minds of the generation which will follow us. It was impossible not to be struck by their enthusiasm, their interest in their profession, their sanity, their desire to learn.

There are thousands of men doing well to-day who will tell you that they owe a very great deal to their teachers in elementary schools. Not only for what they were taught, but for the influences brought to bear upon them in their impressionable years, for the stimulus communicated to them by active minds, for the healthy spirit of sportsmanship and honour cultivated both in work hours and at play.

INFLUENCE OF WOMEN

As for the influence which a woman teacher can and often does exercise over her girls, it is incalculable. Only those who know intimately the conditions of life in the under-world of cities can even faintly realise the value of the example of a sensible, kind-hearted, pure-minded girl among the children of the slums. It opens out to them an ideal of life they have never dreamed of. It keeps them straight and decent. It shows them which is the "right turning," and helps them to take it when the moment for choosing comes.

OPEN-AIR EDUCATION

There was a discussion on "Open-air Education," which includes both nature-study and schools out of doors for defective or delicate children. Instead of denouncing it as a fad all the most intelligent headmasters and teachers have taken it up with interest and enthusiasm.

They told how they took children out to study animal and plant life, to find fossils and shells. They told of long, wonderful days in the country. They explained how "school journeys" could be undertaken, a whole batch of children being carried off to some country place for a week or a fortnight in term time to have their interests stimulated and their minds enlarged.

A GARDEN SCHOOL FOR CHILDREN

Miss Beer gave a particularly interesting account of a garden school for children who were not strong enough to attend an ordinary centre. They were taught the progress of civilisation by playing at cave-dwellers, then being Druids; afterwards choosing a chief for convenience and better protection. Geography was imparted by making rivers and lakes and continents and seas on the garden path; arithmetic by pulling rhubarb and picking gooseberries; and domestic economy by taking charge of the caretaker's baby and learning that pork, pease-pudding and pickles were not a suitable diet for infants of tender years.

No wonder Dr. Rose, assistant educational adviser to the London County Council, would like to see all children educated partly on these lines.—The Daily Mail.

Hints for Copying and Postal Clerks

WHEN folding letters with enclosures it is an excellent plan to pin all together, or so to fold them that the recipient cannot take one out without taking all. Everybody has had experience of the necessity for searching through the waste paper basket, or the file of old envelopes, for the missing paper money in some form or other, or other enclosure which has been overlooked, because it was "left in the envelope."

TO PREVENT CHEQUES, &C., BEING CUT

Cheques, drafts, postal and money orders ought to be folded so that it is impossible to cut through them in opening the mail with a knife or envelope opener. Some twenty years ago or so an American brought out a patent clipper for opening envelopes. You put the envelope under a sort of guillotine, gave a handle on top a sharp blow with your fist, and the whole of the top edge of the envelope was cut off. It was a very ingenious attempt to make money by saving time, but in practice you found that you cut a strip out of so many cheques, drafts, &c., that the money made was lost in sticking it together again.

Cheaper Books for the Blind

WHAT is to be known as the New York system of "point" reading for the blind has been perfected by William B. Wait, Principal of the New York Institute for the Blind, and B. B. Huntoon, the Superintendent of the American Printing House for the Blind, at Louisville. By cheapening the cost of printing such literature the system is expected to permit many blind persons to purchase reading matter. The Sunday-school lessons in the new "point" system for the blind will be sent to press in a week, and it is expected that the entire system of religious instruction for the eighty thousand blind persons in the United States will undergo marked changes. Hitherto, because of the raised surfaces, only one side of the paper could be used, making the cost of a book or paper for a blind reader a large item. The New York system is so arranged that both sides of the paper can be used. The embossing on one side of the page is between the lines of the embossing on the other. The cost of production will be reduced by fully 40 per cent.—New York Publishers' Weekly.

Highly Trained Young Women Fretting Their Hearts Out

THERE were several sectional meetings in the afternoon of January 8th at the Technological Institute in connection with the Conference of Teachers at Manchester. Dealing with the question of teachers (Sir Henry F. Hibbert presiding), Miss S. J. Hale (principal of the Lodge Hill Training College, Liverpool) said that more teachers were now being trained than could find employment, and thus money, time, and brain were being spent unprofitably. Mr. Ernest Gray urged that local authorities should decline to make further provision for the training of teachers until the policy of the Board of Education was clearly defined. There were, he said, "highly trained young women fretting their hearts out at home, a burden on their parents, literally hundreds of pounds having been spent on their training. The educational needs of the schools cried aloud for more certificated teachers, and the Board of Education stood idly by, an imperfectly informed President telling the House of Commons: 'I am not aware that they are experiencing unusual difficulties in obtaining appointments. In fact, such evidence as the Board possesses indicates that the demand for teachers is still in excess of the supply.' The intelligence department of the Board of Education was as defective as that of the Army at the outbreak of the South African War."

METHOD GASPEY-OTTO-SAUER FOR THE LEARNING OF MODERN LANGUAGES

The advantage which this Method has over all others is its combination of theory and practice, i.e. a clear scientific exposition of the Grammar, combined with practical conversational exercises. By strictly adhering to this Method the great difficulty of enabling the pupil to speak and write foreign languages has been successfully solved for the first time. The New Editions have been improved and kept up to date.

Education in China

Until to-day we have heard little of the scheme for founding a University on Western lines in China since Lord William Cecil expounded his views on the subject four or five months ago. The plan, which had active support at Oxford and Cambridge, was to organise an educational centre or University independent of any missionary body, yet in sympathy with their work. It was felt on the one hand that there were many who, while unwilling to subscribe to existing missionary societies, would not be adverse to helping forward Western education in China, and on the other that many missionary bodies would be glad to be relieved of the expense of providing purely secular education and the costly apparatus that modern scientific study requires. The matter is one of great difficulty, as the promoters of the scheme recognised. It is only recently that the real meaning of education has been understood in China; the young men there learned to read and write simply because the State examinations demanded it, and the idea of educating a man morally, physically and intellectually to make him a good citizen was never entertained. That the Chinaman now frequently sends his sons to school mainly for the sake of education is one of the most noticeable features in modern China, and one that makes this period of great danger. Western ideas have taken a firm root in China, and it has become incumbent upon the West to provide the leaders of China with adequate mental equipment that, in Lord William Cecil's words, the country's thought may be reconstructed in harmony with modern knowledge. We believe that the joint British and American scheme will be warmly received, for the number of young Chinese who are being sent to the American universities shows that university education is keenly sought for.—Times of India, December 21st, 1908.

The Church Militant

It is quite refreshing to see a reviewed author taking things in the following style—not lying down by any means. The Times reviewer seems to have quite stroked the Rev. P. H. Ditchfield the wrong way, and in a reply, published we are glad to see in the same paper, he says:—

"I cannot allow your reviewer to ride off on the high horse saying, 'It is as useless to argue with those who impute the dissolution of monasteries to Henry's greed as with those who impute the French Revolution to Mirabeau's ambition or Robespierre's vanity.' I have no intention of arguing the matter with him, or of discussing the causes which led to the destruction of monasteries in England. It is well known that there were contributory causes besides the greed of Henry; but most authorities are agreed that the latter was the one supreme overwhelming cause without which the dissolution would have been postponed for many years. But that is not the question. Your reviewer insults me with impertinent observations because I have expressed the same views which are held by Abbot Gasquet, Canon Overton, Lingard, Fuller, and many other historians. Do the conclusions of these writers savour rather of a childish history than 'of a rational history for grown-up people'? As I read history I believe that the conclusions of these and other eminent historians are right; if they are proved to be wrong, I err in good company, and ought not to be exposed to the virulent abuse of this extraordinary reviewer."

The Genius of Shakespeare and Dickens

In a long and interesting review in The Times of "The Shakespeare Problem Restated," by G. G. Greenwood, M.P. (Lane), and "William Shakespeare: Player, Playmaker and Poet," a reply to Mr. George Greenwood, M.P., by H. C. Beeching, D.Litt., Canon of Westminster (Smith, Elder), the reviewer says:—

"'The Shakespeare Problem Restated' is not, we submit, a title pre-eminently suggestive of explosive quality in a book. The work in question has, at any rate, been reposing upon our shelves for a considerable time without exhibiting signs of latent dynamic force: and it was not until we caught sight of Canon Beeching handling the book in question with what seemed an exaggerated amount of precaution, and throwing it into a water tank before proceeding to a careful examination of its contents, that our attention was forcibly directed to the subject. Having assured ourselves now that the pedestal of the national poet is in no immediate danger of levitation, it may not perhaps be unprofitable to try to discover what the bearing and application of the Shakespeare Problem may conceivably be.

"Great as the advance of comparative psychology has been in quite recent years, the problem of supreme genius is hardly one of those to which we can expect an even proximate solution in the near future. At what stages or under what conditions of national growth supremely great men are most likely to be produced is, to say the least, problematical. Among all the attempts that have been made to explain insurgent greatness, Shakespeare's own—namely, that it is probably due to some latent strain of blue blood or aristocratic lineage—has proved the least adequate, the least satisfying. It may be a reproach to the science of eugenics, but it is the manifest truth to say that a great poet is far less likely to prove the son of a Lord Keeper than the son of the smallest yeoman. The large majority of our greatest writers have, in fact, emerged from the ranks of the lower middle class, to which there is no doubt that Shakespeare himself belonged. That many or most of them have emerged from milieus the most unlikely is matter of common knowledge to everyone except the man who happens to be holding a brief on the other side. The case of one of the greatest names after Shakespeare also points to the same conclusion. When asked by one of those wiseacres who are convinced that in order to write good English a man must be taught to write bad Latin, where his son was educated, Mr. John Dickens replied with considerable aplomb that his son—er—well, his son—er—might be almost said, in a sense, to have educated himself. The street, the warehouse, Mr. Creakle, an attorney's office, the reporters' gallery, and post-chaise—such was the education that equipped a young man of twenty-four to preside at the banquet of literature at an unprecedented age, to make the best speeches in London, to go into the best society, to set the table in a roar, to lead every company in which he mixed, to travel, acquire French and Italian with ease, and write the most animated letters known to the modern world.

"At every turn we encounter this same phenomenon of the alchemy of genius turning sand into gold. That Shakespeare's should be regarded as a singular case, transcending the common law of genius, is due, we believe, in large measure, to the extravagance of Shakespeare's eulogists."

The Mountains of the Moon

When Lhasa had been visited, Ruwenzori remained—save for the gorges of the Brahmaputra—the only great geographical mystery unveiled. Happily the unveiling has not killed the romance, for the truth is stranger than any forecast. If the Mountains of the Moon are lower than we had believed, they are far more wonderful. Here you have a range almost on the Equator, rising not from an upland, like Kilimanjaro, but from the "Albertine Depression," which is 600 or 700 feet below the average level of Uganda; a range of which the highest peaks are a thousand feet higher than Mont Blanc, which is draped most days of the year in mist, and accessible from the plains only by deep-cut glens choked with strange trees and flowers. The altitude would in any case give every stage of climate from torrid to arctic, but the position on the Line adds something exotic even to familiar mountain sights, draping a glacier moraine with a tangle of monstrous growths, and swelling the homely Alpine flora into portents. The freakish spirit in Nature has been let loose, and she has set snowfields and rock arêtes in the heart of a giant hothouse.—From "The Mountains of the Moon," in Blackwood's Magazine for January, 1909.

English and American Libraries Compared

IN reply to certain disparaging comments on the management of European libraries which have appeared in the American Press, the Library World for January, 1909, has published a pointed rejoinder, in which it is shown that the accomplishment of the American Municipal Libraries is very feeble compared with the work of European Libraries, while the cost is exceedingly extravagant. The British ratepayer, who occasionally growls at the 1d. rate levied for the Public Library, will be comforted to know that in three large American Libraries it requires an expenditure of £138,000 and a staff of 624 to circulate in one year 3,775,000 volumes. Three British Libraries, ranking in size with the American ones, spend £42,000, with a staff of 268, in circulating 4,383,000 volumes. Every book circulated in these American Libraries costs 11d., as against 2¼d. in British Libraries. Again, the expenditure per head of the population is 2s. 2d. in American towns, and only 8d. in the English ones. Other extraordinary examples are cited to show that there is no ground for the American claims to any kind of superiority in Library work, unless it be extravagant expenditure and enormous staffs.

One leading American Library, in the Central building, employs 90 persons to issue 287,165 volumes per annum, at a cost estimated to be £6,000. The Central Library of an English town employs 9 persons to circulate 322,800 volumes at a cost of £405. It will thus be seen that in proportion to expenditure the work of British Libraries is infinitely superior, more economical, and better appreciated by the public than anything the American Libraries can show.

The Library World editorial ends with the following humorous and pointed anecdote:—

> "A farmer of the old-fashioned school was being chaffed about the poverty-stricken look of one of his crops, as compared with a fine fat crop on the field of a neighbouring farmer. 'Oh! yes,' said the farmer, 'it's easy enough to get plenty of juice from a gravestone, if you butter it thick enough.'"

The American Library system is a buttered gravestone; but it reverses the moral of the story by showing only an indifferent crop in spite of the profuse manuring.

All this brag about the greatness and superiority of American Libraries puts one irresistibly in mind of the story of the over-manured field.

England's Gratitude to Dickens

MISS MARY ANGELA DICKENS, daughter of the novelist's eldest son, was the guest of the Gloucester Branch of the Fellowship, at a recent meeting, and, in replying to the chairman's speech of welcome, said that there was really nothing she could say on the subject which brought them together that they did not know a great deal better than she did. Miss Dickens said that when she went to gatherings of that sort she found that everybody knew so much more about her grandfather's books and about her grandfather himself than she did, that the best thing she could do was to hold her tongue. There was one thing that always struck her when she saw kind feeling exhibited, and that was how unjust was the reproach which was so often brought against what was called the public—the reproach of fickleness. She thought that when it was said the public was fickle, it was really meant that the public was very generous and trusting. The public continually thought that it had found the real thing and expressed itself to that effect; then by-and-by it found that it had not, and it looked for something else. That was not fickleness, but simply bringing somebody or something to the proof and finding it wanting. But when the much maligned public did find the real thing, it stuck to it; there was no doubt about that.—From the January No. of The Dickensian.

A PARIS BOOK BARGAIN.—A few months ago a lady living at Houilles sold to a Paris bookdealer a number of illustrated books for the sum of 60 francs (28s.), says a Morning Leader wire. She has just learned that the same books were afterwards sold by auction for 17,000 francs (£680) and she has applied to the judicial authorities to inquire whether the books were sold by the dealer who bought them from her, with a view to bringing an action against him if he did so.

Hope for Parents

By Frank Elias

The following circular has just come to hand :—

For parents alarmed at the prospect of their sons abandoning their training for remunerative professions in order to adopt the uncertain life of literature, there is now a word of hope. To such parents at one time only one course seemed open, namely, to make the best of things : possibly to send the young man to some school of journalism.

To-day, however, all that is changed. Parents need not submit. Their children will do that, and will do it quite willingly. Further, the parent need not enroll his son as a member of any school. He will merely send him to the Institute for the Discouragement of Incipient Genius

The Proprietors of this Institution realise that what is wanted to-day is not a school to teach people to write, but a school to teach them not to write. Parents will doubtless ask how this end is attained. The explanation is simple. The one certain way to encourage a young writer to continue is for editors to accept his work. But editors do not always consider the parents' point of view. They incline to use work without enquiring of the author whether his mother is aware of his absence. The Proprietors of the Institute saw therefore, that if the editor was to be prevented from accepting the author's work, the latter must be made to do work so bad as to be impossible of acceptance. The Institute is the result.

We guarantee that no young man, however naturally talented, and however successful with his first contributions, will ever, after the first week with us, succeed in getting a single line of his work published in any reputable paper in the kingdom. We care not if he is a Carlyle or a Browning. Let him come into our hands, and

His Career is Over.

Every editor will mark him down for ever, and even if later in life he tries to write again, he will be too notorious to be considered.

Our course includes—Instruction in Bad Grammar, False Quantities, Misspelling, Unsound Syntax, Blank verse Prose, together with careful training in Dulness, Vapidity, Discursiveness, the use of the elench, &c.

Instruction in the Use of the Split Infinite is Charged for Extra

Weekly classes are held too, for instruction in the employment of " Different to," &c.

That our course is successful need hardly be said. During last week alone our pupils received 931 rejection forms, some of them from

The Most Unimportant Papers .

Three pupils were even refused the use of the advertisement columns of a village weekly. Yet one of the three when he came to us, showed the highest promise

It may be said, " But will pupils rebel ? "

That is for the parent to decide. But if once the latter exerts enough authority to get his son within our walls, we undertake that he will go through our course. Of how we compel his obedience we need not say much, except to remark that in extreme cases, we read him specimens of the work done by some of our graduates on leaving. In order to get us to stop he naturally undertakes to write our exercise, which is only slightly worse than the day before. But each step he thus takes is further from literature and nearer the desire of his parent, and rarely, when the course is completed, has the pupil further desire to write. When offered a position in trade or profession he gladly accepts. But read one of to-day's testimonials :—

Dear Sir,—My son wanted to be a poet. I had desired him to join me in jam making. So successful was your treatment, however, that not only has he been manufacturing jam for the past year, but he has added a sausage plant to our premises.—Yours faithfully.

The British Empire (and Japan)

By W. Bisiker, F.R.G.S.

The Geographical Publishing Company, of Chichester Rents, Chancery Lane, send us " The British Empire (and Japan)," an excellent modern Atlas, having 213 maps and 272 illustrations, numerous tables and diagrams, with text concerning commercial products, statistics, histories, features, resources, commerce, industries, scenery, and the physical and economic conditions of the world. An admirable work suitable for the youngest and even the most advanced of scholars, and one in which the conventional lines of the atlases that have been in vogue for the last two or three generations have not been followed. An attempt has been made—very successfully, we think—to make the maps interesting in themselves, and to bring out clearly the chief points and features. It is certainly a wonderful production for 21s., in many respects the best of its kind.

Whitaker's Almanack

No one who is interested in education or commerce or politics or anything else can well afford to be without that wonderful work, Whitaker's Almanack, which improves with the years. It is a perfect " Who's Who " in a great many walks of life—e.g., you want to know who represents Japan here or who represents us in Japan, or any other country civilised enough to have a representative, Whitaker tells you in " half a jiffey," whatever portion of time that may be. The light of the beautiful Index to Whitaker's is hid under a bushel of small type ; however, magnifying glasses are very cheap.

Whitaker's Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage, and Companionage for 1909 is also ready to answer almost any possible inquiries, and is, like the Almanack, a beautiful bit of printing.

School-Books and Politics

[The following extracts are from a very interesting letter in last week's Spectator.—Ed. P.C.]

Sir,—One of the wisest teachers, William Cory of Eton, recommended a man who was to follow him in his work to write a letter if he felt aggrieved, and to burn it next morning. The first stage in this twofold process relieved the feelings, the second prevented them from harming the writer or any one else. The schoolmaster usually is inarticulate,—the ordinary schoolmaster I mean : for unmuzzled Head-Masters have a yearly fling. We ordinary men, however, have our feelings and opinions, and many of us could, and we would, contribute a good deal of valuable information on the question of education. As I have just finished a period of work that has lasted for fourteen full weeks with never an evening off or a week-end, I feel free to kick my heels, and I should like in so doing to kick " Parent's " as well (see Spectator, December 26th 1908).

Into his attack upon grammar and its terminology I need not follow him. But the sting of " Parent's " letter is in its latter part—the introduction of politics. And yet only a few days ago a pupil of mine volunteered the remark to me that it was a pity that politics were not taught ! My excellent " Parent," some boys come from Tariff Reform homes, some from Free Trade homes. At home some hear Home Rule, others Unionism. Some are Little Englanders, others Imperialists : and so on. No book was ever written that would suit every boy (and his parents) in a division. The important thing is that there should be some politics in every book, and the more so in these days of pleasure on the eve of catastrophe. The master who deals with " dead languages," that embody living ideas, cannot help mentioning that sea power is the same whether it defends the food* of Athens, Rome, or England : that the nation that will not fight will lose its independence, whether it be Egypt or Britain. As long as the boy will think, and, still better, discuss his doubts or convictions at home, the teacher feels that he has helped to make a citizen, and that is not always the product of public school and home.

Well, there, Sir, is my letter ; and now you may burn it.—I am, Sir, &c.,

Schoolmaster.

[*We opened our ever-welcome Spectator after writing the articles on " Education in History " in the P.C. this week, and were delighted to find " Schoolmaster " hits so hard the very nail we tried to drive in.—Ed. P.C.]

Kipling's School Slang Philologically Considered

A GERMAN or Swedish philologist from Upsala with the name of Fredrik Schmidt has lately written "a study in English school-life and schoolboy slang, as represented in Kipling's 'Stalky and Co.'"; and his results are certainly astonishing. The German philologist pursues with "impenetrable seriousness" the subtleties of English schoolboy humour through thirty-five closely printed pages of the Englische Studien. He begins, says a writer in The Academy, whose summary we quote, "with an elaborate scheme of contents, and after a short introduction plunges into the 'phonology,' the 'inflections,' and the 'word-formations' of Kiplingese."

One chapter deals with vocabulary and style, in which, it is said, "Mr. Schmidt surpasses himself in his treatment of transferred appellations of human beings." Some specimens follow:—

"Terms of human beings which have developed a generalised sense from a primary personal one.

"Dutchman denotes at first nationality and then means 'a contemptible, stupid person,' a sense due to the rivalry between the English and the Dutch—e.g., in the seventeenth century (cf. Reinius, p. 162). Thus 'I'm a Dutchman' = 'a worthless fellow,' is a usual way of emphasising an assertion. To increase the effect of humour Beetle says: 'If he don't think the house is putrid with it (money-lending), I'm several Dutchmen, that's all' (111).

"A similar effect is produced by the expression: 'If King can make anything out of this, I'm a blue-eyed squatteroo' (231).

"The name of an author becomes the name of the book written by him. Thus: 'You'd better carry my Jorrocks' (5). Jorrock was a great zoological scholar.

"The whole article would bear quotation; it is full of this kind of portentous humour staggering under the guise of gravity. Could anything be richer than this: 'An abstract substantive becomes a concrete substantive with an appellative sense. Corridor-caution = one who excites alarm or astonishment in the corridor'? The value of these philological notes to German scholars must be immense.

"The next section is concerned with school-work and organisation, discipline, dress, pastimes, sport, and games. Notes on examinations and discipline include a reference to Mr. Clutton Brock's 'Eton at the Present Day' for the procedure at a 'flogging'; and the philologist declares that 'bag is a word for wide trousers, and is then used as a verb, meaning "drop stealthily in one's trousers," "steal," "take."' Among pastimes, sport, and games, 'besides the usual "spree," "frolic,"' there are lark, bend, jamboree, gloat, football, cricket, golf (a cleek is 'a club bent at right angles in order to hit the golf-ball'), fives, and marbles. The terms for 'inebriated,' 'be afraid,' and 'run away' receive a section to themselves, followed by 'terms expressing various feelings and acts of enmity and friendship,' which cover such phrases and words as 'get beans,' 'had him on toast,' 'jaw,' 'hector,' 'jape,' 'chivy,' 'scrag'; but Mr. Schmidt can find only one phrase of friendship, 'to freeze on to.'

"Some difficulty was encountered over the word 'frabjous'; the commentator, not finding it in any dictionary, suggested that it 'may be a comical corruption of fabulous,' but added in a footnote, 'As I have been told later on, the word frabjous is to be found in some book written by Lewis Carroll.' It is to be hoped that Mr. Schmidt may soon turn his attention to the philological curiosities of ''Twas brillig.'

"A hobbledehoy is 'a youth approaching manhood'; a piffler is 'a man with a moral end in view, but nothing to back it, but a habit of talking sentimental rubbish' (see 'Cent. Dict.'), ex., 'Don't jaw, you fat piffler.' And Mr. Schmidt perpetuates the interpretation of 'damn' as the 'Indian dam, an ancient copper coin.' He finds no difficulty in tracing much of Mr. Kipling's phraseology to a Biblical source.

"Mr. Schmidt has detected a 'foreign influence' in much of the schoolboy talk, such as in the use of 'cave,' 'twiggez-vous'; and he notes that a French influence can be 'traced' in such phrases as 'I'm not smokin' aujourd'-hui, parce que je jolly well pense that we'll be suivi.'"

"The Cleansing of a City"

AN UGLY VOLUME

MESSRS. GREENING AND CO., LTD., have just published, at the price of 1s. net, a work entitled "The Cleansing of a City." We should be happy to subscribe five guineas to a fund for defraying the cost of sending a copy to every Member of both Houses of Parliament and to every school teacher. There surely can be no general knowledge by Parliament of many of the facts or alleged facts described in this work—e.g., that since the German Emperor cleansed Berlin and the Municipal authorities swept out Brussels, London contains more foreign bullies "dependent for existence" on the "ownership and exploitation of women" than any city "since the fall of the Roman Empire." It is said that these foreign panderers have formed a syndicate for importing foreign women and decoying and ruining our women and girls, and for fighting our police in the Courts. There are thousands of these foreign devils and blackmailers now at work in London. Mr. George R. Sims deserves the thanks of all for the courage with which he has exposed this most dangerous stream of foreign vice, diverted into England, and not confined to London, because it was too foul even for Berlin and Brussels. There is plenty of native vice, and everybody must agree that this syndicate of foreign bullies and every member of it ought to be expelled. England ought to be made too hot for them. It is too absurd and incongruous for our British Government to shake its head and solemnly lecture the Belgian Government on the atrocities and immoralities on the Congo, when it winks at these atrocities and immoralities on the Thames. Recently in two parishes of Soho there were over a thousand of these foreign bullies, and the infection is spreading to the suburbs and to other towns.

Surely it is for the legislative assembly, as Bishop Welldon points out, to deal with this foreign cancer.

Other matters dealt with in this ugly little volume are:—"Unclean Fiction," by Dr. Barry, "Noxious Literature," by Dr. Horton, "Cheap and Nasty Journals," by the Editor of the book, "The Moral Training of Youth," &c. For these the hope is in education rather than legislation, and it is for that reason we wish to see this book in the hands of every school teacher in the country.

Little Niggers and Anglo-Saxon Kings

SPEAKING at a meeting of the Historical Association, held at University College, Gower Street, on January 8th, Mr. Sidney Webb, London County Council, said that history was the greatest element in the teaching of what they called culture, and no man or woman could arrive at a state of culture without a knowledge of history in its widest sense. History freed men from the bondage of the present and the domination of self.

Dealing with the way in which history was taught, Mr. Webb said that when years ago he was a clerk at the Colonial Office, he found that little black boys sitting on a form in Sierra Leone were beginning their study of history by learning the names of the Anglo-Saxon kings. (Laughter.) He tried to alter this, and one of his ideas was to teach them the time of day by the clock. That, however, was knocked on the head, for he was informed that there was only one clock in Sierra Leone, and that was at Government House. (Laughter.) He then thought of writing a history of the world from the point of view of Sierra Leone. (Laughter.) This was where the teaching of history fell short. It did not treat the subject from the point of view of those who were being taught.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE STOP AT 1800

Personally, he had learnt most of his history through examinations, and he thought the examiners were more wise when they asked the student his views on feudalism than when they asked him to name the date of certain events, for dates alone were not history. Of all the condemnations which would be passed upon Oxford and Cambridge, the most severe would be in consequence of their exclusion of the history of the Nineteenth Century from their historical course.

What Time Do You Get Your "P.C.?"

AS THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR is posted to subscribers every Friday before 5.30, it ought to reach all parts of the United Kingdom on Saturday morning. If any of our readers have cause for complaint in this respect, we shall be glad if they will look at the post mark date and time, and send us the band if there has been delay.

Choice and Rare Books in Messrs. Maggs Bros.' New Catalogue

SIXPENCE will be well invested by lovers of old books in No. 244 Catalogue of the Choice and Rare Books, Illuminated MSS., &c., for sale by Messrs. Maggs Bros., 109 Strand, London. It contains some most interesting and excellent reproductions of illustrations, also particulars of a fourth folio, Shakespeare, and other rare Shakespeares, 1st editions of works by Tennyson, Stevenson, and Henley, the very rare 1st edition of "Uncle Tom's Cabin"; the first folio collected edition of Taylor, the Water Poet; a Caxton of 1473, &c. Messrs. Maggs have very kindly lent us the extremely interesting reproduction of an illustration from Malory's Knights of the Round Table. King Arthur must have looked rather undignified, both when he took the chair and when he vacated it! But it was a fine way to prevent jealousy as to who should sit near to him. Mr. Maggs had better adopt it at the next annual dinner.

The Edinburgh School Atlas

MESSRS. W. & A. K. JOHNSTON (London and Edinburgh) have just published an entirely new atlas for schools. The plates from which this atlas is printed are entirely new, the black and hills having been specially engraved on separate copper plates by the very latest photo-mechanical process in Messrs. Johnston's studio at Edina works. The atlas is specially adapted to the teaching requirements of the present day, showing as it does the physical features by varying shades of brown, political boundaries by hard red lines, and the depths of the sea by different shades of blue. In order not to overcrowd the maps, only the names of the most important places have been inserted, but the list of names (6,000), of which the latitude and longitude are given, is very complete. The location of places by this means is a very useful exercise for junior scholars. The projection on which each map is drawn is indicated. The natural scale, scales of miles and kilometres are given, and, where possible, an inset map of the British Isles, or a part thereof, on the same scale as the main map, is given for purposes of comparison. There are three pages of letterpress dealing briefly with the form and size of the earth, elementary map projections, and the scales of maps. Messrs. W. & A. K. Johnston are also makers of many excellent globes for school and college use, ranging in size from 1¾ ins. at 3s. to 30 inches, £16 16s.

The Healer, a small 3d. magazine on spiritual healing, published by Hunter & Longhurst, 58 and 59, Paternoster Row, contains in its January number articles by the Right Rev. Bishop Mylne, on "Some Aspects of Our Lord's Miracles," and James Moore Hickson on "Our Lord's Attitude towards Sickness and Disease."

Musical Copyright and Perforated Rolls

THE important decision made at Bow Street a few months ago, in which it was held that perforated roll was not a copy of a musical work, and is not, therefore, an infringement of copyright, has, as we anticipated, come before a higher Court on appeal in Mabe v. Connor. The case came before the Lord Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Bigham and Mr. Justice Walton sitting as a Divisional Court, and Mr. Danckwerts, K.C., appeared on behalf of the appellants. The Lord Chief Justice, in giving judgment, said the Court was bound by the decision of the Court of Appeal in Boosey v. White, and that the Magistrate's decision must be upheld. Mr. Justice Bigham expressed himself as not satisfied that the rolls did not constitute a piracy, but the decision of the Court of Appeal precluded him from so deciding. The appeal was, therefore, dismissed, but leave for further appeal was granted.

The S. and S. Practical Object Drawing Handbooks

MESSRS. SCHOFIELD & SIMS, LTD., of Huddersfield, are the publishers of a series of Handbooks for Teachers on Practical Object Drawing. Mr. R. E. Green is the author. The series comprises a six years' graduated course, and one of the chief features is the introduction of natural objects in place of the artificial objects so often used. How much more interested children would be if, instead of piling up a cone, a cube, a triangle, and a few other shapes, the teacher were to give them some such article as an inkstand, pocket-book, cup and saucer, jam-pot, flower-pot, &c.? This is a sensible and most useful series.

Another useful manual for teachers is Book III. of Physical Exercise, for children from 12—14 years of age. It is illustrated with good photographs, and with Books I. and II., should be in great demand. All interested should send for a copy of Messrs. Schofield & Sims' general catalogue of School Series, just issued, dated January—March, 1909.

Regarding the New Edition of the 250 Recipe Cookery Book

GOOD cookery is the foundation of good health and good temper, and we welcome the second revised and improved edition of "The 250 Recipe Cookery Book," just published at 1s. by Messrs. Evans Bros., Byron House, Fleet Street. The title is "The 250 Recipe Cookery Book," and in addition to these recipes, each of which represents an appetising, inexpensive dish, there are valuable hints on methods of roasting, boiling, pastry-making, &c. We wish a copy were in use in every kitchen—no book would add so much to the gaiety of our nation—and we want it when our skies are so leaden, like underdone pastry.

Booksellers Sell Nearly 30,000 Copies of The People's "Gladstone"

BOOKSELLERS may care to know that nearly 30,000 copies of the Daily Chronicle popular edition of Lord Morley's "Life of Gladstone" have been sold through "the trade" since it was published at the end of October. These figures—which, of course, do not include direct individual sales—show how effectively booksellers have handled the edition, and how well worth their while it was to do so. They also show what may be done during the spring with a biography so full of vitality as the "Gladstone," in a five-shilling edition.

An Educational Work on Bee-Keeping

MR. G. M. Doolittle, author of "Scientific Queen-Rearing," has just published another work, which will doubtless be very useful to bee-keepers in this country as well as in his own country, the United States. The new brochure is entitled "A Year's Work in an Out-Apiary" (61 pp., price 50 cents), and is published by the A. I. Root Company, of Medina, U.S.A., publishers of the semi-monthly, Gleanings in Bee Culture. This illustrated work is devoted to practical bee-keeping in out-apiaries for beginners as well as experts, and shows how it is possible to get an average of 114 pounds of honey per colony even in a poor season. We know nothing about bee-keeping, but it is one of the oldest of human industries and a fascinating one also. Mr. Doolittle is an enthusiast, and as a natural consequence his work is done from the heart as well as the head; it fairly hums with good suggestions all through.

It opens in this pleasant fashion:

> "The sun rose bright and clear on the morning of April 14th, 1905, the morning of my sixtieth birthday; and as old Sol peered over the hill-top in all his golden splendour, kissing the swelling buds and cheering all animated nature with the intuition that 'Spring has come,' I proposed to Mr. Clark, my partner, that we go over to the out-apiary, five miles distant, and set the bees out of the cellar, the bees in the home apiary having been set out three days previously."

As in Medina, Ohio, the roads are under deep mud or snow six months out of the twelve, Mr. Doolittle cannot use his auto all the time for getting about, so he uses it as a motor for the grindstone, churn, feed-cutter, buzz-saw, &c.

Religious Tract Society Cricket Club

FIFTH ANNUAL DINNER

THANKS to the generosity of Mr. James Bowden (R.T.S. Lay Secretary and President of the Cricket Club) 64 members of the staff spent a most enjoyable evening at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet Street, on Wednesday evening, January 6th. The Cricket Club had a record season in 1908—viz., 12 wins and 2 losses. Mr. Wm. Gribble won the Batting Prize, and Mr. R. Gray the Bowling Prize. The well-served dinner was followed by the usual speeches. After dinner oratory is often a thing to be endured and not enjoyed, but on this as on former occasions of the Club's dinners, the speakers were in great form. After the toast of "The King and Queen" had been loyally received, Mr G. T. Betts, in his usual able manner, proposed "The Health of the R.T.S. Committee." The Rev. A. R. Buckland, M.A., recently returned from China, proposed "The Health of the Staff," and the Rev. R. C. Earle, M.A., responded in a very pleasant and humorous manner. "The R.T.S.C.C.," the toast of the evening, was proposed by the Editor of The Boy's Own Paper, Mr. G. A. Hutchison, in a very genial manner, Mr. Wm. Gribble responding. "The Health of the President" was proposed by the Rev. C. H. Irwin, M.A., and Mr. E. Henderson Smith thanked the visitors for their attendance. The visitors were the artistes, who supplied a very fine evening's music. The part singing of the Occasional Gleemen was most tastefully rendered. Mr. Frederick Addison's songs and encores were admirably sung. The same criticism may be extended also to the efforts of Mr. Stewart Gardner, Mr. Wilfred Seton, and Mr. William Gribble. The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" brought a most delightful evening to an end.

Education on the Nile

"So you are just back from a circular tour of the Mediterranean, including Egypt and the Nile. Well, well!"

The speaker was George Ade. Shaking the hand of the brown young farmer, he went on:—

"I know the sort of conversation you heard over there—in Egypt, say. Listen and I'll tear off a yard or two. It ran like this:

"'Isn't it lovely? Cleopatra lived here, and Moses, and Pharaoh. It makes your head swim, doesn't it?'

"'I guess it's the bad air. It hurts my head, too. Is that the Nile?'

"'Look at the crocodile basking in the sun.'

"'Is he basking? Oh, Maude, dear, by the way, is your new basque to have the fashionable long sleeves?'

"'Gee, there's the Sphinx!'

"'And that must be the desert. But I don't see any caravans.'

"'No. How provoking!'

"'Isn't it nice to travel on a railroad where they don't have any soot?'

"'Yes, and do you notice the balmy, spicy smell?'

"'Yes, indeed. Just like cloves, isn't it? What can it be? I'll ask the brakeman. Brakeman!'

"'Yes, madam?'

"'Where does that spicy smell come from?'

"'From the engine, ma'am. We don't use nothing but mummies for fuel on this here line.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

"America at College"*

THIS is an interesting book and meets a distinct need. It is too common to find Englishmen otherwise well informed who know nothing whatever of American Universities beyond the bare names of two or three. This ignorance is due not to indifference, but to the lack of any accessible information. Mr. Risk supplies that information at first hand. He gives us, as the result of a recent tour, chapters on each of the great Universities, on a typical small college, and on four leading women's colleges. The book is brightly written and will be read with advantage by graduates of British Universities, who will find much to admire and something to envy in American University development.

Glasgow Book Trade Notes

BY "MUNGO"

A GOOD part of the business done on the week following Christmas Day, and, in Scotland, also that following New Year's Day, is made up of exchanging volumes that have been given in duplicate, or that have not suited the literary tastes of the recipients. This latter reason brings forward the old question of whose taste is consulted in buying a gift book, and, for the purpose in hand, this specially applies to juvenile literature.

Judging from some of the volumes that find their way back to the bookshop some of our young friends must have been grievously disappointed with Santa Claus' visit; but it is a difficult problem to solve.

It is becoming more customary for children to be allowed to choose their own presents from the shelves, and the delight they have in doing this no doubt makes up for what is lost in anticipation of Christmas morning; but parents and aunts and uncles who prefer to follow the other method often fall back on books they found delight in in their "golden age," and this habit explains in some measure how some titles always appear in the lists. And without decrying these particular books, it is quite legitimate to suppose that they might not be so suitable for the child as some of the newer ones that are passed over; at least, the newer books are often more attractively produced than the old ones, and this counts for a good deal with children.

This, of course, does not apply to the classics of the children's bookshelf, and "Robinson Crusoe," "Swiss Family," and "Treasure Island" will always hold their place in the hearts of boys and girls; and the girl of to-day very often shows a decided preference for boys' books, and would much rather have a Henty or a Ballantyne than anything written by one of their own sex.

The animal story and books of a mechanical nature are becoming more and more popular. Thompson Seton and W. J. Long have already made their name as writers of animal stories, and as the chief end of a tale is to give delight the recent discussion as to the veracity of our authors need not trouble us. A. J. Dawson's splendid dog story, "Finn the Wolfhound," was a notable addition to this season's list and proved itself a favourite.

Captain Brereton and Herbert Strang go far to satisfy the Glasgow boy's thirst for something new in adventure, and amongst the more recent writers of girls' books, Christina Gowans Whyte holds a good place. Amy Le Feuvre, Mrs. Vaizey, L. T. Meade and Louisa Alcott are always popular.

The larger illustrated editions of "Alice in Wonderland" and "A Child's Garden of Verses" have been much in demand; but Tenniel's "Alice" holds its own against all-comers. The older Annuals have shown a falling off this season, competition with newer books with more coloured illustration telling against them, much as the rag book is telling on the paper toy book.

From children to schoolmaster is but a step, and some weeks ago, when congratulating a teacher on the approach of the Christmas vacation, I remarked that a generous holiday would be much appreciated by booksellers. His reply was to the effect that he needed a rest more than the bookseller did, as his work was not manual labour. It seems that pedagogues, while sure of their own, are not agreed as to the bookseller's social standing, for some days later I was told that the daughter of a bookseller, who is also a picture framer, had been admitted to a private academy on the strength of the bookselling side of her father's business, the mistress looking upon bookselling as a profession but upon picture framing as a trade. I am left wondering whether I am a professional man or a labourer.

Mr. Mackenzie Bell's Poems

NOW USED IN SCHOOLS

MR. MACKENZIE BELL has composed a long preface, with some touches of autobiography, for the definitive book of his verse entitled "Poems," to be published at once from 4, Southampton Row, London, W.C., price 2s. 6d. The volume will be divided into sections, entitled, respectively, "Poems of Nature," "Poems of Consolation and Religion," "Poems and Sonnets concerning Shakespeare," "Pictures of Travel," "Poems Founded on History," "Miscellaneous Sonnets," "Poems of Love." "Lyrical and Other Poems," "Humorous Poems," and "Poems for School Recitations, Standards I. and II.," the latter necessitated by the fact that his work is now used as an "unseen" reading book in schools. In the essay above mentioned, the author says:

> "Early Wordsworth moved me in some sort; but it was not the poet of the great 'Ode to Immortality,' nor the consummate sonneteer; nor the writer of the more exquisite Lyrical Ballads of whom I was cognisant; it was the Wordsworth of his "pedestrian poems." Surely no other exalted poet of the world ever gavé forth so much below his proper level. About the same time, as the result of hearing Matthew Arnold speak one evening in Liverpool, I read some of his poetry, and it took hold of me. But, here again, I liked him for the wrong qualities."

Mr. Mackenzie Bell then goes on to explain briefly how he sought to remedy his defects, and how great was the influence of his friend, Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton, the writer of "Alwyn," to whom the volume is dedicated.

Letters to the Editor

ESPERANTO SIMPLE AFTER ALL

DEAR SIR,—Your issue of the 19th ult. contains aspersions on the international language, Esperanto, which (as an Esperantist) I trust you will give me an opportunity to refute. Your correspondent, who sends you a paragraph of Esperanto selected for abuse because of the number of times the letter "j" occurs in it, omits to inform your readers that this consonant is pronounced in Esperanto not as the English "j" but as the English "y." When this is understood, the contention that Esperanto sounds ugly because it contains many "j's" falls to the ground. In point of fact, those who have heard good Esperanto speakers invariably say that the language sounds like Italian—confessedly the most beautiful of the national languages. The question as to whether "j" is a nice letter to look at is purely one of taste. In most editions of Latin books it is found convenient to use it, the letter being then pronounced by modern Latinists as in Esperanto—e.g. (Latin), jam = jam (Esperanto). The origin of the English prejudice against the letter "j" is, no doubt, the fact that it denotes in the English alphabet a compound consonantal sound. Esperanto, however, is not constructed solely for English ideas, being truly international: and the Esperanto value of the symbol "j" is the one which over a hundred millions of people, including Germans, Poles, Dutch, Russians, Bohemians, Scandinavians and Italians, attach to it. In Spanish it has a somewhat similar sound, and French and English, which differ among themselves in the sound they give to it, are the only widely-spoken languages to which it appears strange. Apart from this, the defaming of a language by castigating a selected paragraph constructed "ad hoc" is a puerile expedient, which could be employed with equal injustice to prove by citation of such sentences as "Peter picked a peck of pepper," that English is afflicted with a superabundance of initial "p's." The great matter wherein so many would-be improvers of Esperanto have deceived themselves is that the language, though it has been—for European consumption—presented as if it were a flexional language, is really an agglutinative language like Turkish and many languages of Asia, this being, of course, the secret of the success of Esperanto in the East, the Japanese having an excellent Esperanto magazine, and an Esperanto grammar, &c., in Arabic, having now appeared. Esperanto consists, therefore, entirely of roots, which are put together without internal inflexion, as required by the sense. If, therefore "o" signifies a noun and "j" gives the idea of plurality, the combined notion of a noun in the plural is expressed by "oxj" = "oj." There is a very essential difference between this system and a system under which "o" is changed to "i" in the plural, for we must either regard this latter as an inflexion or make two separate definitions of substantive terminations, where Esperanto has one only. This is but one instance in which the alleged simplification of points in Esperanto turns out on inspection to be a complication. Furthermore, every effort has been made in Esperanto to keep the number of roots in common use down to the lowest possible number. It is not till one has practised it that one realises what a tremendous amount of meaning can be expressed by the excellent selection of fundamental roots which we have in Esperanto, and because Esperanto, like English, German or Greek, makes compound words from its own roots if possible, many international words are really rendered superfluous to Esperanto. This moderation and economy of material is greatly to the advantage of those users of Esperanto, often poor and dwelling in remote places, who cannot afford large and costly books. This fundamental vocabulary thus forms the staple of the Esperanto language just as the thousand or two of Saxon words in common speech do in English, while among them comes and goes as the topics of the occasion demand a "floating population" of international words, which, if they survive, are ultimately accepted into the complete dictionaries in the form which experience has shown to be preferable, laktuko being, for instance, the accepted form for "lettuce." These then are the "2,000 new words" which one of your correspondents uses as a bogey. They are only new in the sense that they have lately been put into a dictionary. As every fresh word is a fresh difficulty, because it is one thing more to remember, Esperantists use up old material if possible, and this is why "to waver (in one's mind)" was used instead of hezit-i (to hesitate). As to "akuz-i" (to accuse), the word kulpigi (i.e., to put in fault) really corresponds to the circumstances, as Continental law considers the accused as faulty until he shows he is not. In England (fortunately for us Esperantists), akuzi is not the same thing as kulpigi. Esperanto is on the right road, the only one which can lead to success.—Yours faithfully,

G. L. BROWNE

"THE NATURE OF AN ANAGRAM"

MY DEAR SIR,—I am, of course, quite open to criticism and correction, but your reviewer, on p. 48 of your issue of January 9th, seems to misunderstand the nature of an anagram. He quotes, as a sample from my new Puzzle Book, the answer I sent to a competition question in Truth, "Why is every angler, ipso facto, an Ananias?" My answer took the form of an anagram, in which exactly the same letters are used, and each is used once, and only once: "A liar, he spins gay fancies to a woven yarn."

Your reviewer, ridiculing this, proposes the question, "Why is every anagram maker, ipso facto, an ass?" and proposes, as an answer by anagram "An anagram maker, ipso facto, wastes his own time with others." This, as you will see at a glance, is no anagram at all. The letters of one sentence are found in the other, but some are used many times over, and whole words recur, which is never allowed in an anagram. If he was merely "pulling my leg," I have no desire to kick, but am,—Sincerely yours,

(The Rev.) A. CYRIL PEARSON.

R. E. KING, LTD., NOT SAME AS R. E. KING

DEAR SIR,—Referring to the report of a prosecution now pending at Bow Street Police Court against Mr. R. E. King, trading as "R. E. King & Co.," we would ask you to kindly make it clear in your next issue that the style of our company is "R. E. King & Co., Limited," and that there is no connection whatever between us. Thanking you in anticipation, We are, Dear Sir,—Yours faithfully,

R. E. KING & CO., LTD.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Allman & Son.—"Sketch of the Tudor Period," by S. M. Toyne, M.A. This slight sketch is an aid to, and not a substitute for, the reading of history. The contents are so arranged as to show the correlation of important events in the period of history dealt with; "no fact ought to be regarded separately—its importance rests on its bearing on other facts."

From Al-Mokattam Printing Office, Cairo.—"Egyptian Arabic Primer," by W. A. Betts, M.D., C.M., F.R.C.S. Second edition of a booklet intended to be of assistance to those who are learning the elements of Egyptian colloquial Arabic. The system of transliteration closely follows that used by Spiro in his excellent English-Arabic vocabulary.

From Mr. Edward Arnold.—"A Parson in the Australian Bush," by C. H. S. Matthews, M.A. The author's aim has been to give as vivid a picture of bush life as possible, and only incidentally to deal with what he believes to be the reasons for the failure of the Anglican Church, and every other form of organised Christianity, in Australia. It might be feared that the book would, in consequence, be too "religious" to suit the majority of readers, but such is not the case. The author has succeeded in depicting for us the characteristics of Australian life, full of humour and pathos, which should materially help to remove our general ignorance, and should be doubly welcome at a time when interest in our Colonies is steadily growing.

From the Same.—"Latin Prose Composition," by W. R. Hardie, M.A., Professor of Humanity in the University of Edinburgh. Oxford men still remember the brilliant young Scot who, a quarter of a century ago entered Balliol as scholar, literally swept the boards of the University on the classical side and became Fellow and Tutor of his College at twenty-two. Contributions to the higher scholarship were confidently expected from him, but hitherto, if we except a volume of Essays, he has been content with mere routine work. The present book is the direct result of that routine work; i.e., it is the outcome of Professor Hardie's long experience in teaching both at Oxford and Edinburgh. His purpose is to inculcate the value of literary qualities as distinct from mere grammatical accuracy. He praises Verse Composition because it "has this great merit and value, that instead of merely remembering things and reproducing them exactly, as he is constantly doing, the pupil for once produces something of his own that has an artistic shape." He sees no reason why Prose Composition "should not have a similar merit or attractiveness"; and it is to aid advanced pupils in developing their artistic sense that he has written this book. We may say at once that it is excellently designed to accomplish its author's purpose, that is to enable a student to view a piece of Latin prose as Cicero might conceivably have viewed it. The volume is divided into two parts (which may be bought separately), the first containing notes on Grammar, Style and Idiom; the second a selection of passages for translation into Latin. To see how effectively Professor Hardie handles his subject the intending purchaser has but to glance at the section on Style. Especially good are the pages on Metaphor and Rhythm. Equally suggestive is the chapter on the Resources of Expression in Latin. Indeed we are disposed to think that this and the chapter on Style are out and away the best of their kind that have appeared in England for many years. The passages for translation have been chosen with the judgment of a brilliantly successful teacher; the collection of moral, philosophical and literary criticisms being particularly appropriate. But the whole book is admirable, and may be recommended without qualification to teachers and advanced students.

From The British Esperanto Association.—"The Esperanto Manual," by Margaret L. Jones, F.B.E.A. A complete guide to Esperanto in the form of twenty-five lectures specially adapted to the requirements of pupils in evening classes. It contains exercises, anecdotes, aids to conversational practice, commercial letters and guides to correspondence, literary articles by foreign contributors and others, short poems, complete grammar and a vocabulary.——"The Esperanto Teacher," by Helen Fryer, is now in its third edition (revised). As a simple course for non-grammarians it has proved very useful.

From The Clarendon Press, Oxford.—"School Algebra," by W. E. Paterson, M.A., B.Sc. The main object of this work is to provide a book on modern lines that is suitable for the beginner and can be continued in use for higher forms. In the order adopted and in general treatment the suggestions of the Mathematical Association have been largely followed. The early chapters are very full in explanation, and are written in simple, even colloquial, language. By means of examples, some worked in the text, others set as exercises, the student is led to discover or verify the fundamental laws of Algebra.

From Messrs. Dawbarn & Ward, Ltd.—"The Photo Miniature Series: No. 93, Development (Gaslight) Papers." This volume deals exhaustively with the whole art of print-making by artificial light, using a paper which requires development. The different varieties are described, a table of gaslight papers is given, the little difficulties of exposure explained, with formulæ and methods for development. Indispensable to all photographers.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—"Nature Study," by J. R. Ainsworth Davis, M.A., F.C.P. It is being gradually recognised on all hands that the study of Nature is a necessary part of the equipment of all educated people, and Principal Davis's reader for the higher classes of schools just answers the purpose of training the faculties of the young. It gives in simple, non-technical language a connected sketch of the natural history of plants and animals. Common or familiar examples are chosen when practicable, while many beautiful nature photographs by Mr. Hugh Main, B.Sc., have been used as illustrations—"Satires Epîtres" and "L'Art Poëtique de Boileau." Preface by Augustin Filon. This is the latest addition to "Les Classiques Français" series, edited by H. Warner Allen.

From Mr. Henry J. Drane.—"After the Confession, and Other Verses," by Adolphe Danziger. A little book of love poems, after the manner of Henreich Heine, many of which are of a sensuous nature.

From the Same.—"General Knowledge of Common Things," by Amy B. Cowan. A little book of questions and answers, embodying knowledge of common things under daily observation. It is intended for the use of very young children.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—"Sir Richard Tangye," by Dr. Stuart J. Reid. The biography of a man who started from nothing and attained to wealth and honours must always be interesting. But Sir R. Tangye was much more than a mere successful man of business. He had a resolute spirit, a cultivated intellect, a sympathetic and sunny temperament, and a natural gift for friendship. The record of his life therefore makes in the practised hands of Dr. Reid a fascinating book, which touches at many points the religious and political movements of the time, and is brightened by not a few anecdotes. There is a portrait and a good index.

From the Same.—"Handbook of Geography: Descriptive and Mathematical," by Emil Reich. Vol. 2. In this learned volume it is shown, first, how we succeeded in determining correctly the geometrical situation of a given town or hill on the globe; and secondly, how we succeed in locating this situation on a given map. The advantages to be derived from a study of this handbook are such as are not easily to be met with elsewhere. There are a number of explanatory figures in the text.

From Messrs. Luzac & Co.—"Semitic Magic: Its Origins and Development," by R. Campbell-Thompson, M.A. (Cantab.). It is difficult to understand the attitude of the British Museum authorities in refusing to allow the author of this work to study the unpublished cuneiform Assyrian tablets in the British Museum. "Hence the material at hand for a study of a most interesting branch of comparative religion is more imperfect than I could have wished." The subjects dealt with include "Demons and Ghosts," "Demoniac Possession and Tabu," "Sympathetic Magic," "The Atonement Sacrifice." The work is not only of great value to the student of the special subjects with which it treats, but also to students of the Bible for the light it throws on many of the peculiar customs referred to in the Old Testament, and helps to explain the hidden reason why these customs existed. To the student of Man throughout the ages this work must also be most valuable. There is a really splendid index, which will open its wealth of information to all kinds of searchers after knowledge. Under "A," for instance, we find references to Ants in Magic; Alkali in Magic; Arm in Magic; Ash in Magic; Ass in Magic, and so on through the whole alphabet. Between the superstition which amounts to a half regret at seeing the new moon through a glass window and the superstition which is related to every act and thought of life the distance is indeed great. They believed that every being had innumerable demons; we seem to be losing our belief in the existence even of one for the whole lot of us. Since the above was in type, we were amused from a private letter of Mr. W. Clark Russell to find he pretends to believe we are in for a bad time, because this year commenced on a Friday. He says it is his only superstition, but that nothing would induce him to commence any important business on a Friday; he even seems to regret that the Messina earthquake did not happen on a Friday, as it clearly ought to have done in the interests of the "Friday" superstition.

From Messrs. George Philip & Son, Ltd.—"Lands Beyond the Channel," by H. J. Mackinder, M.A. The Mediterranean and Europe are dealt with in the present volume; the geography of the countries is first dealt with, and the history is then told in such a manner as to comment on that geography. There are one hundred and fifty-six illustrations and nine coloured maps.

From Messrs. Hugh Rees, Ltd.—"The Merchant of Venice," edited by George F. Chambers, F.R.A.S. Mr. Chambers is of the opinion that Bowdler "did not go nearly far enough" in mangling Shakespeare's plays for the consumption of the "Lady Reader." The present version is prepared for private parties of readers sitting round a winter's fire. It can be read aloud in about two hours. The abridgment is certainly very judicious, the type employed is large, and a little incidental music is provided at the end by Cotsford Dick.

From Mr. Ernest J. Rutland.—"Electrical Terms and Phrases," by Ernest J. Rutland. A phonographic phrase book of common phrases and terms met with in the electrical, electro-mechanical and general engineering professions, written in the briefest reporting style. A series of engineering letters, counted for dictation purposes, are appended.

From Messrs. Schofield & Sons, Ltd.—"Story Readers"—an entirely new series of reading books for youngsters. No. 1, entitled "At Duty's Call," by W. Hislop, fully illustrated by W. H. Groome, is suitable for children from ten to twelve years of age. No. 2, "Toot-toot!" by G. R. Bennett, illustrated by W. H. Croome, for children from seven to nine years of age. No. 3, "Norse Stories," retold by Mrs. Plant, with coloured illustrations by J. H. Lunn, for children from eight to ten. "Children of the New Forest," abridged and adapted by M. T. Yates, is the first of a series of juvenile books, entitled "Old Friends With New Faces."

From Messrs. William Smith & Sons (Aberdeen).—"The Lone Shieling, or The Authorship of the 'Canadian Boat Song' with other Literary and Historical Sketches," by G. M. Fraser, Librarian, Public Library, Aberdeen. A volume of essays of unusual merit and fine literary flavour, some of which have appeared in Scotch periodicals. Mr. Fraser combines the erudition of the book-worm with the attractive qualities of the man of feeling and imagination, and his book deserves a place upon the shelves of all who are interested in Scottish life. As to the authorship of the "Canadian Boat Song," we think Mr. Fraser makes out a very good case for its being the work of John Wilson, and written between the years 1820 and 1837.

From The University Tutorial Press Ltd.—"The New Matriculation Chemistry," by G. H. Bailey, D.Sc., Ph.D., edited by William Briggs, LL.D., M.A., &c. This book is specially adapted to the London University Matriculation syllabus, and it has for some years been found of the greatest service to students, by whom its merits have been thoroughly tested. The work of preparing the fourth edition has been entrusted to Mr. H. W. Bausor, M.A., who has re-written the Introductory Section in order to bring it into closer accord with the needs of beginners, and has made other necessary alterations. Experiments which the student himself is intended to perform are printed in small type; those printed in large type should be carried out by the teacher.—"School Hygiene," by Robert A. Lyster, M.A., B.Sc. Dr. Lyster's handy volume has reached a second edition. It provides a thorough course in the practical hygiene of child and school life; it is compact, practical, and clear, and assumes no previous knowledge of the subject. The second edition contains an additional chapter on the organisation of medical inspection in schools.—"Geometry: Theoretical and Practical: Part 3," by W. P. Workman, M.A., B.Sc., and A. G. Cracknell, M.A., B.Sc., contains the subject matter of Euclid, Book XI., treated on modern lines, together with an elementary account of the Parallelopiped, Sphere, and Tetrahedron. The treatment of the subject is both practical and concrete.

From Messrs. Vinton & Co.—"Agricultural Almanac and Diary for 1909." A useful publication for farmers, landowners and others interested in agriculture. The calendar is followed by the breeders' tables, two pages being devoted to each month, forming a handy and useful system of keeping breeding records throughout the year. There is also a concise agricultural review of the year 1908, where crops, harvesting, statistics, yields, and prices are dealt with, followed by a calendar of farm work for each month throughout the year, and including the arable farm, the stock farm, special crops, the hop garden, and other phases of the ever-changing monthly duties of the farmer's vocation.

Thomas B. Mosher, the American Book Pirate—A Warning to English Booksellers

"Without Flourish of Trumpets"

IN his advertisements of what he calls "Mosher Books" Mr. T. B. Mosher tells us that "For a dozen years the most artistic volumes at their price that have been issued in America have been published, not from New York or Boston, nor even in Philadelphia or Chicago, but in Portland, Maine. In that little city Thomas B. Mosher has been printing, without flourish of trumpets or wide advertising, volume after volume which in artistic excellence are not excelled by the issues of any publishing house in the World. Then, too, Mosher has reprinted only the Gems of literature that have been declared of the first water—Gems that are beyond objection Jewels of the World's treasury of brilliant writing. We may also assert that the question of Gain has been secondary in Mosher's calculations."

Mosher modestly calculates "That's so!"

"I think it demonstrable," he says, "that work like This must of necessity be founded upon other than mere money values."

Mr. Mosher is right. It is founded on brazen literary piracy.

"More deeply than ever," he says, "I feel the responsibility of my individuality in bookmaking."

Book-stealing would have been nearer the mark. His conscience must have tickled him when, after gratuitously Mosherising Mr. Andrew Lang's writings, he quotes Mr. Lang's "Ghosts in the Library," beginning:—

"Suppose, when now the house is dumb,
When lights are out, and ashes fall,
Suppose their ancient owners come
To claim our spoils of shop and stall!"

It would be rather awkward for Mr. Mosher, certainly!

We ought to mention that Mosher announces that he sends his catalogue to "any place that can be reached by mail"; also, that he advertises it in this country. In fact, it was some remarks of Mr. Andrew Lang that led us to ask one or two other English authors if Mr. Mosher was selling their "Gems" and "Jewels" with their consent.

Mr. Andrew Lang on Mosher

Having had occasion to send Mr. Lang a copy of the P.C. with reference to some other matter, in his reply he says:—

"Thanks for the P.C., but I hoped you were studying Mosher in it. To me it seems unaccountable that decent British serials should publish his advertisements and that he should be allowed to sell in this country what he steals from me. . . The illegality and impudence are intolerable!"

In another letter Mr. Lang says that one of Mosher the Pirate's copies of one of his (Mr. Lang's) books had been innocently offered to him by an English bookseller. We say "innocently," because it is illegal to sell these pirated editions anywhere in the United Kingdom or the Colonies.

As the Mosher books are principally by British writers, we wrote to a few of them, and give their replies.

Mr. George Meredith and Mosher

"Dear Sir,—In reply to yours, Mr. Mosher, of Portland, Maine, printed and issued a poem of mine without sending request and without payment. The book was well presented."

We fancy Mr. Meredith is not aware how it was presented.

"The Modern Love, and Other Poems" in the Mosher pirated edition include, he has the insolence to say, the "simple and fresh work" of the author's earlier years rather than "the contortions and grotesque affectations of his later style." This is adding insult to injury in a style most brazen and Mosherish, quite on a par with his "In our (i.e., Mosher's) opinion Andrew Lang's 'Helen of Troy' will be found a very lasting production, second only to William Morris's splendid version."

Mr. Lang and other authors may be interested to know that Mosher's "Limited Edition" of his books run to 925 copies, and "there is also a Japan vellum edition," and that "delivery to any part of the world is guaranteed" by Mosher, who reserves the right to "put up" the price when he likes.

Mr. Maurice Hewlett and Mosher

Mr. Maurice Hewlett says: "Mosher stole from me in '96, and he has gone on stealing since. Of course, he paid nothing, but with sublime impudence he once sent me a copy of his plunder!"

"Vernon Lee" and Mr. Mosher

"Vernon Lee" says: "Mr. Mosher has reprinted repeatedly from my works, and always without authorisation or payment. He did, indeed, send me a copy of an essay, but has not even done that for other books. Two or three years ago I had occasion to remonstrate with an Oxford bookseller for offering for sale (not secondhand) Mosher reprints of works by my friend the late Walter Pater."

In some instances, where Mosher was probably not sure whether an American copyright existed or not, he has asked permission; but the fact remains, and, as we have already pointed out, that this Portland Pirate is offering and selling scores of editions which it is illegal to sell, or buy, or advertise for sale in any part of the British Empire. When a "Mosher" edition is offered, the only safe thing to do is to write to the English publisher of the work in question and ask if it is authorised.

Booksellers and Private Book-buyers Should Note

Mosher's editions include a dozen of R. L. Stevenson's, as many of Swinburne's, as many of Walter Pater's, as many by William Morris, in addition to works by authors already mentioned and many others—more than two hundred.

Mr. Mosher is an Idealist. "Rest assured," he says, "in Idealism there remains an abiding refuge which the Soul of Man has ever sought, that in Idealism alone we find justified and made perfect our faith in the incompleteness of the world as we see it, and in the ultimate completeness of the Divine Plan."

Mosher helping to complete the Divine Plan by pirating English copyrights is sublime! No wonder he feels "more deeply than ever the responsibility of my individuality in book-making, if such a phrase be permitted, and that on this short day of Frost and Sun if I have accomplished anything at all its worth issues out of the Ideal lying beyond Reality." He adds: "To what conclusion would I therefore bring you?"

Well, the conclusion we have come to, anyway, is that our English authors get the "Frost" and Thomas B. Mosher basks in the golden "Sunshine," raking in the shekels while he sells their sparkling "Gems" and "Jewels"—one of the latest being an edition of 1,225 copies of "The Hound of Heaven." Doubtless The Publishers' Association will help by calling the attention of their agents to Mr. Mosher and his works at Portland, Maine—not Portland, England—though that might well be right if

"He who takes what isn't his'n, Always had to go to prison!"

The Seventh International Congress of Publishers

TO BE HELD AT AMSTERDAM IN 1910

THE Sixth International Congress of Publishers, held at Madrid from the 26th to the 30th May last year, designated Holland as the country in which the Seventh Congress was to be celebrated in 1910. The Dutch organising Committee has appointed Mr. M. W. P. van Stockum, junr., of The Hague, President of the Committee, and Dr. A. G. C. de Vries, of Amsterdam, Secretary, and has decided that the Congress shall be held in Amsterdam towards the end of June, and in the beginning of July, 1910. Further particulars will be announced.

"Tono-Bungay," the new novel by Mr. H. G. Wells, will be published on February 2nd by Messrs. Macmillan. From what we have read of it in serial form we can endorse the statement that it is "full of entertainment with its lively incidents and its many vivid studies of character; and that everywhere the story provides acute analyses, in Mr. Wells' best manner, of many phases of contemporary English life."

Notes and Announcements

GENERAL sympathy is felt for Mr. Evan Spicer and his family in the great loss they have sustained by the death of Mr. Spicer's second son. Dr. John E. Spicer was killed by an avalanche in the Swiss Alps. He was making the ascent of the Pic Danis with his younger brother, who fortunately escaped—not without injury.

Mr. Andrew Lang's "Life of Sir George Mackenzie, the King's Advocate (Blindy Mackenzie), 1636-1691," is nearly ready for publication by Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. Of the same firm's important "Political History of England," in 12 vols., nine have been published. Vol. IX. is nearly ready, and Vols. VI. and VIII., completing it, are in preparation. A very useful feature of this history is that each volume has its own index and maps. Other noteworthy historical works which Messrs. Longmans have in the press are "Historical Letters and Memoirs of Scottish Catholics, 1625-1793," by the Rev. W. Forbes Leith, S.J., illustrated; and "Ireland under the Stuarts and during the Interregnum," by Dr. Richard Bagwell.

Mr. Edward Marston, whose state of health has, we are glad to say, improved considerably, desires to thank all who have kindly inquired about him.

Her Majesty the Queen, who is a keen poultry fancier and successful exhibitor, has graciously accepted a copy of Mr. J. W. Hurst's book, "The Life Story of a Fowl," recently published by Messrs. A. & C. Black.

Booksellers in Lancashire should make a note of the publication by the "Librairie Armand Colin," of Paris, of a work on cotton growing in Egypt entitled "La Production du Coton en Egypte," by François Charles-Roux. The question dealt with in this book is not only vital to Egypt but is also of great importance to Europe and America, whose capital is invested in Egypt and whose textile industries draw part of their raw material from that country. It is a work of 410 pages, dealing very fully with the subject; the price is 7½ francs.

Mr. Heinemann will publish on the 28th of this month a novel, "Syrinx," by a new author, Laurance North; a character study of an old scholar in love with a young and capricious girl.

We hope to give next week a portrait of Mr. A. H. Hallam Murray, who has just retired from the great publishing business in Albemarle Street, after being connected with it since 1876.

"A History of Dunster," by Sir Henry Maxwell Lyte, K.C.B., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records, is shortly to be issued by the St. Catherine Press, Ltd., of York Buildings, Adelphi. The book will be profusely illustrated with portraits, views, reproductions of monumental effigies, and seals.

Messrs. Cassell announce the publication on January 23rd of Part 1 of "The Encyclopædic Dictionary and Atlas." The work contains considerably over 6,000 pages, 76 coloured plates, 88 coloured maps (specially prepared for the work) and 3,000 black and white drawings. It is to be issued in weekly parts, price 7d. net each.

Mr. Werner Laurie is publishing shortly "Nights with the Gods," by Dr. Emil Reich, a study of present-day social, religious, literary and political features, clothed in the form of criticism of things and persons.

Mr. John Lane will publish on Jan. 26th "A Sister of Prince Rupert, Elizabeth, Princess Palatine Abbess of Hereford," by Elizabeth Godfrey, with numerous illustrations reproduced from contemporary portraits, prints, &c. Elizabeth, Princess Palatine was connected with every great movement of her times, political, philosophic, and religious. "Under Petraia, with some Saunterings." by the author of "In a Tuscan Garden," with illustrations. "A Fool of Quality, or the History of Henry, Earl of Moreland," by Henry Brooke, with an introduction by Francis Coutts. 2 vols. A new volume of the New Pocket Library.

To all those interested in the subject the issue of a new and highly important serial work by Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. will be especially welcome. In "Trees and Shrubs of the British Isles, Native and Acclimatised," the authors, Messrs. C. S. Cooper, F.R.H.S., and W. Percival Westell, F.L.S., deal with over 550 species, illustrated in colour and in black and white, drawn direct from nature. The work will be issued in 16 parts at 1s. net per part.

The appearance of the fifth edition of "Pitman's Business Man's Guide" within less than six years, to say nothing of the various reprints, is the best possible testimonial to the value of the work, which has now become widely known. With the issue of a new edition at periods only slightly exceeding a year, the book is always brought up to date, and an examination of the fifth edition will show that all important matters connected with business are noted up to December, 1908. The number of pages is being gradually increased, and is now only three short of five hundred. The price, however, continues the same, viz., 3s. 6d. net.

Mr. James I. Eaton, in his little book, "A Shuttlecock for Critics" (noticed in the P.C. of Jan. 2nd), declares his belief in the first article of the Tramp's Creed: that the prime essential for salvation (in a mundane sense) upon the road is a genuine liking for good beer. If it is a sin to covet good beer, he sins in goodly company. George Borrow gloried in it, and Charles Lamb measured his walks by the thirst they created. If there were nothing more intoxicating than good English beer what a happy world it would be!

The "Treatise on Zoology," edited by Sir E. Ray Lankester and published by Messrs. A. & C. Black, is now nearing completion. Five volumes have already been issued and two more will appear immediately, viz., Part I., "Introduction and Protozoa," by Prof. S. J. Hickson and others, and Part VII., "Crustacea," by W. T. Calman, D.Sc.

Several important contributions will be found in the next issue of The New Quarterly, published by Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co., which commences Vol. II., including "The House of Hospitality," by Thomas Hardy; "Ibant Obscuri," by Robert Bridges; "Recent Physical Research," by Mrs. Verrall; "The Causes of Mountain Sickness," by J. S. Haldane, M.D., F.R.S.; "Aristophanes on Tennyson," by A. W. Verrall, Litt.D.; "George Canning," by Herbert Paul, M.P.; "The Stability of Mountains," by J. E. E. Craster; "A Soldier's Wife," translated from E. Von Keyserling's "Schwule Tage," by R. Sickert.

Mr. Werner Laurie is about to publish a fully illustrated work entitled "Tragedies of the Medici," by Edgcumbe Staley.

Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. announce a new novel entitled "The Broken Snare," by Ludwig Lewisohn, "which throws a strong light on the marriage problem."

The Band of Hope Review starts its 59th year of service in the cause of Temperance among the young with a bright and attractive January number. Two useful features are a New Year recitation, by Mr. John Lea, and a reply to a boy's question about smoking, by Mr. W. N. Edwards.

The series of lectures on the pioneers of sanitary reform of the last century, delivered recently at the London School of Economics by Miss B. L. Hutchins, will be published by Mr. A. C. Fifield in February under the title of "The Public Health Agitation, 1833-48." The same publisher also announces for issue in February "Natural Monopolies in relation to Social Democracy," by Charles Derwent Smith; "Socialism and National Minimum," by Mrs. Sidney Webb and Miss B. L. Hutchins; and "The Wastage of Child Life," by Dr. J. Johnston, the two latter being Volumes 6 and 7 in "The Fabian Socialist" series.

Three new books published by Mr. Eveleigh Nash are "Hungary of To-day," by members of the Hungarian Government, edited by Percy Alden, M.P. illustrated; "Petticoat Pilgrims on Trek," by Mrs. Fred Maturin, an account of two years spent in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, just after the War; and "Reminiscences of an Old Sportsman," by W. B. Woodgate, with many illustrations. Oxford men of every generation, and all the rowing canfraternity all the world over are familiar with the name of Mr. W. B. Woodgate. His name stands high in the records of the river as winner of the Wingfield Sculls, the Oxford Pairs, the Diamonds, and all the Henley open races. But the book which Mr. Woodgate here offers to the public is no mere record of rowing experiences. Looking back upon nearly three-score years and ten of good sportsmanship, he lets his memory range over a wide field of experience, at home, at school, at Oxford, at the Bar and in the world, and recounts innumerable stories of interest, public and private alike. "It is seldom," says Mr. Nash, "that a volume of recollection is packed with so many stories overflowing with good humour and true wit, as are to be found in these vivacious pages."

In Catalogue No. 19 of John I. Haslam & Co., 15, Broad Street Place, London, E.C., there are many works offered for sale which do not often figure in second-hand book catalogues, including Sir H. Chauncy's "Historical Antiquities of Hertfordshire," 1700; Sir Wm. Dugdale's "History of St. Paul's Cathedral," &c., 1716; and Gough's "Londinium Trumphans," 1682, &c.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will publish immediately a new biographical study of Richard Jefferies and his work, by Mr. Edward Thomas, who has been fortunate in obtaining many unpublished letters and much new material for his book.

An abridged version (in one volume) of Carlyle's "Life of Frederick the Great" will make its appearance in the course of a few days. This difficult feat, of compressing Carlyle's four huge tomes into a single volume, was the last literary work that occupied the attention of the late Rev. Edgar Sanderson. The book is illustrated with portraits and a map, and is provided with an introduction.

The official copy of Izaak Walton's will was sold on Jan. 20th to Mr. Maggs for £36 at Messrs. Hodgson's rooms, Chancery Lane, W.C.

Macaulay once declared, when he was writing his History, that he did not believe Empson and Senior, two of the most eminent critics of the day, could correctly name the succession of the Prime Ministers of the eighteenth century. Shifting the problem to our own time, it would not be too much to say that if you took a dozen "men in the street," even a West End street, it is probable that not more than one of them could give off-hand the correct succession of Queen Victoria's Prime Ministers. This "if" and paragraph belong to our lively contemporary the Edinburgh Evening Dispatch. But why do we buy Whitaker's Almanac, and the "Encyclopædia Britannica," and "Dod's Peerage," if we are never to be allowed to forget things?

One has only to remember the disgraceful amount of infant mortality—nearly the whole of it the result of improper feeding—to realize the importance of greater and widespread knowledge on the subject of feeding and rearing of infant life. The Walter Scott Publishing Co., Ltd., are just issuing "Infant Feeding," by a Physician, in their "Useful Red" series of shilling books.

Mr. John Lane has now ready "Balthasar," by Anatole France; translated by Mrs. John Lane, being the sixth volume of the complete uniform edition of the "Works of Anatole France in English," edited by Frederic Chapman; and "A Whirl Asunder," by Gertrude Atherton, a new and cheaper edition.

A quarter century has elapsed since the death of Richard Wagner, and interesting and pertinent questions are raised as to the effect of his works and theories upon modern operatic art. In "Aspects of Modern Opera" Mr. Lawrence Gilman discusses the aims, artistic methods, and actual achievements of those composers whom he regards as salient figures in the operatic art of to-day. The work is published by Mr. John Lane, who also publishes "Little Dinners with the Sphinx," by Richard le Gallienne, and "Madrid." This is another volume in Mr. Lane's well-known "Spanish Series;" a historial and descriptive account of the Spanish capital, by Mr. A. F. Clavert, with 450 illustrations.

"The New Andromeda" is the title of a new novel by Carlton Dawe, which Mr. Nash publishes.

Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell has three new works in hand, viz., "Monica," a novel, by Margaret F. Osborne; "German, the Viking" an old English story, by James Stuart; and "Popular Stories," Series 1, by new authors.

"Cymdeithas Llen Cymru III., Herr Caniadau Serch." Booksellers will kindly note that the above can now be obtained from S. V. Galloway, Pier Street, Aberystwyth, who will also be pleased to supply information respecting price, &c., of the rest of the series.

Mr. P. M. Barnard, M.A., of 10, Dudley Street, Tunbridge Wells, formerly classical scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge, has recently opened a branch of his second-hand book business at 83, Bridge Street, Manchester. Mr. Barnard's recent catalogues include "Early English Literature," "Armorial and other Bindings," "Aldine Press, Classical Authors, &c."; and the latest is an illustrated catalogue of MSS. and Incunabula, &c., including three fine "Horæ Beatæ Virginis Mariæ" manuscripts priced respectively £80, £40 and £8 8s. The Incunabula include books produced by Peter, of Friedburg, Johann Mentelin, G. Husner, J. Reinhard, &c., of Strassburg; and early books printed at Cologne, Augsburg, Nürmberg, &c.

The increasing interest in the Apocrypha has necessitated the printing of translations thereof in cheap editions. The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge has just issued "The Apocrypha in Welsh," at 1s. The Apocrypha can also be obtained in French and in German, and selected portions have been published by the S.P.C.K. in Chinese, Dutch, and Marathi (India). Now the people of Japan are calling for these books.

JOAN OF GARIOCH. By ALBERT KINROSS.

THE RED CITY. By Dr. S. WEIR MITCHELL.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

We were somewhat surprised to see in The Times such a remark as that we have put in italics in the following extract from a notice of Mr. Teignmouth Shore's "A Soul's Awakening," just published by Mr. John Long—the story of a second-hand bookseller.

> "First, the soul of Arthur Murchant, an elderly bookseller, who knows no friends outside his books, until he unexpectedly falls in love with Edith Adams, and becomes her supremely happy and adoring husband. Secondly, the soul of Walter Corban, Murchant's assistant, a struggling literary genius who—like his master—has never given thought to women until he discovers that he loves his master's wife. Thirdly, Edith awakes with horror to the knowledge that it is Corban who is her soul's mate, and not Arthur, the sympathetic and unselfish husband to whom she owes so much. The story of these awakenings is a pathetic one. It is true that one does not readily associate such intense refinement of feeling, thought, and speech with the class from which the author draws his material; but it is apparent that he is dealing with exceptions, not with a class. Wide is the gulf between Corban and his sister Maggie, the factory girl, whose sordid story throws the exceptional character of the genius into high relief. Edith, too, the starving daughter of a broken-down and drunken man of letters, shines in her dark surroundings like some white flower. And Arthur Murchant is an exquisitely sketched character. We can see him polishing his spectacles and nervously stroking his chin; we can hear him clearing his throat and hesitating before some gentle humorous little speech. Mr. Teignmouth Shore has captured our sympathy for his characters in an unusual degree."

It would be interesting to know which particular class has a monopoly of "refinement of feeling, thought and speech."

Publishers and booksellers are glad to have, for circularising purposes, a list of the members of the various county scientific societies. An abridged edition of the half-guinea volume of the "Proceedings" of the Dorset Natural History and Antiquarian Field Club, containing, among other things, a list of the names and addresses of the 400 members of the Dorset Club, can be obtained for 1s. 3d., post free, from the Secretary, Milton Abbey Vicarage, Blandford.

World-languages to suit all tastes, unless one's taste is unreasonably exacting, have now been provided. Choice may be made from a long list of tongues, ingeniously and scientifically formed, and most delightfully free from exceptions. There are, for example, Volapük, Lingua, Panroman, Interpretor, Esperanto, Ido, and Tutonish. This last ought to appeal irresistibly to Teutons and Anglo-Saxons, including, of course, Americans. Its inventor, one Elias Molee, is a Norwegian, and his aim has been to compound a sort of Anglo-Germanico-Hollando-Scandinavian compromise speech—a kind of North-European linguistic hash the scoffer may unkindly call it—for North-European use especially. He thinks his predecessors in the fascinating art of language-manufacture have been too ambitious: they have selected their ingredients predominantly from the romance languages and then tried to impose their latinised compound on Teutonic peoples.—The Chicago Dial.

Mrs. Allen Harker's "Miss Esperance and Mr. Wycherley," a novel of the "Cranford" type, has so won its way into public regard that a second edition is nearly exhausted, and a third will be wanted.

IF I WERE YOU!—One finds a good number of people discouraged in life by setting up ideals of conduct that they do not find acted up to. We have notions of our own as to what we would do if only we were "in the other fellow's place," and we don't know what "the other fellow's place" really is, says The Penny Magazine. We hear other people express their opinions as to what they would have done in such circumstances. They would invariably have behaved nobly. At last we begin to dream that human nature is capable of a great deal more than we find it doing in those we are acquainted with, and we look down on them accordingly. It does not help us to make the best of them or help us to arrive at sane conduct in ourselves.

The two pictures by the late James MacNeill Whistler, Portrait of the Artist and Valparaiso, now being exhibited at the Royal Academy in the collection of the late Mr. George McCulloch, are reproduced in the Illustrated Catalogue published at The Art Journal office, and among the other 140 illustrations are:—"The Procession of the Daphnephoria" and "The Garden of the Hesperides," by the late Lord Leighton; 3 illustrations after Sir J. E. Millais, 2 after Sir L. Alma-Tadema, "Lear and Cordelia" and "Richard, Duke of Glo'ster, and the Lady Anne," by Edwin Abbey, R.A.; "Love among the Ruins" and others by Sir E. Burne-Jones, &c.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin's very recent publications include "High Life in the Far East," by Mr. James Dalziel, a volume of stories, mostly of life in China and the Eastern Seas; an edition of George Macdonald's "The Portent and Other Stories"; also a new edition of "Turkey," for which Mr. Stanley Lane-Poole has written a new chapter, dealing with recent events and the present situation. Mr. Unwin also publishes a similar edition, with a new chapter and new illustrations, of Mr. William Miller's "The Balkans," also in the "Story of the Nations" series.

A good deal of attention has been aroused by an article which appeared in the current issue of the Fortnightly Review. The writer, a Dissenting Minister, protested in earnest words against the identification of dissenting religion with political party. Himself a consistent Liberal, he naturally holds no brief for Conservatism, except only so far as to imply that a Conservative is not without the pale of salvation. The argument is now expanded into a book, which Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., will publish immediately, under the title of "Nonconformity and Politics," by a Nonconformist Minister.

The new Church Quarterly Review has an article on the novels of M. René Bazin, of the French Academy, one of the most charming of modern French novelists. There are also a large number of short notices of books on various subjects of theological and literary interest.

Lord Roberts has written an Introduction to a notable book shortly to be issued by Messrs. Seeley & Co., "Among the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Frontier," by Dr. Pennell.

It must seem odd to a citizen of Boston or New York to learn that "Bath has no authentic history previous to its occupation by the Romans," as though Bath had only just been "turned on." Mr. Meehan, in No. 129 of his articles in the Bath Beacon, gives a portrait and account of Bladud, the founder of Bath, and only son of Lud Hudibras, the eighth King of the Britons. Presuming that the editor of the Beacon is not a millionaire, or owner of a brewery, or a landed proprietor, one can understand the complacency with which he views the increased taxation which he prophesies is coming on big incomes, beer, and land.

Edinburgh Book Notes

By "Edina."

THERE was an apparent fluttering in the dove-cots of art saintship the other day, when Sir Hubert Herkomer spoke his strong condemnation of the ways of the connoisseurs. Sir Hubert is quite right, and we admire his manly criticism. We do not believe in saint worship in Scotland—at least, it formed part of our Treaty of Union with England in 1707, and two centuries later we see no reason for changing our minds. Why should not art lovers have their saints and saints' days? The Almighty Dollar has canonised St. Rembrandt, St. Velasquez, St. Rubens (no! he is a doubtful one, his robes are too parti-coloured). All a dealer has to do, if he has no conscience, is to get a passable copy of one of the saint's relics, let the canvas rot a bit in a damp cellar, get an equally conscienceless "faker" to imitate a signature, and the dollars flow into the treasury. Or, it may be, a canvas which has been hanging up in some cottage finds its way for a few shillings into a Jew's black wrap, and in due course appears in a London sale room, as a rare find. It is bought by a dealer and in due time re-appears under fresh auspices in the presence of commission holders who top a respectable upset price—so moves the ball, gathering as it goes on its gold-dust career. We have seen it among books as well as pictures. It is highly amusing as a game, but somebody has to pay for their saint worship. Why should not they?

Yet we have reason to condemn this "rigging" of the market, for it all comes out of the honest dealer's pocket. The money so squandered is at his expense. When he has something to offer which is good, and he asks a fair price, doubt and suspicion meet his demands. Why? Because he has a conscience. It is a terrible friend, and one who persists in being a close companion. But who is really paying for all this? You and I, fellow dealers; and the artists, who cannot be canonised till they die, are begging from door to door like the good old monks. What an outlook for those who appreciate Art for art's sake? Let us be done with saint worship in art. I can appreciate the beauties of a Watts, a Whistler, a Turner, quite as much on my feet as on my knees. "Bow not thyself down to them nor serve them"; but rather let them be examples for thy guidance, O, Tyro! that thou mayest profit and not go begging thy bread.

Wherefore this tirade, Edina, to thy fellow-booksellers. Dost thou presume to teach us? Assuredly not, yet ye may learn somewhat at my hands, for many there be among us who know not their left hand from their right in the things of art. A book with cheap illustrations culled from a hundred electrotype agencies, in their eyes, is beautifully illustrated in the highest style of art. Sir Hubert, where art thou? Teach us to know how to discern, for upon us the would-be-wise purchaser relies.

That which is wrong in art circles to-day is just what is wrong in bookshops. We see no reason for going through the mill. We get together a few handbooks for ready reference, a set of "Book Prices Current" or "Auction Sale Records"—splendid friends to the wise—and add a large amount of assumption, and there we are. There is no royal road in bookselling, and there are but sorry footpaths in art. Both have left behind the common lead-pencil to experiment with mediums we know not the proper handling of, and, having made a "hit" once or twice, we pose as exponents of the new science. The way of art is long—life-long trudging—the way of bookselling is climbing—ever climbing.

The change which has come over the one has affected the other. We have lost the ideals—the true worship; and in its stead we have set up groves and idols in abundance. One day it is the cult of R.L.S., the next we bow to Omar.

Come, let us be done with mundane reverences, and restore the old-time worship of things true, and honest, and of good report. When we deal with book-illustration let us speak honestly that which we know, and praise not quantity but quality.

Of course, we all know that illustrations are produced by one of three means—from plates which are incised, from flat surfaces, or from raised surfaces. The first is the most expensive process, the last named usually the cheapest, but there are degrees of difference between these which register not only quality but quantity also. The printing in intaglio, i.e., from incised plates, is the oldest European style of illustration, having been used by the old silver engravers long before printing was invented, for preserving patterns. Whether the plate is engraved by the burin direct, or etched by acid, the process of printing from it is the same. The plate has to be daubed with ink, the surface cleaned, and the paper forced by pressure into the incisions from which it draws up the ink retained in them. The process is necessarily a slow one, and depends for its beauty as largely on the skill of the printer as upon that of the engraver. Mechanical handling may produce more uniformity of impression, but only at the expense of merit. A book may be more beautifully illustrated with half a dozen plate prints than one which contains hundreds of half-tone or line blocks, and would probably cost more to produce. Therefore, our judgment of quality must be a relative one, not a quantitive.

Surface printing is a much less expensive process than plate printing, and, until the introduction of photography, was usually done from stones. It is a comparatively recent process, due to the resistance of water to fatty matter and the adhesion of an oily ink to a surface which is fatty. Once commenced the printing is comparatively more uniform and requires less skill than the printing of plates. Hence, the cost is much less, both in making ready the stone and the after obtaining of the impressions.

Relief printing, i.e., printing from raised surfaces, has many advantages over either of the two already mentioned, the greatest of which is its adaptability to the text of a book. Originally this was done by means of wood blocks, having the design cut in relief on their surface; but now the two methods mostly in use are known as the line and half-tone processes. The objection to the line process is the entire absence of atmosphere. Black lines, whether fine or coarse, are all equally black. The curse of the half-tone process, the inability to give anything except atmosphere. Between these two hangs the beautiful wood-engraving begun by Bewick, and so artistically and painstakingly executed by the wood-engravers of the middle of last century. Crispness of detail combined with range of vision is the aim of such work, and it has not been lost sight of by present-day workers.

The fact that relief blocks can be inserted, and equally well printed in combination with the text of a book, and that without losing in speed of production, has created great possibilities in the art of book-making; and since blocks can now be made for shillings instead of pounds, the wealth in quantity has been the criterion of many publishers.

This has had its serious side on art. Quality is being sacrificed to quantity every day. When a publisher had to expend pounds on one block or plate he was content only to have the best he could get for the money. Now, every man who can scratch with a fine pen in India ink thinks himself a Hugh Thomson, a Charles E. Brock or a Herbert Railton, and pesters publishers and booksellers with his sketches, until some kind soul, equally devoid of the imagery of art, takes pity on him, and commissions him to illustrate a book. Then we get quantity without quality printed on choice paper, which the bookseller takes as a recommendation to foist in glowing terms on his unsuspecting victim. The victim "holds the baby," but he trembles at the increase of his family year by year. We have built a large Art School in Edinburgh, and Mr. Fletcher is set there to remedy all such evils. If he succeeds in preventing a fresh flow of tyro-ism and mediocrity into the already starved ranks of Edinburgh art workers, he will do more than any similar institution has done during the last half century. If not, we must go on worshipping names, and let art care for itself. To-day the ladder of art is crowded from end to end, but the gangway at the top is quite empty.

"Edinburgh Artists at Work" will form the subject of my next paper.

M.P.'s and a Tax on Advertisements

THE January Number of our excellent contemporary Advertising (the British Magazine of Publicity) contains an interesting collection of opinions from prominent members of Parliament on the desirability or otherwise of a tax on advertisements. The Editor prefaces the letters by drawing an inference from the Chancellor's speech at Liverpool (when Mr. Lloyd-George said he did not propose to interfere with any productive industry in the country) that as advertising is essentially a productive industry, no tax upon advertisements is likely. Mr. T. Hart Davies, who promoted the Advertisements' Regulation Bill, expresses himself as in favour of a tax on "flaring posters," but Sir John Barker, Sir Clifford J. Cory, Sir W. J. Bull, Sir Gilbert Parker, Mr. Philip Snowden, Mr. Hilaire Belloc, Mr. W. P. Byles Mr. J. Ramsey Macdonald, and others are strongly against any such tax, advancing such arguments as that it would interfere with commercial enterprise, impede and restrict trade, and increase unemployment.

To tax advertisement—except those which defile our fields or are otherwise of a noxious nature, is like taxing sunlight—Advertisement is the Motor of Commerce.

Books for the Welsh National Library

SIR JOHN WILLIAMS, of Plâs Llanstephan, has presented his large collection of books, amounting to twenty thousand volumes, as well as valuable manuscripts, to the Welsh National Library at Aberystwyth, which was established by Royal Charter in March, 1907.

The Shirburn collection of Welsh books and manuscripts is the most valuable addition which Sir John Williams made to the library. For 150 years these valuable books remained undisturbed in the possession of the Earls of Macclesfield, at Shirburn Castle, Oxfordshire, down to 1899, when they were sold. The collection was commenced between the years 1690 and 1740 by the Rev. Samuel Williams, a Cardiganshire Vicar.

The library is particularly rich in Bibles, Prayer-books, and hymnology. Every Welsh Bible printed before 1800, and many of those later, is included. There are two copies of the 1588 Bible; one, the Shirburn copy, is probably the tallest and finest in existence, and the second is also a very fine one. The Salesbury New Testament, 1567, is also represented by two copies, both perfect and in fine condition. The library is also rich in works by the great writers connected with Wales, and in works dealing with specific periods, such as the Civil War and the Eighteenth Century Revival.—The Standard.

With a Frontispiece by Prince Charlie

MR. W. G. BLAIKIE MURDOCH is publishing, at 6s. net., through Messrs. J. & E. Gray & Co., Edinburgh, "The Royal Stuarts in their Connection with Art and Letters." Mr. Murdoch says: "I don't know if you will care to mention the fact, but it seems to me that you would be certain to interest hundreds of Scottish readers if you told them that the frontispiece to my book is from a drawing authenticated as being the work of Prince Charlie!"

Naturally one is interested in anything connected with Bonnie Prince Charlie.

Roller Skating

HEALTH AND STRENGTH, LTD. (12, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.), are the publishers of a book on Roller-Skating, the craze of the moment, by C. S. Monohan—the Great Monohan. The author is said to be the most accomplished professor of the art in the whole world. He is now touring this country for the special purpose of demonstrating the possibilities of scientific skating on rollers, and is engaged to visit all the principal rinks in London and the country.

There is sure to be a great demand for a good book on roller-skating; it is so popular just now, and rinks are being opened all over England. London alone, we believe, has at least a dozen. Booksellers should make hay whilst the rinkers rink.

The late Mr. Henry Kelly

THE death of Mr. Henry Kelly (senior partner in the firm of Kelly & Sons), on the 16th inst., in his 85th year, creates a gap in the ranks of the older bookbinding firms. The business was founded by Mr. John Kelly, grandfather of the deceased, in or about 1770. In 1803 the firm removed to the present premises in Water Street, Strand, and the family resided in Arundel Street, where Mr. Henry Kelly was born in 1824. It is difficult to trace the growth of the business under Mr. Kelly's management, but it is quite certain that he had a keen business instinct in the sixties and seventies, as the character of the business carried on proves. In his early days paper wrapper work was the staple industry, and binders were understood to make their profit out of the shavings! In 1878, however, calf, morocco and other expensive bindings were occupying the greater part of the staff, and the whole nature of the business altered. At this time the firm achieved a well-earned reputation for well bound school prizes, the arms of many well-known colleges appearing on the covers of the books.

The late Mr. Henry Kelly was well known amongst the members of the older publishing and bookselling firms for his genial manner and old fashioned courtesy to all with whom he came in contact, and his loss will be keenly felt not only by his relatives and friends but also by the members of his staff and the trade with which he was for so many years connected. Although Mr. Kelly had for some years ceased to take an active part in the management of the business, he retained to the last his interest in everything that occurred.

The funeral took place on the 21st at the Hampstead Cemetery, and was attended by a very large number of relatives and friends and members of the staff.

THE LATE MR. HENRY KELLY.

The South American Republics

MR. UNWIN will publish on Monday an elaborate work on "The Rise and Progress of the South American Republics," by Mr. George W. Crichfield. Mr. Crichfield has spent nearly 20 years of his life in studying the social and political conditions of Venezuela, Ecuador, Brazil, the Argentine Republic, Bolivia and the other South American States. His work forms probably the most complete encyclopædia of information about South America in existence, and Mexico, Central America, Cuba and San Domingo also come within its scope. Among the subjects treated are the history of the various states, noted Latin-American leaders, the Dictatorship as a kind of government, social conditions, business conditions, &c.

Bookselling in Ireland

SCARCELY any more striking example of the advance of our age in the spirit of tolerance could be contemplated than that of a general bookseller's store of the present day, especially in the verdant green Isle. When I think on it my soul is filled with amazement, for here in the shelves that are full to repletion (who ever saw an inch of unfilled shelf in a bookseller's? and yet travellers cross the Channel twice, nay, some four times, each year and greet each proprietor with a smile, and without a blush seek, and invariably secure, an order for stock—pardon the digression), and on the counters in rows and stacks are found, often jostling each other, books, some laudatory, some damnatory, of High Church, Evangelical Church, Roman Catholic, Irish Presbyterian, Methodist, &c., and looking at these same books and perhaps "bidding the time of day" to one another, may be observed a clean shaven son of the Roman Catholic Church and perhaps a bearded Churchman or Nonconformist, selecting from the same case a weapon wherewith the better to destroy the other. And yet it is not difficult to understand that the bombs of argument that are thus prepared, and often savagely flung with intent to destroy, eventually mean the strengthening up of all, so that a few more errors are cut away, and a little more true light is allowed to shine on the path of each, and greater tolerance, and love, and wisdom, may undoubtedly be looked for.

The booksellers who have read with pleasure these flowing sentences thus far, will not I trust experience a jar if I ask, What will become of us when controversial books cease to be published? This is neither the time nor place for any subject that may depress one, for, indeed, after the superhuman efforts that each bookseller has been called upon to make, both physically and mentally, during the greater part of last month, I have no wish to Rackh(i)m further with business doubts.

Business appeared to open up earlier in December and, from different reports received, the volume of business done was most satisfactory, even the unfortunate strike in our beautiful old City, Dublin, fostered by paid English agitators, failed to affect sales to any appreciable extent. Surely one of the most remarkable incidents in the history of bookselling of recent years occurred on December 11th, 1908, when a very live publishing firm, whose name has recently been linked with the Ancient and Honourable Press of the University of Oxford, occupied no less than five columns of The Northern Whig, Belfast. This spirit of enterprise, if indulged in a little more freely by publishers, would be highly appreciated in Ireland, where our local papers show that every class of English and Scotch business concern exploits its wares systematically, except publishing firms. The only adverse criticism I heard regarding this advertisement was that it did not appear in The Belfast Newsletter also. The latter paper has a very large circulation and is a Tory organ; The Whig was formerly what its name implies, but of late years is strongly Unionist in tone, and the man who reads the one does not often trouble with, or believe much in, the other, and this fact tempts me to include here a reminiscence of my youth, when I lived in Belfast, and which I think is fairly typical of how men view life through coloured glasses, although perhaps they do not acknowledge it so freely, or realize it at all themselves. My father took in The Newsletter, my grandfather The Whig; both men had equally strong opinions in sympathy with their respective papers. If the Tories got the Liberals into a corner, or thought they did, naturally my father's morning paper gave prominence to the fact, and in the evening, or on Sunday, when there was leisure to discuss matters, my father would endeavour in his turn to corner the venerable reader of The Whig. If the corner was really a very stiff one and difficult to turn, or if a real poser was put forward, my grandfather would state that the subject was not even alluded to in The Whig, and he would therefore doubt whether such an incident had really occurred.

[This reminds us of the old story of the Yankee Editor whose paper had been bought by the opposition, whose politics and persons he had been attacking all his time. He was asked if he would go with the paper and replied, "Wall—I guess it's a d—d sharp curve, but,—I'll take it."—ED. P.C.]

"Use of very small type should be made penal"

From a paper entitled "The Printing of Modern Illustrated or Decorated Books," read by Mr. Charles T. Jacobi before the Society of Arts, May 6th, 1902.

[The Chiswick Press has for more than a century stood for all that is best in printing, and in connection with our advocacy of good clear type and printing for children's books, we are glad to quote the views of the present Director of the Chiswick Press on the subject of clear print.—ED. P. C.]

"THE choice of type is often limited by the conditions that a volume must be kept within a certain compass, but if no such restrictions hamper one, it is advisable to select as large a face as is reasonable. Legibility should be the very first consideration, and this may be arrived at by using a large face of type, and printing in a good black ink, with a firm impression, on a suitable paper. Bad ink and weak impression are just as fatal to the appearance of a book as an insignificant type. In fact, it is quite possible to improve the latter by employing good ink and obtaining a fine impression. . . . .

"Legibility may combine both beauty and clearness, but if the first element is sometimes lacking, there is no limit to such types as have the advantage of being both clear and readable. By all means secure the two, if they are to be obtained. . . . .

"This theory of legibility I would also like to see applied generally, for not only does the absence of it affect the ordinary reader, but it very seriously handicaps the rising generation whilst undergoing the necessary educational course. If scholastic books could be printed in larger type, there would be no necessity for the London School Board to appoint oculists to examine the eyes of the scholars.

"The use of very small type, except for special purposes, should be made penal."

The Original of the Gibson Girl

MR. WILLIAM M. CHASE, the painter, has just revealed the fact that the model for his famous picture at the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia was the original of the famous "Gibson girl." The model is of great consequence, writes the artist in The Delineator. "It is the personality that inspires and which you depict upon the canvas. . . . To make a vivid personality grow, speak, live upon the canvas—that is an artist's triumph." The great English portrait painters, he explains, "make pictures as well as portraits, hence their work will live and be lauded in every age and generation. They are faithful to the objective sense, but the subjective—the greater sense—is subtly interwoven and predominates.

MR. E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM, whose new novel, "The Long Arm," Ward, Lock & Co. have just published.

These are the paintings that live." Mr. Chase tells us that his best models were found by a trusted negro servant, Daniel, who "became quite adept at judging them and was something of an art connoisseur as well." Mr. Chase writes :—

"One morning, while I was at work upon some pastels of the nude—which Daniel, by the way, called 'nakedtives'—the ingenious negro came tiptoeing in, his eyes bulging with excitement and his hands making mysterious signs. 'She's here!' he whispered.

"'Who?' I asked.

"'A model,' he said solemnly, 'what is a model!' And he motioned me to the waiting-room.

"Daniel was right. She was a model—and more. As she arose gracefully and stood smiling before me I knew at once that fortune had sent me the very subject I had long hoped to find—a perfect type of American womanhood.

"A clear-cut, classic face with splendid profile; a steadfast expression of sweetness, loveliness, womanliness; and, above all else, dignity and simplicity, these two greatest elements of successful portraiture.

"She was dressed in a plain black gown, just as I should have wished. But just a touch was lacking. A white crêpe shawl was hanging near, and I took it quickly and draped it about her shoulders. That was sufficient. The picture was complete!

"A word about the model. She was Mrs. Clark, the original "Gibson girl." I mention this point particularly because there have been so many claimants of this identity. Mrs. Clark was the model who made Charles Dana Gibson, the creator of the 'Gibson girl,' known all over the world. I wish also to speak of the very high regard in which Mrs. Clark was held by Gibson, Beckwith, myself and the other artists for whom she posed."

Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons' Ltd., Annual Dinner

THE staff of Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Amen Corner branch, held their annual dinner at The Charterhouse Hotel last Saturday (Mr. A. D. Power in the chair), at which the directors, Mr. Alfred and Mr. Ernest Pitman, were the guests of the evening. According to the invariable custom at these gatherings, there were no speeches, but after dinner a capital concert, under the direction of Mr. J. A. Slater, was given, among the items included being songs, &c., by Messrs. Brockwell, Daish, Davidson, Gee, Hynes, Jeffery, Jennings, and Slater' and an extremely interesting topographical sketch of Amen Corner and its neighbourhood by Mr. Arthur Reynolds.

SALESMANSHIP

A Practical Guide for Shop Assistant, Commercial Traveller, and Agent,

BY

W. A. CORBION and G. E. GRIMSDALE

In crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 158 pp. 2s. 6d. net.

"This admirable book elevates salesmanship into a fine art, and we can imagine no more profitable present—profitable both to giver and to recipient—than a copy of 'Salesmanship' bestowed by a shopkeeper upon each of his assistants. No intelligent shopkeeper will be long in seeing that it represents a first-class investment for half a crown."—Newsagent.

SALESMANSHIP

"The authors know what they are writing about, and hints of a practical nature abound throughout the pages. The principles of retail store routine are explained and classified, and the keeping of stock is methodical. The application of the proper principles in system, service, and conduct is outlined, and the lucid word-pictures of what is right and what is wrong cannot fail to prove of value to the business man for whose benefit the volume has been written."

Mr. Benjamin Kidd, Author of "Social Evolution" and "Principles of Western Civilization," writing from The Warders, Tonbridge, November, 1908, says:—"I take 'Public Opinion' every week, and find it one of the principal means of continuing my education that the world provides."

The Next Esperanto Congress

THOSE of our readers who are interested in Esperanto should note that the Fifth International Congress will be held at Barcelono, Hispanujo (j soft), Sep. 5 to 11, 1909, and that the Congress tickets, costing only 8s., "confer right to participate in the festivals and excursions, and give benefit of great reduction in travelling expenses." It must be rather fascinating to take part in a Congress of men and women of a dozen different nations, perhaps a score, who can all understand each other—at any rate, up to that point where misunderstanding ends in laughter, which all—even our dog friends—understand. The mutual ice-breaking laugh is the best thing Pan ever left us. The 1907 Congress was at Cambridge, England.

A Memorial of the Franco-British Exhibition

UNDER the title of "The Franco-British Exhibition Illustrated Review" Messrs. Chatto & Windus have published a quarto volume, finely and fully illustrated, which is at once a memorial of a delightful Exhibition, and of the most warmest approaches England and France have ever made, except on the battle-field.

"The sentimental element is much stronger on our side than the French realise. They have never been able quite to understand it. We are supposed to have no sentiment, and to care for nothing but material things and particularly our own advantage. That," as Guy Mauve well says in his introduction, is "a great mistake. We are not excitable, but we are far more excitable than many excitable peoples; and the simple truth is that we are really fond of France and the French. They, who are the most popular nation in the world, are nowhere more popular than here."

The more important features of the Exhibition, including the French and the British Colonial and British and Irish exhibits, are described. One of the illustrations shows Dorando fallen to the ground, and his friends helping him—to lose the race.

The 250 Guinea Prize Novel

MR. ANDREW MELROSE publishes this week a novel entitled "The Faith of His Fathers," by A. E. Jacomb. This is the story which Mr. Andrew Lang, Mr. W. L. Courtney, and Mr. Clement Shorter had to adjudicate upon, and they gave it the prize—we might almost call it the Nobel prize—of five thousand two hundred and fifty marks. On the paper cover of the cloth book is printed this verdict, presumably by the adjudicators:

> "The story is a powerful study of a group of characters in a provincial town, as they are individually affected by the cramping conditions imposed upon them by the sincere but narrow and rigid convictions of a religious zealot. The book is written with immense power and remarkable detachment. It is a perfectly relentless 'story of some idealists,' and while the author does not shrink from the supreme catastrophe of tragedy, the human interest is so intense that it holds the sympathy and attention of the reader throughout."

Which of the adjudicators is responsible for such a description of the book as this?

We cannot imagine Mr. Andrew Lang ascribing "immense power" to this work.

Where the Dickens Is It?

To the Editor of The Edinburgh Evening Dispatch.

SIR,—Can you inform me if the Edinburgh branch of the "Dickens Fellowship" is still in existence?

I have written twice to the Secretary (or Hon. Secretary!) asking for information as to the terms of membership, but I have received no reply.

In the January issue of the Dickensian, Edinburgh is set down as having a branch.

Perhaps some of your readers will be able to inform me if the branch is moribund or dead.

American Notes

(From The Publishers' Weekly).

In view of the approaching Abraham Lincoln Centenary books about him are in preparation.

A. W. Sijthoff, of Leyden, who is publishing a series of photographic reproductions of famous Greek and Latin MSS., under the editorship of Dr. de Vries, is issuing an appeal to scholars and directors of classical studies to support his enterprise, which has unfortunately failed to find help where he had every reason to expect it. The undertaking is one of obviously great value and usefulness to classical scholarship, and it is to be hoped that the appeal he now makes will meet a hearty response. Full particulars and price list of such Codices as have already appeared will be sent on application.

The Publishers' Auxiliary, 341, Fifth Avenue, New York City, has in preparation "Who's Who Among Women, 1908-1909," edited by Arthur S. Ford. The directory will give full maiden or married names and addresses, profession, place of birth, names of parents, father's profession, place of education and degrees obtained, husband's name and profession, names of children, if any, clubs and favorite pastimes.

One of the largest bookstores in Ontario is owned by a woman—Miss Agnes Goodeve's Oxford Book Store in Woodstock, Ontario. Miss Goodeve learned the trade in Mitchell with R. O. Smith, now of Orillia. When she went to Woodstock she opened up a book and stationery store in partnership with Mr. Smith, under the firm name of R. O. Smith & Co. After Mr. Smith removed to Orillia, Miss Goodeve alone continued the business as the Oxford Book Store.

Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson was 85 years old on December 22nd. Colonel and Mrs. Higginson kept open house and held an informal reception, and many people of Cambridge (Mass.) and its vicinity called to pay their respects.

The New York Browning Society, a year-old organisation, held a symposium at the Waldorf-Astoria on December 29th.

We are delighted to see our American book-trade contemporary rubbing in the importance of the index. "It is right and proper that something should be done, every now and then, to rouse the makers of books to the importance of indexes. The subject is familiar, no doubt. Nevertheless, lovers of good indexes should go on agitating in season and out of season for the establishment of the highest possible standard in this matter. Alfred W. Pollard, a bibliographer who is also a sensitive man of letters, a short time ago had a capital paper on indexes in The Cornhill Magazine. He is not ferocious, after the fashion of that John Baynes who is credited with the declaration 'that the man who published a book without an index ought to be damned ten miles beyond Hell, where the Devil himself could not get for stinging nettles.' Neither does he express approval of Lord Campbell's grim proposal, 'No index, no copyright.' He is content, rather, to be interesting and amusing about indexes, and in this way to make sympathetic the reform which, it seems, needs forever to be urged."

Watch Out for W. Smith, the Book Swindler!

The trade is warned against a person calling himself W. Smith and S. Schmidt, and claiming to represent Hurst & Co., as a selling agent. Mr. Smith is about 35 years old, 5 ft. 7 in. tall, weighs about 135 pounds, has light complexion and hair, smooth face, and from the left ear the upper lobe is missing. He has a decided German accent and seems to be well informed on general literature.

Nelson's Hardy

By a happy coincidence the publication by Mr. Murray this month of "Nelson's Hardy, His Life, Letters, and Friends," by Mr. A. M. Broadley and the Rev. R. G. Bartelot, coincides with the movement now on foot for the restoration of the Victory to the condition in which it was when Nelson embarked on her at Portsmouth in September, 1805. This lends a special interest to the chapter giving the letters of Midshipman Roberts, written on the days succeeding the great battle. Some of the new Hardy letters are exceedingly interesting.

How "Uncle Remus" was Invented

It appears that the late Joel Chandler Harris, instead of courting the fame that is so surely his, always felt that the "Uncle Remus" stories were a sort of accident in the life of a quiet Georgia newspaper-man. We read in The American Review of Reviews the following account of the first appearance of these stories in the Atlanta Constitution:

Harris had at the age of twelve entered a county newspaper office as printer's devil. He had gone through the multifarious "grind" of a provincial newspaper man in Savannah, Macon, and elsewhere, when in 1876 Colonel Howell brought him to the Atalanta Constitution as editorial writer and capable journalistic man-of-all-work. Soon after this "Si" Small, who had been doing dialect-sketching for The Constitution, resigned, and Colonel Howell, with some difficulty, persuaded Harris to step into the breach and keep the readers amused.

The only thing the young editor could think of was to write down the old plantation stories he had heard in the negro cabins while, after the fashion of Southern boys, he had loafed with the darkies in front of the big open fireplace, with hoecake browning and bacon sizzling. So he ransacked his memory for the most characteristic of these darky stories, printed them in The Constitution, and became famous.

This last result surprised him not a little. When he began to get letters from all over the world from "fellows of this, and professors of that, to say nothing of doctors of the other," he became aware for the first time that he had invaded the preserves of learned philologists and students of folklore, who were mightily interested in finding that the same stories were being told on the plantations of Georgia that amused the small coolies in the rice-fields of India. While the learned people were so profoundly impressed by "Uncle Remus," it does not appear that he was much impressed by them, save for the appeal to his shrewd sense of humour. His was the most charming disposition to take fright when asked to take himself seriously.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin's Annual Staff Dinner

The Annual Dinner of the Staff of Mr. T. Fisher Unwin was held at the Hotel Villa-Villa, in Gerrard Street, on Friday evening, January 15. Members of all the various departments were present. Mr. Unwin was the guest of the evening, and a particularly admirable chairman was found in Mr. A. P. Austin. After dinner, songs were excellently given by Messrs. A. J. Thielemann, A. K. Harding, W. E. Anderson, J. Cushing, J. Howes, B. Ringham, and C. Terry. Mr. W. E. Anderson also gave a dramatic recitation, and Mr. J. Worm recited, in the original German, the "Carneval" of Börries von Münchausen. The brilliant violin solos of Mr. A. Forbes were much appreciated, as were also the services of Mr. Charles E. Ollett as accompanist. A pianoforte solo was also given by Mr. R. Cobden-Sanderson. In the course of the evening Mr. T. Fisher Unwin delivered an informal speech; incidentally he recalled the fact that the gathering was held in a sometime home of Edmund Burke. Hearty thanks were voted to Mr. A. D. Marks for organising the festivities. Towards the close of the evening the following verses, by an anonymous member of the staff, were read by Mr. Marks:

Hunger and thirst, and floods of tears,
And tottering on the dreadful brink
Whoever either falls or fears
Enjoys the journey—I don't think.

Hold up your head, for life is sweet,
And dance to Youth unending;
But Death arrives with rhythmic feet—
My word! If he catch you bending!

The shadows vanish one by one,
And all our pleasures break and go;
But we believe what we have done
Is good. Are we downhearted? NO!

At Bow Street on Wednesday last, Richard Edward King, of 84A, Stapleton Road, Tooting, and 4, Eagle Street, Holborn, was committed for trial. The case will probably be heard at the Old Bailey on February 2nd.

The Garden Annual for 1909

THE "Garden Annual for 1909" is intended to be primarily an up-to-date directory for Nurserymen, Seedsmen and Florists. It contains many thousands of names and addresses, alphabetical lists of country seats and of the principal parks and gardens in Great Britain and Ireland, a variety of miscellaneous information of value to all connected with horticulture, also a list of the principal horticultural societies, and a diary showing their dates of meetings for 1909 as far as arranged. A lengthy section is devoted to the new plants, fruits and vegetables which have been certificated during the past twelve months by the Royal Horticultural and other societies, including the results at the R.H.S. Gardens at Wisley. This section should prove of special interest to those in the horticultural profession, for whom the work has been prepared. The "Garden Annual for 1909" is published in cloth at 2s., and in paper covers at 1s. net; and it is issued from the offices of Gardening Illustrated, 17, Furnival Street, London, E.C.

Lady Dudley's Book of Cookery

"THE Dudley Book of Cookery and Household Recipes" is the title of a volume by Georgiana Countess of Dudley, which is to be published shortly by Mr. Edward Arnold. It will contain nearly five hundred recipes of various kinds, interspersed with numerous epigrammatic quotations from well-known writers. The recipes have either been in Lady Dudley's family for many years, or have been collected by her during a wide experience of hospitality, and she has so often been asked by her friends for copies of recipes that she has decided to publish this volume, hoping that it may be found useful. Lady Dudley desires to contradict the inaccurate and imaginary statements as to the sources of the recipes, which appeared first in an American journal, and have been reproduced by certain newspapers in this country. These misstatements have caused great annoyance to the author, although she hopes that their manifest absurdity will be apparent to all English readers.

Book Trade Case in Bombay

AT the Bombay High Court on Friday, before the Hon. Mr. Justice Davar, two suits filed by Messrs. Blackie & Sons, Ltd., publishers, of the United Kingdom, who have a branch in Bombay, against their former manager in India, Mr. O. S. Mawson, were heard ex parte, and disposed of. Mr. Mawson did not appear; he was last heard of in Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. In the first of these suits the firm claimed from the defendant Rs. 18,173 with interest and costs; asked from him the return of the private letters, book, and three powers of attorney, which had been given in his favour in the interest of the business. In the second suit Messrs. Blackie & Sons prayed for a decree against Mr. Mawson for Rs. 281, being costs and damages incurred in breaking open a locked-up office room and a safe, the keys of which Mr. Mawson had not delivered; and for Rs. 531 for various articles he had purchased for his personal use, but which had been paid for from the moneys belonging to the business. He was Messrs. Blackie's manager from September, 1901, to June, 1907. In March, 1907, he went to England on leave, and his employment terminated in the June following. When the books of private letters and the three powers of attorney granted to him were demanded from him, he said they were entrusted for safe keeping to Messrs. Cox & Co. Decrees were passed in favour of the plaintiffs with interest and costs, and other reliefs were granted to them.—Times of India, Dec. 21, 1908.

The "Odd Volume" Helps

BOOKSELLERS SELL OVER 30,000 COPIES

AT a committee meeting, held at 111, St. Martin's Lane, by permission of Messrs. Chatto & Windus, on Friday the 15th inst., of the London Branch of the National Book Trade Provident Society, Mr. F. Denny, President, in the chair, a statement by the hon. treasurer of the branch was read that the sales of the "Odd Volume," issued on behalf of the funds of the Society, reached considerably over 30,000; which was deemed very satisfactory. The funds of the Society will in consequence receive a substantial sum when the accounts are finally completed, which is gratifying to all concerned in the welfare of the Society. Reports of new life members as well as new ordinary members were received, and arrangements are now being made for a social evening at an early date, particulars of which will be announced later. It will be seen that although the Society is young the members and officials are particularly vigorous and the membership greatly increasing.

Conquering the Arctic Ice

AN INTERESTING LECTURE

AT the Æolian Hall, New Bond Street on Friday evening, Jan. 15th, Captain Ejnar Mikkelsen, author of "Conquering the Arctic Ice,"* gave a most interesting and entertaining lecture on the voyage of exploration in the Arctic regions undertaken by the Anglo-American Expedition, 1906-1908. The lecture was illustrated with a large number of excellent limelight views which graphically showed the dangers, difficulties and trials he and his comrades had to undergo. To make a sledge journey of 3,000 miles over ice and snow is a marvellous performance and it is the world's record. Major Leonard Darwin, President of the Royal Geographical Society, was in the chair and the hall was well filled. A flashlight photograph of the audience was taken at the close of the lecture.

We regret in last week's issue in our reviews a notice of some new "Story Readers" appeared under the name of Messrs. Schofield & Sons, Ltd. This should have been Messrs. Schofield & Sims, Ltd., the well-known educational publishing firm of Huddersfield.

Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell has removed from 6 & 7, Creed Lane, E.C., to more central premises at 29, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

Mr. Harold Cleaver, of Bath, asks us to say that he has taken over the business established by his brother, F. S. THE DINNER OF THE ANTIQUARIAN BOOKSELLERS

DEAR SIR,—In your admirable report of the Second Annual Dinner I am said to have disclaimed that Book-Auction Records was a trade journal. The unforeseen and unexpected honour of having my name coupled with your own, Mr. Whitaker's and Mr. Murray's in connection with the toast must have temporarily blurred my mental vision. What I should have said was that my publication was not quite in the same category as those officially included in the terms of the toast, since it is neither a "weekly" nor a "monthly." But it was established primarily for the use and benefit of my confrères, and is therefore justly entitled to be ranked as a trade journal. The following paragraph, indeed, from B.A.R., Vol. 3, page xxvii., is conclusive proof of my view of the matter:

> "The sole justification for the existence of a trade journal is that it should always be endeavouring to protect and advance the interests of its subscribers, and B.A.R. will ever be alert in that respect."

While writing may I add that members of the trade who were not present will of course understand that Mr. Herbert Bailey's entertaining account of what passed between him and myself on the telephone would have been prefaced by Artemus Ward as "a joke.' The "Statesman" was not sought because he was a Statesman, but because he was a bibliophile; nor was the "Socialist" because he was a Socialist, but because he was, first of all, a distinguished man of letters. The "Statesman" would have come if he could have done so. The "Socialist" will, we trust, at some future date deign to grace our festive board.—Yours faithfully,

FRANK KARSLAKE.

A VOLUME OF "HARRIS'S CABINET" WANTED

DEAR SIR,—Recent experience has shown me once again how completely children's books disappear from off the face of the earth. For the last twelve months I have been trying to get a copy of one of the issues of "Harris's Cabinet," published about 1810 or 1812, by John Harris, containing "The Old Woman and Her Pig"; I have advertised for it everywhere, but without success. The Newbery and Harris collection, which I made during the years 1877-1893, containing two or three copies, is in the possession of the executors of the late D. C. Heath, who purchased the collection, and it is impossible to get at them.—Believe me, Yours very truly,

C. WELSH.

BANKRUPT PUBLISHERS

SIR,—I wish to protest against the way some printers, binders, and paper-makers give lengthy credit to irresponsible publishing firms.

When a publisher goes bankrupt there is a certain number of firms in these three trades which one knows beforehand will appear against heavy figures in the list of creditors.

Publishing in a moderate way is not a business requiring large capital nor lengthy credit. Quite a large proportion of the first editions of ordinary books are sold on subscription to the wholesale houses and libraries, who pay one month after delivery of the books. It is therefore unnecessary that the manufacturing trades should, as they often do, give six to nine months' credit. They are putting temptation in the way of young publishing houses to be extravagant or trade beyond their capital.

When the long-credit publisher gets short of cash he breaks his prices all round to obtain the necessary money, and either makes the smaller members of the trade come down in their prices, or go without orders.

The long-credit publisher has no scruples as to poaching for authors, and as he will offer 50 per cent. more advance (which he seldom pays) he is generally successful at first. The author ends by figuring on the list of creditors, and when he goes back to his old firm with his next book it is generally found that his numbers have been let down disastrously.

There is no reason why printers, binders, and paper-makers should not insist on monthly accounts with publishers. It would be better for these trades, and would put the publishing business on a much sounder footing.

The irony of the whole thing is that the honest publisher, X, seeing his printers, binders, &c., let in heavily by Y (who for a year or two has been undercutting X, and taking away his authors), knows that he (X) will have to pay Y's creditor's himself. Do these printers, &c., pay these bad debts out of their private savings, or do they merely stick the sums they are let in for on to the unfortunate X's estimates and "extras" in the following year?

It would certainly pay publishers to take their printers, binders, and paper makers severely to task when they find them backing up irresponsible firms.

I, for one, intend in future to boycott the chief offenders.

Yours truly,
A PUBLISHER.

SOME GREEN CLOTH BINDINGS FADE RAPIDLY

DEAR SIR,—I shall be glad to know if any other bookseller has noticed the extreme rapidity with which green cloth binding fades without any action of strong light. This I have more particularly noticed with smooth cloth. I shall be glad if some expert would give opinion on the subject and suggest some remedy. I might mention that wrappers appear to be no protection, in fact, in some cases it seems to make matters worse. It is only in more recent publications that this happens, so it may be a question of inferior cloth.—Yours faithfully,

LIONEL W. JONES.

56, High Street, Folkestone.

"THE CLEANSING OF A CITY"

DEAR SIR,—You have done a great public service in drawing attention to this book, and I hope it will be on view in every bookseller's window, and on his counter, and I also hope your liberal offer will be accepted and practically applied. Your trenchant reference to the subject with which it deals is none too severe, and is rather milder than it deserves. The great social curse is worse—far worse—sapping as it does the vital power of manhood, and the utter degradation of woman, than all the evils of drunkenness. But the legislators of to-day, who were going to create a Paradise on earth, have been more intent on grinding their own axes and fads than legislating for the moral and physical welfare of the country generally, and cleansing the moral atmosphere of our great cities and towns; for the curse to which the book draws attention is not confined to London, but is as rampant in all our large cities—ay, even in the smaller towns. "Modern Babylon," which shocked the sensibilities of the "unco guid," and sent its author to prison for plain speaking, some years ago, is now a decayed theme, and G. R. Sims' "Cry of the Children" all but forgotten, as this book will be as soon as a few hundreds have read it. It is a true axiom "that what is everybody's business is nobody's." The evil is one to be grappled with by the Watch Committees of our Municipal rulers—who have full power to cleanse the streets of the human fiends who ply their devilish trade. Some short time back Manchester set a good example, but the vigilance is becoming apathetic. Edinboro' cleared its streets with vigour and success, and it is comparatively clean. Even Dublin has done a good work, and Sackville Street can now be used with freedom. It needs now for the pulpit to be actively used to arouse the moral sense of the community, and awaken the lethargic mind of the Municipal bodies, whose action alone will arouse the apathetic minds of our Imperial legislators. The subject is one that should appeal to, and command, the activities of the Church of England Men's Society, and as a V.P. of a Provincial branch I will bring it before our branch and give a copy of the book to each member.

It is a thousand pities a little more pains was not taken with the letterpress, which detracts from the appearance of the book, and would not have cost any more to have new, clean type.—Yours truly, a member of the C.E.M.S.,

HENRY M. CATER.
458, Moss Lane East, Manchester.

[We called it an ugly book because it dealt with ugly subjects, and was ugly in its get-up also—perhaps appropriately so.—ED. P.C.]

Notices of Books

Messrs. George Allen & Sons have issued another reprint of "Aglavaine and Selysette," Maeterlinck's exquisite play, so ably translated by Mr. Alfred Sutro, which they originally published in 1897.

From the Same.—"What and Why," by Shaw Maclaren. Mr. Maclaren places the elements of philosophic thought before the layman with an amount of illustration that is almost bewildering. The purpose of the little volume is purely ethical, the author basing his doctrine on the assumption that he is presenting "things as they are."

From Mr. Edward Arnold.—"The Mistress Art," by Reginald Blomfield, A.R.A., M.A., F.S.A. In these lectures, addressed to students in the Royal Academy Schools, the author has defined the aims and province of architecture, and has established a standpoint from which it should be studied by those who hope to practise the art. Mr. Blomfield is critical rather than archæological. His style is clear and mature, and his matter full of learning and wisdom.

From the Same.—"London Side-Lights," by Clarence Rook. A series of capital articles upon London, its times, its food and hotels, its work, and its play, and in fact all about it, delightfully written by a clever journalist, who has been in all sorts of places, and seen all its every-day life, with its comedy and tragedy. Every Londoner—indeed everyone who knows London at all—will thoroughly enjoy it.

From Messrs. Adam & Charles Black.—"The Round World," by J. Fairgrieve, M.A., F.R.G.S. This elementary geography is written for a class which has a knowledge of the homeland only, and of a few general geographic phenomena, such as deserts and forests. The aim is to consider the continents as sections of the globe, and to lay stress on world conditions of climate. A logical order is adopted, and the pupil is kept closely in touch with the human side of the subject—Dean Farrar's school-tale "Eric" has been considerably abridged, and in this abridged form, with composition exercises and illustrations, it is included in Black's Supplementary Readers (Intermediate). Included in the same Readers (Senior) are a compilation from two books by the Rev. W H. Fitchett, issued under the title "Great Deeds on Land and Sea," and Dr. John Brown's "Rab and his Friends."—"Black's Picture Lessons in English: Book IV." contains fourteen full-page illustrations in colour; it is intended for use in teaching composition to young children.

From Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd.—"Introduction to the Natural History of Language," by T. G. Tucker, Professor of Classical Philology in the University of Melbourne. There are students in various branches of knowledge to whom such a work as this will be a boon; professing to be but an outline sketch, it avoids too many technicalities, too many details. Nevertheless, the ground has been very carefully covered, and the standard authorities properly invoked.

From the Same.—"A School History of English Literature," by Elizabeth Lee. Vol. 3: Pope to Burns. The course of English Literature is treated descriptively rather than critically. The lives and works of the greater writers are dealt with separately, those of lesser note being grouped in classes. Short illustrative extracts are given wherever practicable, and an attempt has been made to indicate the relations of the writers to their literary forerunners and successors. The volume is intended as a text-book for the middle forms of schools, and is provided with a chronological table and an index.—"Blackie's English Texts" Series, edited by W. H. D. Rouse, Litt.D., now includes "The Spanish Armada," consisting of narratives taken from Hakluyt's "Voyages," and "Voyages and Plantations of the French in Canada," taken from Hakluyt and Purchas.

From Messrs. Jas. Brown & Son (Glasgow)—"Nautical Almanac for 1909." This is the 32nd year of issue of this indispensable, accurate, and comprehensive Almanac for Mariners. It is full of information relating to seamanship and navigation, contains complete list of lights, fog signals, beacons and buoys on coasts of the U.K., &c. &c., daily tide tables, tidal range and constant for the principal ports and places of the world, with four charts showing tidal streams around the British Isles and in the North Sea. The advertisements, of which there are many, are a valuable feature.

From the Same.—The Service Code for naval and military officers and all who travel. This book has been compiled for army and navy officers, tourists, and residents abroad, and there is hardly a subject that may be dealt with in code messages that is not included in the book. Besides being a secret code, which is the main feature of the work, longer messages can be sent by the aid of one word from this book than by any other code yet published. For ships, regiments, banks, agents, outfitters, clubs, and hotels, it is indispensable. There are some 15,000 messages in the work. It is done in three styles at 5s., 3s. 6d., and 1s., is clearly printed, and is a work of indisputable utility.

From the Same.—"The Boy Scouts Signal Card." A clearly printed card suitable for carrying in the pocket, containing International Code Flags and Special Significations, International Code Hoists, Distant Signals, Semaphore and Morse Codes, Pilot Jack Table, Bernard's Method of Learning the Morse Code, and Flag Morse.

From The Cambridge University Press.—"Conditions of Life in the Sea," by James Johnstone. This book gives a lucid account of the main results of modern quantitative marine biological investigations, and of the related results of hydrography and oceanography. Part I. is rather elementary in treatment, the object being to supply an account of those facts of oceanography which are not likely to be familiar to the reader who is not specially interested in marine biological investigation. Part II. deals with the methods and results of quantitative marine biological research; and Part III. with the general conditions of life in the sea.

From the Same.—"The English Grammar Schools to 1660: their Curriculum and Practice," by Foster Watson, M.A. Professor Watson presents a full and detailed account of the development of the teaching in the English Grammar Schools from the time of the invention of printing up to 1660. It is a history of the practice of the schools, of their curricula, and of the differentiated subjects of instruction; the basis of the work is therefore bibliographical, but from beginning to end the author has described only really representative documents and school text-books. Free use has been made also of school statutes. The book is full of the most important and interesting matter, much of which must be unknown to all but a mere handful of scholars; the value of the work consists not only in the original research work, which it embodies, but also in the logical arrangement of the various sections, and in the clear, forcible style which it is a delight to read.

From the Same.—"Agathocles," by H. J. W. Tillyard, B.A. This striking historical essay was awarded the Prince Consort Prize last year. The author has written throughout from the original authorities, but he has made full use of modern writers, and has carefully weighed the merits of their theories; he visited most of the historical sites in Africa and Sicily in 1906, and his views as to the battle of the Himeras were formed on the spot.—"Claudian as an Historical Authority," by J. H. E. Crees, M.A., D.Lit. Dr. Crees here attempts, with no small measure of success, to estimate the value of Claudian's poems as historical authorities, chiefly for the years 395–404 A.D., the period in which the bulk of his work was written. At the end of his studies of the material at hand, he finds that he is unable to rank himself with those who regard Claudian's works as almost valueless from a historical point of view—a conclusion which Dr. Crees holds does not do justice to his great powers of narrative, his faculty of delineating character, and the brilliance of his special pleading. The essay is an unusual piece of work, being sound, penetrating and suggestive.

From the Same.—"The Client Princes of the Roman Empire under the Republic," by Mr. P. C. Sands, M.A. This is Number 16 of the valuable series of Cambridge Historical Essays, and by no means the least important. Mr. Sands' work, for which he obtained the Thirlwall Prize in 1906, is a detailed enquiry into the relations between the Government of the Roman Republic and the "protected" States within her sphere of influence. Based as it is not only on contemporary Greek and Latin evidence and on extant treaties, but also on all the best modern works on the subject, the book constitutes a valuable résumé of Roman policy towards independent and quasi-independent States on the borders of the Great Republic. As such it has a useful bearing on the very similar problems of our own Empire. — "Hymenæus," a Latin Comedy acted at St. John's College, Cambridge (probably in 1578), now first printed with an Introduction and Notes by G. C. Moore Smith, Litt.D., Professor of English Language and Literature in Sheffield University. A scholarly and well-printed edition of a typical academical play. The plot is based on one of the stories of the Decamerone; and while, in presenting a heroine beset by three lovers (one, a German), it resembles "The Merchant of Venice," the adventures of the hero Erophilus are a remarkable anticipation of "Romeo and Juliet." The little book should, therefore, be of interest to Shakespeareans, as well as to more academic readers.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co.—"Common-Sense Papers." The author, Sir Fortune Free, tells us in the preface that his object in writing this book was to satisfy the requests of friends he has made in all parts of the world through a series of articles which he wrote for Cassell's Penny Magazine at the suggestion of the Editor. There are few authors who could have made a book of this description interesting. Most books dealing with Mental Culture, How to Avoid Physical Bankruptcy, Secrets of Success, Every-day Finance, Matrimonial Bad Bargains—we take a few headings of chapters at random—would be indescribably dull and uninteresting, but this book is humorous and entertaining, and the reader will certainly not put it aside until he has read it all through. If anyone wants really useful hints on how to get on in business, how to get married, to be successful, happy, &c., they cannot do better than invest one shilling in the purchase of this little volume.

From the Same.—"The Golden Precipice," by H. B. Marriott Watson. There are many very able novelists writing to-day, but only a few of them have Mr. Marriott Watson's power of absolutely riveting the reader's attention. It is not his plot, though that is excellent; it is not his characters, though they are curiously alive; it is some secret quality of his style, some inimitable flavour of romance that permeates his pages. This is a tale of treasure-seeking and mystery. As soon as the steamer has started on her journey the unexpected happens, and an unsuccessful attempt is made to maroon the captain. There is a mutiny, a treasure cavern, and love interest, and the most insatiable reader can scarcely ask for more than that.

From the Same.—"Letts's Printers' Diary." This diary contains in addition to the usual almanac and commercial information, special technical matter of daily use to printers, &c., indexed for instantaneous reference. A very useful work, which ought to be appreciated by compositors, machine-minders, and also bookbinders and stationers. We notice, however, that the name is not printed on the back, a great fault in any book, making it necessary before putting it up on a shelf, if needed for future reference, to label it, which always gives a book an unsatisfactory appearance and ought to be quite unnecessary.

From The Congregational Union of England and Wales.—"Christ and the Crowd," by Harold Murray. A plea, in the form of a story, for what is called the Institutional Church. The scenes are drawn from real life, those taken from Hyde Park having actually happened.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co. come three volumes of a new series, "Philosophies Ancient and Modern"—handy shilling primers, similar to their successful series of "Religions." The three books are "Hobbes," by Professor A. E. Taylor, of St. Andrews; "Locke," by Dr. S. Alexander, Professor of Moral Philosophy in Victoria University, and "Stoicism," by Professor St. George Stock. It will be seen that each of the editors named is a recognised authority in his subject. Though the "Stoicism" is perhaps the best of the three, the treatment in all is sound and instructive without being unduly "dry." Outlines are given of the lives of the philosophers dealt with, followed by a careful summary of their teaching and a fair appreciation of its permanent value. These primers are necessarily concise and incomplete and cannot take the place of a fuller study of philosophy; but they form a useful introduction to a great subject, and are moreover valuable as reminders that much which stands nowadays for new has really been said before.

From the Same.—"The Religion of Ancient Palestine," by Mr. Stanley A. Cook. This is an interesting and important little book. It is an attempt by a well-qualified scholar to present a general view of the prehistoric cults of Palestine before the rise of the Hebrew race and religion. The wonderful discoveries of late years at Tel el Amarna and elsewhere, and such investigations as those of Mr. McAlister at Gezeh, have supplied a mass of new material out of which Mr. Cook—than whom no one is better qualified for the task—has constructed a general picture, valuable alike to the archæologist and to the intelligent student of the Old Testament.

From the Same.—"Some Ladies in Haste," by Mr. Robert W. Chambers. An original and amusing story by the author of that popular novel, "The Fighting Chance," of a young society man of America, who acquires the gift of hypnotising his friends, male and female, behind their backs. He sets out to improve their characters and intellects and causes "concatenations accordingly." The situations are comical and the dialogue entertaining, and there are some good illustrations by Cyrus Cuneo. Quite a readable book, and "as to the moral, it's what you please."

From the Same.—"A Treasury of English Literature: Waller to Addison." "A Treasury of English Literature: Johnson to Burns." Selected and arranged by Kate M. Warren. With general Introduction by Stopford A. Brooke. These two volumes form the fifth and sixth sections of a re-issue in six parts of "A Treasury of English Literature," originally issued in one volume two years ago. The volumes are designed as companions to Mr. Stopford Brooke's "Primer of English Literature," and they fulfil their purpose admirably.

From the Same.—Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd., send us "From an Easy Chair," by Sir E. Ray Lankester, K.C.B., F.R.S., one of the greatest scientists of the day, and a man of world-wide experience. His object in writing this book is to interest those who are not experts in science, and yet have a desire for trustworthy information and opinion on the vast variety of topics which come up day by day for consideration and discussion, and can only be explained or rightly understood by the aid of that systematised knowledge which is called science. We leave the reader to form an opinion for himself as to whether Sir E. Ray Lankester has succeeded in his object or not; personally we think there is very little doubt on the subject, and cannot help remarking that the chapter on "Votes for Women" comes at an opportune moment, and gives the public another way of looking at this question, which may prove to be a more important question concerning the future of England than many suspect, that is from a scientific point of view.

From Messrs. L. Upcott Gill, Bazaar Buildings, Drury Lane, W.C., we have received a copy of "Boxing at a Glance," by Mr. J. Murray Wright. The chief feature of this book is the bird's-eye overhead views with which it is illustrated, certainly unique, and which help the beginner to a quicker and more ready appreciation of the various positions described than has hitherto been possible.

From The Gresham Publishing Co.—"The Standard Cyclopædia of Modern Agriculture and Rural Economy." Vol. II. From Aus–Bro. Edited by Professor R. Patrick Wright. The terms of high commendation in which we wrote of the first volume of this comprehensive work apply with equal appropriateness to the second. The articles have been written by the most distinguished authorities and specialists in the kingdom, and the illustrations (both coloured and black and white) are admirable.

From Messrs. H. Grevel & Co. — "A Complete Hebrew-English Pocket Dictionary to the Old Testament," compiled by Prof. Karl Feyerabend, Ph. D. This extremely handy pocket dictionary contains the whole vocabulary of the Hebrew Old Testament. Phonetic pronunciation of each word is given based upon the pronunciation of the Sephardim, or Jews of Western Europe. The type, paper, and general get-up are just what they should be for a volume intended for pocket use.

From Messrs. Harper & Bros.—"Every Man for Himself," by Norman Duncan. It is not everyone who will enjoy a novel written entirely in a dialect unusual to British ears, but presumably that of the Newfoundlanders; we must confess that this characteristic has somewhat marred our appreciation of the book. The story is quite good, and we can well understand that in the author's opinion it would have lost much of its point had it been told, or rather had the characters spoken, in straightforward English.

From Health & Strength, Ltd. — "The Modern Rugby Game and How to Play It," by Mr. E. Gwyn Nicholls, ex-Captain of the Welsh International Football Team. If a book can do it, this book will show the average team how to attain the true Welsh or combined style of play, and the ambitious young player how to become a Gwyn Nicholls. It is written in a pleasant style and illustrated by many instructive photographs.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack, Edinburgh.—"Scottish Painting, Past and Present," by James L. Caw. This large, handsome volume contains an illuminating and painstaking account of Scottish painting from 1620 to 1908. It is probably the most complete and most authoritative account ever published of a country and period peculiarly rich in noble examples of pictorial art. To record that the book is worthy of its subject is but to give Mr. James L. Caw the credit which is due to him. His judgment is mature and well balanced, his statement of facts accurate and logically arranged, whilst his critical remarks are apposite and reveal in fine taste. The first part is divided into two sections—the Precursors, and the Earlier

School; the second part is arranged under three headings—the Pupils of Robert Scott Lander, the Middle Period and its Aftermath, and the Younger Generation. The concluding essay on the Subjective, Emotional and Technical Characteristics of Scottish Painting is a particularly fine and discriminating piece of work. Mr. Caw deals generously and appreciatively with living artists. The volume contains no less than seventy-six full-page illustrations, many of which are of paintings reproduced for the first time.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"The Life of Mirabeau," by S. G. Tallentyre. Mr. Tallentyre has written a vivid and compelling biography of Mirabeau—that strange man whose destiny was a continual storm and whose life was a romance. The portrait is well limned and adequately proportioned. The author is never carried away by hero-worship; he has a full sense of Mirabeau's personal defects, and emphasises them in their proper place. The book should take a high place among English studies of this great representative Frenchman of the eighteenth century.

From the Same.—"Meggy: a Day-dream," by Lady Algernon Percy. Many pages of Lady Percy's book, which is a series of episodes reproducing the life of a particularly loveable child, will be hailed with delight by the young people for whom they are written; but a large portion of the book has a significance and a depth which immature minds will not grasp or understand. The introduction, for instance, will be a complete mystery to them. Children of an older growth, however, will recognise both in the verse and prose a mind of unusual subtlety and beauty, while both old and young will enjoy the illustrations of Mr. F. D. Bedford.

From Mr. Elliot Stock.—"Saint Gilbert," by Mr. J. C. Wright. As the father of English Nature-study, Gilbert White is already the eponymous hero of a leading naturalist society. Mr. Wright has gone a step further, and decreed him the honours of canonisation. His book is a loving study of the famous old Hampshire vicar's life and work, and of the village which he has made classic ground. It is handsomely got up and illustrated by some excellent photographs.—"The Exile," by A. St. Clair. A readable story of a young man who, for extravagance at the University, is disowned by his father, enlists, and by courage and coolness in the Boer War wins a commission and a wife, and ultimately his father's forgiveness. The writer describes some of the South African scenes with a vividness which suggests personal experience. The book can be unreservedly recommended.

From Mr. Arthur Stockwell.—"In the Beginning," by Mr. C. Hankins, is an endeavour to reconcile the Mosaic cosmogony with the results of modern scientific investigation. The method adopted is to quote (by permission) large portions of Mr. Clodd's well-known "Story of Creation," and then to show that the scientific views therein expressed are not inconsistent with the Biblical account if interpreted in a reasonable way. The book will be read with satisfaction by those who desire to be assured of the substantial accuracy of the early chapters of Genesis; and they will incidentally learn a good deal of modern biological science. The book is well printed, except that we have noticed a good many misprints.

From the Same.—"Studies in the Lord's Prayer" by J. E. Roberts, M.A., B.D. A reprint of a volume of sermons originally published in 1878; a sermon entitled "Remember Lot's Wife" has been added.

Crown 8vo. Four maps. 5s. 6d. net.

Since the events of the earlier years are fully described in numerous accessible works, the author deals with them briefly, in spite of their importance, treating them rather as an introduction to the later and neglected period, about which it is difficult for the ordinary reader to obtain information

"The Spectator" Speaks

MR. JOHN ST. LOE STRACHEY, Editor and Proprietor of The Spectator, was the principal guest of the Author's Club last Monday evening; Mr. R. B. Carter was in the chair, and paid a well-earned tribute to the ability and national utility of their guest. And most of us will agree that an honest, capable, and fearless man, in the position held by Mr. Strachey, is a national asset of great importance. As Mr. Carter said, The Spectator reached throughout the kingdom, indeed throughout the Empire, large classes of readers, who were themselves in a position to guide the opinions of the circles in which they moved. Mr. Strachey has not merely maintained the reputation of The Spectator, he has increased it—perhaps the full force of this is only felt when The Spectator advocates strongly a policy which you believe to be wrong. But we feel confident The Spectator will condemn this new policy of blotting out "Hope" from the career of the young British naval officer—a mad scheme which nothing can justify.

Mr. Strachey's text was that literature and journalism were not incompatible; but that if that were so, and if journalism was to attain to the glory of letters, great care and devotion were demanded at the hands of the journalist. He went on to say that "On the face of it the task he set forth upon, that of reconciling his trade with the art of letters, was an impossibility, yet if he had faith and courage he might be able to overcome the impossible." But this surely was merely a setting up of literary skittles in order that Mr. Strachey might bowl them over—in plain English, knowing it impossible to find anything new to say on such a thread-worn subject, he had to imagine impossibilities in order to prove they were imaginary. There is no dividing frontier between literature and journalism, there never has been and never can be; journalism is only an expansion of literature just as America is an expansion of England. Just as the best literature passes into journalism, so the best journalism returns again into literature. As the Morning Post well puts it:—

> "It is hard to talk about style. What Mr. Strachey said on the subject is true. But it does not touch the subject of the difference which he postulates between journalism and literature. We deny the difference. The only difference we admit is that between good writing and bad. Good writing makes good literature. The secret of good writing is having something worth saying and saying it so that it is conveyed to the reader. That is not a question of labour in the writing. Mat Prior indeed truly said of writers like himself: 'We labour to write easy,' because to give writing its perfect finish is a matter of revision. To be a good writer it is necessary to be a good man, not in the sense of mere morality, but in that of efficiency. The style is the character and quality of the writer. If his head is clear his expression will be lucid. If he cares about his subject he will make his readers care about it. If, besides, he has knowledge, his reader will be enlightened. If he has judgment his writing will be to the point. Fluency is a mere matter of practice. Every man who writes regularly during a long period acquires fluency. But he may write fluently and badly. You can learn to write by writing, but you can learn to write well only by writing well. To do the best work a man must throw his whole heart and soul into it, whether the work be gardening or managing a nation's affairs or writing for a newspaper or for a publisher of books. There is, however, one difference between the writing of books and the writing of newspapers. The newspaper is produced under pressure of time; the book ought not to be. But even a time limit can be overcome with system, judgment, and due economy of effort. The true discipline for the writer, whether his work is done under pressure or at leisure, consists in the cultivation of sincerity. Let him find out what he has to say, and say that and no more, not attempting to furbish up into grandeur thoughts which, though true, may not be of supreme importance, nor yet regard as insignificant anything that concerns the welfare, the character, the interests, or the happiness of his fellow men. The length of his sentences, the number of syllables in his words, or their derivation, matter nothing. The right words are those which will convey to the reader exactly what is meant. The sentences, if the writer means business with his readers, will take care of themselves. The good workman may call himself 'journalist' or 'author'; it matters not. If his work has been good it will abide, if not on bookshelves, in the thoughts, the feelings, and the lives of his fellows, even though, like Mr. St. Loe Strachey, he has been producing literature without being aware of it."

Many books and articles have been written on the question: "How to become a Journalist," "How to write a Book"—but we have never before seen the answer put so clearly and simply as in this leader from the Morning Post, and it applies with equal force to the business career as to authorship and journalism.

Blasting the Careers of Naval Officers

ACCORDING to the Standard's Naval Correspondent, the new Government scheme for scrapping naval officers will, "to put it bluntly, blast the career of nearly 70 per cent. of lieutenants in the immediate future." If this is true it is the most serious blow ever offered to our first and last defence. To blot out the signal "Hope" from the young naval officer's mental vision is to destroy the finest, strongest, and most powerful thing on which our Empire has to rely.

Cannot they see that for a thousand years it has been this very "Hope" which they are destroying which has built up our Empire. Everyone who can use any influence to prevent such a national blunder should use it. The Navy is not a party question—it is the Nation.

Notes and Announcements

SOME time in March Messrs. D. Appleton & Co. will publish in this country, as well as in America, the next long novel by Mr. Robert W. Chambers. The title is "The Firing Line." The story "brings into startling relief the perils which beset young men and women in the exotic society of rich Americans. The scenes are laid at Palm Beach, Florida, in New York, and the Adirondacks, and the background of the luxuriant and entrancing beauty of Florida adds power to the theme and affords Mr. Chambers an opportunity for some of his best descriptive writing."

Mr. Heinemann makes the important announcement that he is now on the eve of completing the publication of one of the greatest literary undertakings of recent years. This is the issue of the fifth and final volume of the "Greatness and Decline of Rome," by Professor Guglielmo Ferrero. It has only been by co-operation with one of the most famous houses in America that it has been found possible to place this really monumental History of Rome, by a celebrated Roman, before the public.

His Majesty the King of the Belgians has graciously accepted a copy of "Belgium," illustrated by Mr. A. Forestier, and written by Mr. G. W. T. Omond, which was recently issued by A. & C. Black.

Mr. Francis Griffiths announces "Wealth and Want," by W. B. Northrop, "Man First and Last," by George St. Clair, "English Church Architecture," by Mr. G. A. T. Middleton, A.R.I.B.A., and "A Comfort Book," which has been compiled by Miss Edith Chapman, with a special view to the use of sufferers.

Among the articles in the February Antiquary will be "Some Notes from the Court Rolls of a Shropshire Manor," by the Rev. W. G. D. Fletcher.

New six-shilling novels which Messrs. Chatto & Windus will publish shortly are:—"Idolatry," by Alice Perrin. Mrs. Perrin's new Anglo-Indian novel deals with the struggle between the World and the Spirit, as portrayed in the development of the two central characters of the book—a girl who has been reared in the artificial atmosphere of London society, and a young missionary who, for the sake of his calling, has renounced all earthly advantages. "The Rogue of Rye," by W. Willmott-Dixon. The plot is based upon Napoleon's treacherous seizure of all the British tourists in France on the rupture of the Peace of Amiens (1803), an episode said to be hitherto untouched in fiction. "The June Princess," by Constance Smedley, author of "An April Princess." "The Merry Heart," by Frank A. Swinnerton, a story of life in modern London. "A Castle of Dreams," by Netta Syrett. "The Painted Mountain," by Peter Lauristoun, which has for its scene the Lebanon, the mountain-home of that interesting community, the Druses. "What's Become of Fairfax?" by Cosmo Hamilton, author of "Adam's Clay," deals with the sudden and inexplicable disappearance of a well-known man-about-town, with a racing stable at Newmarket and a deer forest in Scotland. "The Road of No Return," by A. C. Inchbold. The story opens with some incidents of the Russian Revolution, woven round a young couple who are united in a Nihilistic marriage. The heroine is soon forced to escape to the Holy Land.

We are glad to see that in the February number of London there is an article by Mr. Wilbur Wright on Flying—a most interesting and well illustrated article. No country can so ill afford to ignore the flying machine as Great Britain. In other respects the number is also one of the best of the magazine bunch.

Mr. John Long's new novels include: "The Combat," by Arthur Campbell. In this novel the author describes for us the Nova Scotia of forty years ago. "In every particular 'The Combat' is a reflex of the strong, virile, throbbing, fearless life characteristic of young countries wherein human passions are less under control than in the older centres of population." A new novel by Violet Tweedale, entitled "The Quenchless Flame." This, "the latest novel from the pen of that talented writer, is daring and dramatic, but it is absorbing and entirely removed from the ordinary novel of the present day. The events quickly following the opening are lurid and terrible, but replete with human interest."

"A Naturalist in Tasmania," by Mr. Geoffrey Smith, Fellow of New College, Oxford, is to be published immediately by the Oxford University Press. The author spent six months in Tasmania during the spring and summer of 1907–8, his special subject of study, for which the British Association made a substantial grant, being the fresh-water life of the colony. But the sketches of natural history are not confined to one branch, and the book is well illustrated.

Mr. Murray is about to bring out a second edition, enlarged and thoroughly revised, of Dr. E. J. Spitta's work on "Microscopy," which, although the original edition was issued only seventeen months ago, has won the position of a standard book. A new novel by Joel Chandler Harris—and the last, we believe, to have come from his pen—will receive a warm welcome from lovers of books. Mr. Murray publishes it shortly. The title is "The Bishop and the Bogie-Man."

Dr. William Henry Lang, whose sporting novel, "The Thunder of the Hoofs," is announced for immediate publication by Mr. John Long, is a Scotsman who has always devoted a great part of his time to sport. Mr. Long says that "even in his student days at the Edinburgh University he made a reputation for himself in the field. Cricket, football, lacrosse, running, shooting, and racing—all these engaged a share of his attention, although coursing held him most closely. For the last thirty years Dr. Lang has lived in Australia; 'and a fairy land it has ever been to me,' he says. In Australia the doctor took to horse-breeding as a hobby; and he was successful in turning out some good winners. It is his intention yet to win the Commonwealth Stakes. Dr. W. H. Lang is a brother of Mr. Andrew Lang, and his novel is a piece of writing which is well worthy of the relationship."

"The Burial of Sir John Moore, and other poems by Charles Wolfe," together with a collotype facsimile of Wolfe's original MS. of the famous poem, will be issued immediately by Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson, Ltd., at the price of 1s. net. This book, edited by Mr. Litton Falkiner, should decide the lately revived controversy regarding the authorship.

Mr. Granville Barker, whose name was so closely associated with the Court Theatre, is publishing a volume of "Three Plays" this spring through Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson. "The Voysey Inheritance"—one of the Vedrenne-Barker successes—together with "Waste," which has been called "the really great play" of 1907, and "The Marrying of Ann Loete," will make up the volume.

B. Herder, Typographus Editor Pontificus, Friburgi Brisgoviæ (Germaniæ), informs us that he has "sub prelo et mense Martio 1909 in lucem prodibit: 'Manuale Historiæ Ordinis Fratrum Minorum,' a Dr. P. H. Holzapfel." It is authorised by the Archbishop of Friburg and Minister-General of the Order.

The Kingsgate Press will shortly issue an important volume, entitled "Side Lights on New Testament Research," by Dr. Rendel Harris, M.A., being the Angus Lectures for 1908 delivered at Regent's Park College.

Canon Sanday of Oxford has just finished his article on the Bible, which is to appear in the second volume of Hastings' Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics (T. & T. Clark).

Messrs. Chatto & Windus publish a new novel by Frank A. Swinnerton, called "The Merry Heart." It is a story compounded of the life led by various clerks of both sexes in modern business concerns.

The World's Work for February contains illustrated accounts of "Modern Brazil," and of "Whale Hunting" as it is now done.

Messrs. T. J. Marshall & Co., Belfast Road, Stoke Newington, London, N., forward us their watermarked Calendar for 1909. This is the 29th consecutive year of its publication, and they ask us to mention that they are sending out numbered watermarked coupons with the Calendar, entitling the holder to a special discount of 5 per cent. on the first order for "Dandy Rolls" in 1909.

Has there never been a good guide to Pisa? If not Messrs. Dent are filling a void with the new volume in their well-known Mediæval Town Series, viz., "Pisa," by Janet Ross and Nelly Erichsen. It is believed that there has been no historical guide ever written on Pisa, and, as a consequence, this new volume should be accorded a hearty welcome. The get-up of the various books included in this series is exceedingly attractive, and this new addition will be uniform with its predecessors.

Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. announce for publication, early in February, an important new historical work, entitled "Political Annals of Canada," by A. P. Cockburn, ex-Member of the first Parliament of Ontario, and of the second, third, fourth and fifth Parliaments of the Dominion. It constitutes a condensed history of Canada from the time of Samuel de Champlain in 1608, and affords a bird's-eye view of the social and political history of Canada for three centuries. The book contains many thumbnail portraits of leading Canadian Statesmen, and appreciation of their life's work.

The same publishers will issue immediately "The Leveller," by Alexander McArthur, a new musical romance of Russian life which presents impartially the opposing points of view of the people and the aristocracy. The story reflects Russian manners and customs, and presents a study of Rubenstein.

"Pewter Marks and Old Pewter Ware, Domestic and Ecclesiastical," is the title of an important work just issued by Messrs. Reeves & Turner. Although several books have recently appeared on this subject, none have given the marks on pewter tabulated in easy form for reference, a special feature of the above. We have no need to point out how important it is to the collectors to be able to find the maker's name and date for the first time. C. A. Markham, the editor of Chaffers' Books on Gold and Silver Plate, is the author.

Herr F. A. Perthes, of Gotha, has published lately "Theodor Mommsen," a biographical sketch by Ludw. Moritz Hartmann. Price, 4 marks.

Mr. Werner Laurie is about to publish "Strange Stories from a Chinese Studio," translated and annotated by Dr. Herbert A. Giles (Professor of Chinese in the University of Cambridge, and some time Consul at Ningpo). His Excellency the Marquis of Tseng has congratulated the author on having made the best translation of a Chinese work into English which has ever come under his notice.

A story of mysterious crime, "The Whispering Man," by H. K. Webster, just published by Mr. Eveleigh Nash, will interest all who care for writing of that kind. It is well written, and although the author makes the mistake, perhaps intentionally, of giving the reader a clue as to the real murderer out of several suspected persons, it really does not spoil the exciting interest of his cleverly told story.

Mr. Alfred Halewood, bookseller, Preston, will publish immediately for the author a re-issue of "Sea Fowl Shooting Sketches," by Mr. Daniel Higson of Ashton-on-Ribble. A complimentary critique of the work by Sir Ralph Payne-Gallwey forms the preface, and the frontispiece shows the author with his favourite cross-bow, a weapon on the use of which he contributes special notes. The edition will consist of 300 copies, and a list of the subscribers will be given.

Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. will publish very shortly "A New Light on the Renaissance," a comprehensive study in mediæval symbolism by Harold Bayley. Struck by the extraordinary variety and the obviously emblematic character of the craftsmen's marks of the period, notably those of printers and papermakers, Mr. Bayley has devoted many years of study to this subject and to the solution of its numerous puzzles. As a result he presents evidence that throws a novel and remarkable light upon bibliography and upon the critical years preceding the Reformation. One of his most important deductions relates to the scattered civilisation of the cultured and poetic Provençals, and "raises some doubts as to whether Italy was in reality the cradle of the Renaissance. The book contains a wealth of illustrations, which give remarkable support to the author's conclusions."

The Abbé Duine, of Dol Cathedral, Brittany, is writing the Life of St. Samson, one of the Celtic apostles of Wessex, the Channel Islands, and Brittany. The book is to be published by L. Bahon-Rault, of 17, Rue Le Bastard, Rennes.

A novelty in hymn books, to be called "The Fellowship Hymn Book," is about to be issued jointly by Edwin Dalton, Aldersgate Street, and Headley Brothers, Bishopsgate Street. It is intended for the use of the P.S.A. (Pleasant Sunday Afternoon) Brotherhoods, Adult Schools, and similar meetings for men. The compilers have been a joint editorial committee appointed by the Executive of the National Council of Adult Schools and the National P.S.A. Brotherhood Council. "The Fellowship Hymn Book" includes a considerable number of new hymns expressive of the love of home. The words editions are expected to appear in February and the tunes editions in April.

MENTION THE "P.C."—Our readers who order books, &c., they see mentioned or advertised in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

Dr. Robertson Nicoll and Edinburgh Booksellers

Some Interesting Reminiscences

THE following is given by permission of The Edinburgh Evening Dispatch, which has an interesting lot of book notes every week.

The annual conversazione of the Edinburgh and District Branch of the Newsagents', Booksellers' and Stationers' National Union was held in the Edinburgh Café, Princes Street, last night. About five hundred members and their friends attended. Mr. J. B. Fairgrieve, President of the branch, was in the chair. The platform party included Dr. Robertson Nicoll, Mr. William Ward, Lord Provost Gibson, Dr. Whyte, Mr. Eveleigh Nash, Councillor Laing, Dr. Morris Paterson, Mr. Dawson, Mr. A. D. Wallace, Mr. D. J. Knox, Mr. Yendon and Mr. D. M. Price, Secretary.

The Chairman stated that they had now entered upon the eighteenth year of their existence, and he was glad to say that the past year had been one of peace and harmony. The membership now stood at 163, being slightly down from last year, but this slight decrease was due to quite natural causes. The funds were in a healthy condition, the year closing with a balance in hand. In introducing Dr. Robertson Nicoll, Mr. Fairgrieve stated that Dr. Nicoll occupied a foremost position in the world of literature of to-day. He was born the son of a bookman, and had been brought up in an atmosphere of books with a natural genius for acquiring and storing up information and giving it forth for the edification of his readers. They had to remember that he was born in Aberdeenshire, and, combined with this great natural advantage, he had sojourned for ten or eleven years in the Border country in the spot which Sir Walter Scott termed the most romantic if not the most beautiful "village" in Scotland. (Laughter).

An Amusing Recollection

Dr. Robertson Nicoll, in a characteristic address given in the easy conversational style of which he is past-master said the people in Kelso used to be well disposed to Sir Walter Scott, but there was a flaw in the ointment when he referred to Kelso as a "village." (Laughter.) There were authors, journalists, publishers and newsagents present that night, but he wanted to represent the poor down-trodden individual known as the consumer. He did not believe anyone had spent more of his income than he had in buying periodicals and books, and therefore he thought he had a certain claim for regard from newsagents. Dr. Robertson Nicoll then gave an interesting account of some of the newsagents of his acquaintance. The first he could recall, he said, was John More, an old man who used to keep a newsagent's shop in the town where he was born. John got a parcel of weekly papers every Friday about three o'clock, but thought it absolutely necessary that he should look over them for an hour or two before distributing them. "I used to come at four o'clock," said the speaker, "and would be condemned to sit in the corner.

a poor little urchin, until the news was read." (Laughter.) His old nurse used to take in one or two papers of the family description, and she paid him a penny a week to read the stories out to her. One story used to impress him particularly, and that was a story about Devonshire. Years afterwards when he came to London he picked up from a bookstall a three-volume novel in the very last stages of dissolution, and to his utter astonishment saw it was the story that had impressed him in his younger days. The story was entitled "Clara Vaughan," and was the first novel of Richard Blackmore. Another newsagent he remembered well was Mrs. Wilson of Kelso. Mrs. Wilson was a woman of marked individuality and courage. She knew a great deal of the world, and John Bright used to discuss the politics of the day with her. On the occasion he left Mr. Gladstone's Cabinet she disapproved and scolded him for doing so. (Laughter.)

Tribute to Edinburgh Journalists

Turning to his subject proper, "The Press, Past and Present," Dr. Nicoll said that one feature of the Press of the past was the powerful personalities of the men who represented it, and the danger at present was that these personalities no longer loomed before their eye. It was easy to speak of the Press in Edinburgh, because it was a great city of the Press. Amongst the powerful personalities were Robert and William Chambers. The whole world honoured these two brothers, and yet hardly anyone knew of their early struggles. One thing about them was that they always put something in their papers that involved a mental effort to read. It was a dreadful thing to be always reading below their mind. They were familiar with the saying, "There is always room at the top," but what was said now was, "There is always room at the bottom." Two things always lingered in his memory in regard to Alexander Russel of The Scotsman. One was the mass of stored information he had, and the other that he detested writing leading articles in a hurry. The best articles might be written at fever heat, but there was always the stored information behind.

The Future of the Press

Speaking of the future of the Press, the speaker said he was not afraid about it at all. He felt confident in the moral sense of the people when fairly appealed to, and he did not believe in those who talked about immoral papers, unscrupulous papers, &c. If they told the people their case, they would soon put down immoral, unscrupulous and dishonest journalism. British journalism was undoubtedly the best in the whole world at the present moment. What he feared was that there would be a great newspaper trust formed, in which the whole power of the Press would be in the hands of a few millionaire or billionaire proprietors. That would not be good for the British people, and he was sure it would not be good for the journalists themselves. They would not be slaves exactly, but they would be coolies. (Laughter.) He loved independent, honest fighting journalism, and he hoped that the great power of the newsagent would be used to prevent the establishment of a trust. He was perfectly sure the newsagents of this country desired to distribute good books and good reading. He wished the youth of the country to read good books. If the children were only educated to love reading the best books, they would do more than by all the machinery that they were calling into play at such cost. (Applause.)

Mr. William Ward said that he knew several Edinburgh newsagents, and he was sure they would rather cut off their right hands than be the means of circulating degrading or demoralising literature The last decade had been a very trying time for newsagents, and a considerable amount of unwholesome literature had been circulated. They were on the eve of a great change. There was springing up among the artizan population a demand for something better than had been provided during the past few years. One of the greatest signs of the times was the P.S.A. movement. At present there were at least 600,000 men marching every Sunday to a religious meeting in a place of worship. Who were these men? It had been stated that they belonged to the "man-in-the-street" class. Before the movement, however, these men were either "snoozing" at home or in the public-house. They had now been brought out of their homes and out of the public-house to attend a religious service. They had also got the men to take an interest in reading. He hoped the Edinburgh newsagents would keep up the same lofty standard in the future as they had done in the past. (Applause.)

Mr. Robert Forrester of Glasgow

MR. ROBERT FORRESTER'S bookshop in Royal Exchange Square is well known to bibliophiles, not only in the West of Scotland but, by repute at least, in an area which is world-wide. The business was founded early last century by Messrs. Maurice Ogle & Co., and thirty-five years ago it passed into the hands of its present proprietor, who was previously in that centre of old Glasgow life and commerce, Stockwell Street. Even a glimpse of the treasures on the shelves, rare books, particularly in every branch of Scottish literature, and quaint and curious MSS., excites envy in the mind of the most superficial book-lover; but only he who has knowledge of that delightful hobby can appreciate the worth of the collection. From the house of Forrester have gone forth important reprints of such notable national publications as Blind Harry's "Wallace," Barbour's "Bruce," "The Ballad Minstrelsy of Scotland," and many other celebrated works. Mr. Forrester is one of the oldest members of the Company of Stationers of Glasgow, having been admitted a member of that body in 1860. Only three other members survive of those who joined in that year, while of those admitted in 1859 there is but a single survivor. From his lifelong connection with the trade—his father having been in the business before him—Mr. Forrester may be considered the "father" of the secondhand booksellers of the West of Scotland.—Glasgow Evening Times.

A New Firm of Publishers

UNDER the name of Mills & Boon, Ltd. Mr. G. R. Mills and Mr. Charles Boon have opened a publishing business at No. 49, Whitcomb Street, Leicester Square. They are not new to the work having had over ten years' experience with Messrs. Methuen. They will begin with fiction, also educational and general literature. We wish them all success.

Glasgow Book Trade Notes

By "Mungo."

To the geologist the valley of the Clyde offers peculiar opportunities for the study of his science; from the hills where the river finds its source and is kin with the Daer Water and the Elvan Water, names musical and dear to the angler's heart, to the "Tail of the Bank" where it meets the Firth, it passes over a unique variety of geological formation, one of which, by the way—the Coal Measurer—is responsible for the industrial development of the valley.

In the year 1850 a society was formed in the city for the "advancement of the study of Geology," but it lived barely one year, and it was not until 1858 that the members of the Young Men's Society in connection with Free St. Peter's Church, evolved from their summer meetings the idea of "The Geological Society of Glasgow" as it now exists, its objects being "to unite into a recognised body all the friends and advocates of geological science residing in Glasgow and district."

Under the joint editorship of Mr. Macnair and Mr. Mort, the honorary secretaries, an interesting volume has just been issued to commemorate the Society's jubilee. The book opens with an account of the district, geologically considered, and a sketch of the Society's history, but the bulk of it is made up with a review of the fifty years' work, under the different divisions of the science, and biographical notices of prominent members. The Society had the privilege of having Lord Kelvin as its president for twenty-one years, and issued in its Transactions several of his important addresses on Geology. The book is a creditable record of good work, and is published at a low price, which will make it accessible to all interested students.

Another book of local interest and which should be taken up by Glasgow men, no matter where they are located, is "The River Clyde and the Clyde Burghs," by the late Sir James Marwick. This book is the result of years of keen study by a man whose work was well done, and it will take a foremost place amongst local histories. It will be published during February.

Although there is quite a library of good books dealing with the city and its surroundings, a felt want is a handy sized volume pointing the pedestrian to paths unfrequented by motors, and within easy distance of the different car termini. The compilation of such a book would be a labour of love, but unnumbered blessings would be called down on the man who would make the attempt. The only book of this nature is Macdonald's "Rambles," published some fifty years ago.

Sale of a Library of Books on Chess

On Monday Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, will sell a library of over 300 works on chess, English, French, German, &c., the property of the late M. Numa Préti of Paris.

Mr. A. H. Hallam Murray

Not a few personal and business friends of Mr. Hallam Murray were sorry to hear of his recent retirement from active work in connection with the famous house at Albemarle Street; and we are expressing the thoughts of many when we assure Mr. Murray of the deep respect and regard in which he is held by all branches of the trade.

Mr. Alexander Henry Hallam Murray was born in 1854; he being the second son of the third John Murray. He was educated at Eton, and at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. He entered into business with his father in 1876, and from the first took a special interest in the artistic part of the works published at "50A." Many designs he originated himself, his taste and judgment were most sound, and it was in great measure due to him—to his admirable suggestions and sense of colour and form—that the attractive bindings of Albemarle Street books have attained general admiration. Authors and artists will testify to the patient care and skill, which Mr. Hallam Murray gave to the illustrations of books. So, too, the typography of volumes, especially their title-pages, received his particular attention with the happiest effect, as anyone can see who compares the volumes of twenty years ago with those issued with the Albemarle Street imprint to-day.

He is an artist, too; has frequently exhibited at the Royal Academy, and has published two volumes which contain charming representations in colour of his works in water-colour. Indeed, in the opinion of good judges, it is an open question whether, if he had not been born in the House of Murray, he would not have obtained a high position as a water-colour painter; and this, too, in the country of Girtin and De Wint. Besides his books "On the Old Road through France to Florence," and "The High Road of Empire," he has illustrated several others. He has visited most of the countries of Europe, and visited none without bringing away some delightful impression in colour or in pencil of its scenes and architecture. Indeed, a distinguished authority on India and Indian art recently declared that in no pictures that he knew were the colour and light and atmosphere of India so truly expressed as in the illustrations to Mr. Hallam Murray's own book, "The High Road of Empire."

Mr. Murray has been a great traveller, having been to India, Ceylon, and Australia. Until the Handbooks, which his father originated, were transferred to Mr. Stanford, they were mainly in his charge. It is possible in the near future that he will be visiting Japan, in which case we shall hope to have another book from his brush and pen describing the picturesque scenes and people of the Land of the Rising Sun. Wherever he goes, and whatever his destiny may be, he carries with him the good wishes of all who directly or indirectly have been associated with him.

The New Dictionary of the Bible

Messrs. T. & T. Clark, of Edinburgh, inform us that on Saturday, January 30th, their great one-volume "Dictionary of the Bible," is to be published simultaneously in Great Britain and in the United States. It should be clearly understood that this handsome volume of more than 1,000 pages in double columns, price 20s. net, is entirely distinct from the five-volume Dictionary.

It is complete in one volume.

The articles are new, and are all signed by their authors.

It is not based on any other dictionary, but is a new and original work.

Although three inches thick, the work is not heavy, it has been admirably printed by Messrs. Morrison & Gibb, of Edinburgh, on good paper, which shows the type up well, and although over three inches thick it is so well bound that it opens perfectly—a good feature in any book but invaluable in a work of reference.

Thom's Official Directory

Thom's Official Directory of Great Britain and Ireland for the year 1909, has now reached its sixty-sixth year of publication. Particular attention has been paid to the statistical information, in the hope that the facts collected will be found useful, not only as a record of commercial transactions, but also as illustrating the social condition of our country, and affording, by comparison of one year with another, distinct evidence of its condition. Many of these statistics bear upon questions of Fiscal Policy now before the public.

The collection, arrangement, and condensation of a mass of materials into one volume, consisting of multitudinous facts and details of an ever-changing character, involve no small amount of labour and correspondence, the extensive use of parliamentary reports, papers, and other public documents, besides many other sources of authentic information.

It is a wonderful work and deservedly popular.

Sporting Artists

Sir F. C. Burnand contributes to The Art Journal for February a racy article concerning artists who have found subjects for drawings in the hunting field. The illustrations are from work by John Leech, "the most perfect of sporting artists," Phil May, Randolph Caldecott, Miss Somerville, Mr. Sambourne, Mr. Armour, Mr. Jalland, Mr. Crawhall, and Mr. Aldin. Sir Francis, in this "brisk sporting gallop" through his reminiscences, refers to his days with Sir John Tenniel, Mr. Sambourne, and other artists.

"Phil May was the latest thorough-going-on-horseback artist within my ken. He was a first-rate equestrian, and as neat a horseman as I ever remember to have seen. His easy, go-as-you-please kind of cross country riding was delightful. Nothing stopped him. He was a very light weight, and generally rode an uncommonly nimble, clever nag. I was out with him only with the harriers when I could return to work after one o'clock: but used to accompany him some way on his road to the foxhounds, in whose company he would spend the whole day, and then what fun he was at dinner and during the evening! Phil May was never better in health, spirits, and in work than during these winter seasons in the country. And yet how rarely did his genius ever give us hunting incidents! Gutter-snipes were his favourites, but an 'Arry on 'orseback is somewhat of a rarity in his portfolio."

"The Englishwoman"

Mrs. Grant Richards edits, and Mr. Grant Richards publishes, a new monthly magazine entitled The Englishwoman, inspired by one continuous policy, the furtherance of the enfranchisement of women. No support will be given to any particular party in politics. The Editorial Committee consists of the Lady Frances Balfour, Lady Strachey, Miss Cicely Hamilton, Miss Lowndes, and Mrs. Grant Richards (Editor). The yearly subscription is twelve shillings.

One on Mr. Sankey.—A story told by the late Ira D. Sankey on himself, and published in the Boston Herald in 1894, has been revived since the evangelist's death. One day in Geneva he entered a music-box shop and asked to see some music-boxes. The salesman graciously showed him a number, but none was what he wanted.

"Have you none that play sacred music?" he asked.

"Why," answered the salesman, "we have some that play a kind of half-way sacred music."

"What?" inquired Mr. Sankey.

"Oh, these Moody and Sankey hymns; I can't imagine what the people see in them, but we sell thousands of the boxes that play them. We have enormous orders for these boxes," continued the salesman, "from every part of Europe"; and then he added, apologetically, "it's a matter of business, you know, with us."—New York Tribune.

Persia and Turkish Arabia

A notable book, deriving additional interest from the fact that it deals with two countries at present looming largely above the political horizon, will very shortly be published by Messrs. Seeley. In "Behind the Veil in Persia and Turkish Arabia," the author, Mrs. M. E. Hume-Griffith, depicts the lives, manners and customs of the people as seen from within. For eight years she and her husband were attached to medical missions in various towns, and his medical qualifications were of inestimable value in breaking down the wall of natural reserve. She lived on terms of cordial friendship with the people, and her impressions make interesting reading. The many illustrations give additional value to the letterpress.

Trade Notes

Messrs. R. & T. Washbourne, Ltd., of 248, Buchanan Street, Glasgow, write: "Please note that the firm of Cameron Ferguson & Co. are now closed we having bought over all Prayer-books and all Irish publications only. Yours truly, pro. R. & T. Washbourne—A. M."

Messrs. George J. Juckes, booksellers and exporters, have removed from Birmingham to larger and more central premises at The Ruskin Book Stores, 35, St. Martin's Court, St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C. Catalogues will be issued monthly as hitherto.

Mr. James Maclehose,

PUBLISHER, BOOKSELLER AND PRINTER.

WE have much pleasure in giving, with the sanction of our excellent young Glasgow contemporary, The Bailie—it is not yet forty years of age—the following account of Mr. James Maclehose, of Glasgow. It is No. 1891 of The Bailie's series entitled "Men You Know."

"To the citizen of the world Glasgow spells trade and commerce. It is the second city of the British Empire, and the industrial capital of Scotland. But all through its recorded history, trade and commerce, although of great moment, have never formed the be-all and end-all of its active life. Its oldest and grandest edifice is a church, and for hundreds of years it has had a noble university as a like outstanding feature. The twain have assuredly been potent factors for good in the past history of the city, and religion and learning, by aid of many churches, colleges, schools, and libraries, are to-day earnestly at work for the spiritual, moral, and intellectual well-being of the community. Glasgow can boast a long line of preachers and teachers of note who have found fit expression for their thoughts and feelings in the spoken or written word and the printed book, which alike shed lustre on the city. It is, however, with the latter that The Bailie has to do on this occasion.

Glasgow's First Printer.

"Glasgow's first printer was George Anderson, who came from Edinburgh, and set up his press here in 1638, from which was issued 'The Protestation of the Generall Assemblie of the Church of Scotland,' the first piece of printing known to bear a Glasgow imprint. It is now rare, and highly prized by collectors. Quite a host have followed in his wake—good, bad, and indifferent. Notable names in this connection are Robert Urie and the famous brothers Robert and Andrew Foulis, who brought the art of printing to a high state of perfection.

Messrs. James Maclehose and Sons.

"An admirable successor to Urie and the Foulises the city fortunately owns in the renowned firm of Messrs. James Maclehose & Sons, publishers and booksellers to the University. This old business was founded in 1838 by the father of the Man You Know. The James Maclehose of to-day is a worthy son of a worthy sire, and, as head of the firm, conducts this important business with rare skill and ability. He was born in Glasgow in 1857, and graduated Master of Arts in its University in 1878. His uncle, Mr. Robert Maclehose, sen., was for many years printer to the University, but retired in 1894. This business is now carried on under the style of Robert Maclehose & Co., Ltd., printers to the University, a firm whose extensive and splendidly equipped printing and bookbinding works at Anniesland are a sight to behold.

Some of the Firm's Publications.

"The Man You Know is principal partner in this business likewise, and thus combines both the production and distribution of high-class literature. In the limited space at disposal it is only possible to name a few of the many important books which have issued from the notable Maclehose press. Exempli gratia, there are the works of the late Principal John Caird and his brother Edward, formerly Master of Balliol, both writers of the first rank in the realm of religion and philosophy; valuable reprints of Hakluyt's Voyages, Purchas's Voyages, Fynes Moryson's Travels, and other similar books; and what The Bailie, a Glaswegian to the core, of necessity most highly prizes, viz., a series of splendid volumes relating to the past history of the city of Saint Mungo. The list comprises The Old Country Houses of the Old Glasgow Gentry, with photographic illustrations of great interest by Annan, published first in 1872, and followed by an enlarged edition in 1878; Memoirs and Portraits of One Hundred Glasgow Men, 1886—there is much excellent and informing writing in these two works by three high authorities on old Glasgow, viz., John Buchanan, LL.D., John Guthrie Smith, a former Lord Dean of Guild, and John Oswald Mitchell, LL.D., all three, alas! gone from life's record; Scottish National Memorials, 1890, the memorial volume of Glasgow's 1888 Exhibition; The Old Closes and Streets of Glasgow, 1900, an important series of views by the Messrs. Annan, with an introduction by Mr. Wm. Young, R.S.W.; and Scottish History and Life, 1902, to commemorate the great International Exhibition of 1901 held at Kelvingrove. The paper, type, and binding of these handsome volumes are of the first order of excellence. And note must also be made of three fine works of somewhat smaller dimensions, viz., Glasgow: Its Municipal Organisation and Administration, by Sir James Bell, Bart., and Mr. James Paton, F.L.S., 1896; Old Glasgow Essays, by John Oswald Mitchell, LL.D., 1905; and Glasgow Memorials, by Mr. Robert Renwick, Depute Town Clerk, 1908, all full of accurate and interesting information.

MR. JAMES MACLEHOSE.
(By permission from The Bailie, of Glasgow.

"Glasgow has good reason to feel proud of the records dealing with its past which have been published since quaint old M'Ure printed in 1736 what he had to say in his 'View of Glasgow,' the first history of the town. In this respect among British cities Glasgow occupies the foremost place, and in worthily upholding this supremacy in days within living recollection the works issued from the press of the Messrs. Maclehose have played a most important part. With the late Mr. Colin Dunlop Donald, Mr. Maclehose assisted in founding in 1889 the Regality Club, which continues to issue to its members printed records and pictures of Old Glasgow. Many early examples of the work of the now distinguished etcher, Mr. D. Y. Cameron, adorn its pages. These publications are of the same high class as those just noted. In 1903 the Man You Know founded the 'Scottish Historical Review,' which is published by his firm, and of which from the outset he has acted as editor. In connection with the business there has been successfully carried on since 1841 an important lending library, to-day so widely known to Glasgow and West of Scotland readers as 'The Western Book Club.' All new books of any account are sure to be found in due course upon its shelves.

"Like his father before him, whose striking presence many citizens can clearly recall (he died in 1885), the Man You Know is of tall and commanding aspect, and is a well-known figure in the city. Although perhaps not given to 'wearing his heart upon his sleeve,' the good heart is his all the same, and its owner is justly held in high esteem by those who know him.

"Since the middle of last century an ever-increasing business at their handsome premises at No. 61 St. Vincent Street, to-day a literary landmark of distinction in our midst, and one which is assuredly destined to prominently figure in future chronicles of the city.

"The firm has deservedly prospered in the past, and The Bailie, in a last word, cordially wishes it and its head continued success in the days to come."

[THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR AND BOOKSELLERS' RECORD, while thanking the Editor of The Bailie for permission to use this interesting account and the portrait, is glad also to bear testimony to the esteem in which Mr. Maclehose is held in publishing and bookselling circles of the United Kingdom.—ED. P.C.]

For Genealogists Interested in Herts.

"A HANDLIST to the Surnames represented by Monumental Inscriptions in the Hundred of Edwinstree, in the County of Hertford." The surnames upon the Memorials in the above division of the County number some eight hundred. To each of these set down in the record has been attached a distinctive letter or letters, corresponding with a list of the parishes in the Hundred printed at the commencement—indicating at a glance where the names are to be found. A few copies have been printed for the use of genealogists and others, price one shilling, and can be had of Mr. W. B. Gerish, of Bishop's Stortford.

Literature in Canada.

We have taken the following extracts from a very interesting address, describing some of the objects aimed at in the founding of the Royal Society of Canada, by its President, Dr. Samuel E. Dawson, C.M.G., the well known and greatly respected Canadian Publisher and Bookseller.—ED. P.C.

THE WORLD OF THE SPIRIT

IT will be my endeavour to direct your attention for a short time this evening to some of the objects aimed at in founding the Royal Society of Canada. My remarks will be concerned chiefly with the first two sections—the literary sections. The scientific sections express the activities of a scientific era, they need neither explanation nor apology. The attention of mankind is focussed as never before on the advance of science as it strides from victory to victory over the world of matter; but let us step out of the blaze of noon and rest awhile in the quiet shade of the world of the spirit

BROAD BASIS ON WHICH THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF CANADA IS FOUNDED

During the formation of our Society the view was strongly advocated that it should be organised after the pattern of the Royal Society of London and with the same limitations. There were many, however, among those called to Lord Lorne's counsels who were familiar with the traditions of French literature. Broader views prevailed, and the objects of the French Academy, together with the objects of the Royal Society of London, were covered by the different sections of the one Royal Society of Canada. In this way Science and Literature can give each other support, and an institution was founded upon the broad basis of the experience of two races, two nationalities, and two languages—a counterpart of Canada itself.

The Society has passed the period of adolescence, and, this year, both series of its "Transactions" are rendered available to all by an index covering the whole twenty-four volumes, prepared with great labour by one of the fellows of Section I. The wealth of research over the whole fields of Science and Literature thrown open to scholars is now manifest, and the founders of the Society have been justified by the results. To have built on so wide a plan showed an abiding faith in the future of our country, then only commencing to enter upon its astonishing period of expansion.

THE SPHERES OF SCIENCE AND LITERATURE

The spheres of Science and Literature, though they may seem at times to coalesce, are profoundly diverse. The former is fundamentally quantitative—the latter is radically qualitative. Science is based upon the principle laid down by one of the greatest of her votaries: "All things exist in number, weight, and measure." Yes! All things; save the will and the spirit of man. All things; save love, joy, honour, patriotism, and every other motive which stirs the human spirit to action or gives value and dignity to the life of man. For such things as these there is neither number, weight, nor measure; and yet in them is all that makes life worth living. They are the fields in which literature is supreme; for it deals with the whole region of the spirit—the whole world of mind—and nothing in that world can be apprehended quantitatively. It is doubtless easier to appraise work done in science than work done in literature—the scientific student can measure his results by definite and readily accepted standards, while work in literature must abide the general judgment of mankind. For that reason, in an industrial age, the pursuit of literature is not favoured by practical men; but they forget that, while science deals with the material forms and forces of the universe, literature has for its sphere the whole of the moral and intellectual forces past, present, and future. "Who knoweth the things of a man, but the spirit of a man which is in him?" Now, the "things of a man" are just those things which men really care for and by which civil society advances or retrogrades.

STATESMEN BRED ON LETTERS NOT SCIENCE

Literature, then, being the study of human life, it is, of necessity, the most practical of all studies—practical because it deals with the varied experiences and capacities of the human soul. For that reason great statesmen have been trained in letters rather than in science—in classics rather than in mathematics. Their field is human life and in the mirror of what are happily called "the humanities" that life is reflected.

BOOKS OUR MOST VALUABLE HERITAGE FROM PAST AGES

"Visible and tangible products of the past," says Carlyle, "I reckon up to the extent of three. Cities with their cabinets and arsenals; then tilled fields with their roads and bridges; and thirdly—books. In which third truly lies a worth far surpassing that of the two others." Not only are they surpassing in worth, but in endurance. The great cities of the ancient world, once the centres of great empires—Babylon, Tyre, Carthage, Thebes—are mounds of ruins. The rich plains of Asia and the productive fields of Northern Africa, once the granary of the Roman world, have, for long centuries, remained untilled; but the literatures of Greece, Rome, and Judea, still sway the minds of men. The wealth and luxury of the merchant princes of old equalled anything existing in our day; but their civilisation was material and their memory has passed into oblivion. The temple libraries recently exhumed contained deeds, contracts, leases, and such like practical documents, but nothing corresponding to the literature of the Jews or Greeks. The life was material, and therefore perished like the docks and palaces.* The whole wealth and power of Asia was hurled back by a small band of idealists at Marathon and Thermopylæ, and, while the native annals of those great powers are a blank, the history of the little cantons of Greece and the deeds of their citizens have been a guide through all the ages. The names of many of the poorest citizens of Athens are familiar to us, but who knows the names of the merchant princes of Tyre and Sidon. Perished are their docks and palaces, perished are their names and deeds; but the work of the "blind old singer of Scio's rocky Isle" still lives.

Other creations may fade, to shapeless ruin decaying;
Over the world of thy song, youth's earliest dawn is still playing.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF POETRY

Literature, at the highest level of its power, is expressed in poetry, which must be counted among the Fine Arts, since it is the product of the creative power of the imagination and is clothed with beauty of form, of proportion, and of cadence. Music expresses pure emotion, and in it the deep passion underlying universal humanity seeks expression; but its utterance is indefinite. Painting, while definite, is limited to the presentation of action at one moment of time, but poetry is not only the music of language, but it sustains its action over indefinitely long spaces of time. It appeals to the intellect as well as to the emotions, and touches all the chords of life. Poetry is more philosophical than history, and its subject matter is higher; for, while history relates what the spirit of man has done, the power of the imagination, working on an ideal plane, reveals what it is possible for the spirit of man to do.

THE IDEA OF CANADIAN NATIONALITY

During the last twenty-five years the idea of a Canadian nationality has been rapidly growing, and the change is reflected in our literature, especially in our poetry. To weld all Canada into one nation is an arduous task, and the statesmen will need the aid of the writers of Canada. The double history and origin of our people stand in the way of that intimate fusion so important in the formation of national solidarity.

BOTH SIDES WON ON THE PLAINS OF ABRAHAM

It is now recognised that in the battles on the Plains of Abraham both sides won. The English troops over-ran the country, but the French continued to possess it. The French lost nothing, but gained free institutions; and, by dint of long companionship, the English have come to regard the history of Old Canada as theirs also. While the French Revolution severed the French Canadians from France, the sequence of the American Revolution severed the English Canadians from the English-speaking people of the South. The two elements of our people are nearer and more to each other than to either of the nations from which they sprang, and, in the study of the history of their common country the two races find a bond of common interest drawing them closer, year by year, as they know each other better.

Then, again, our interests are widened by the dual origin of our people. Two languages awaken our sympathies with two distinct streams of civilisation. The histories of the two great mother nations supply us with an infinity of themes. Two great systems of law and two widely different systems of settlement broaden our outlook over the past and guide us in our forecast of the future.

American Notes

(From the New York Publishers' Weekly).

DELAY in filing oath, subjects books imported by a library to duty.—The Board of United States General Appraisers ruled that an importation of books made by the Morrison-Reeves Free Public Library, of Richmond, Ind., must stand assessment of duty at the rate of 20 per cent. under the provision in the Dingley tariff law for "books." It was the contention of Ada L. Bernhardt, the librarian, that the books having been imported for the use of a public institution should be admitted free of duty. Judge Hay, who writes the decision for the board, says that the requirements for free entry were complied with. The requisite oath was not filed with the board until more than a year after the entry of the books, and according to the General Appraiser the delay is not in conformity with the regulations for the free entry of books.

Reilly & Britton are reprinting "Dorothy and the Wizard in Oz"—an unusual thing to do at this season of the year, when the demand for juvenile books is at its lowest. Nevertheless, the orders have come in so strong since the holidays that the new edition at this time is amply warranted.

Duffield & Co publish H. G. Wells' new book, "Tono-Bungay," which is said to be a big, able-bodied, full-blooded English novel of the good old-fashioned school, but at the same time brimful of modernity, being the history of a patent medicine king, in other words, the inventor of Tono-Bungay. They expect to bring out immediately "The Magician," a new novel by W. Somerset Maugham. The plot of the story turns upon the attempt of a modern wizard to produce human life, sacrificing the life of his own wife in the carrying out of his experiments.

The following advertisement appeared in a Boston newspaper on January 4th: "The late Mr. J. McNeill Whistler's letters. Warning to publishers and others. It has come to the knowledge of the late Mr. Whistler's executrix that certain persons have recently published letters written by the late Mr. Whistler. Notice is hereby given that the publication of any such letters without the consent of Mr. Whistler's executrix is unlawful, and that legal proceedings will be taken against all persons publishing, or offering for sale, copies of any such letters. Watkins-Williams, Steel & Hart, solicitors for the said executrix, 54, New Broad Street, London, E.C., December, 1908."

NUMBER OF AUTHORS.—How many authors are there in England? Eleven thousand, says the Author, accepting the reckoning of a statistician whose figures, we are assured, may be relied on. Mr. J. M. Barrie once remarked that the easiest way to be an author was to belong to the "Authors' Society," but, in fact, the membership of the society amounts only to 2,000, out of this 11,000. The "Literary Year Book" prints the names of 3,000 authors.—Evening Standard.

How a Golf Club House Should be Built

BOOKSELLERS will, we are sure, be thanked by golfers if they draw their attention to a fully illustrated article in the February number of The Country Home on "A Modern Golf Club House," by Mr. Cecil Alexander Sharp, A.R.I.B.A. It is a practical dissertation, having for its object the definition of what an "ideal golf house" should be. The whole article, which is fully illustrated by plans and photographs, should interest all golfing enthusiasts. "I have endeavoured," says Mr. Sharp, "to give some idea, with the help of the illustrations, of what a first-class, economical, comfortable and sufficient club should be, and one that will provide for an increasing membership. It is a game for all time, no mere passing fancy, and it behoves all promoters of golf club buildings to see that they are soundly built and architecturally designed, so that they may not become a blot and eyesore upon some beautiful spot bequeathed to us by nature."

The Trade and Industry of Australia

MESSRS. EYRE & SPOTTISWOODE, LTD., East Harding Street, London, E.C., have just published a handsome Royal 8vo. volume, entitled "The Trade and Industry of Australia," by Ben H. Morgan, being a report on the state of and openings for trade and the condition of local industries in Australia and New Zealand. We marvel at the amount of carefully classified information which Mr. Ben H. Morgan has collected in the somewhat short period he had at his disposal; he sailed to Australia in February, following instructions from the Manufacturers' Association of Great Britain, and returned towards the end of July. Although mainly intended for British Merchants interested in Colonial trade, it is likely to prove useful to all interested in capital and labour questions, and all Imperialists. There are many illustrations from drawings and photographs, and we can recommend it as containing the latest information, and in many cases the only information, on the subject. At 6s. net it is a cheap book.

THE SUNDAY PAPER.—I spent five cents for the Sunday Dart, and hauled it home in a two-wheeled cart. I piled the sections upon the floor, till they reached as high as the kitchen door; I hung the chromos upon the wall, though there wasn't room to hang them all; and the yard was littered some ten feet deep with "comic sections" that made me weep; and there were sections of pink and green, a woman's section and magazine, and sheets of music, the which if played would quickly make an audience fade; and there were patterns for women's gowns, and also for gentlemen's hand-me-downs; and a false moustache and a rubber doll, and a deck of cards and a parasol. Now men are busy with dray and cart, a-hauling away the Sunday Dart.—Emporia Gazette.

The Origin and Growth of a New Language: A Romance of Real Life.

BY G. L. BROWNE, D.B.E.A.

ON December 15th, 1859, was born in massacre-stained Bielostok, Russia, a child of the hated and persecuted Hebrew race who, pondering as a boy of nine over the incessant conflict between Russians, Poles, Germans, Lithuanians, and Jews, in his native town, dreamed of a talisman of peace. Their quarrels arose, he saw, because they spoke different languages, so they could never really understand one another. Could they but have a neutral language this strife might cease! The abiding ideal grew with the boy and dominated his life, and when, in 1878, he entered Warsaw University his International language was already planned. But his father bade him wait and practise the language before giving it to the world. So like the Fay who wrought Excalibur:—

"Nine years she wrought it, sitting in the deeps, Upon the hidden bases of the hills."

Nine years Louis Lazarus Zamenhof wrought and fashioned Esperanto, composing and speaking in it, until it flowed as a living language. Eventually published in 1887, Esperanto remains unaltered to-day. Then one man's language, Esperanto has now adherents in every land. Seventy-two periodicals and thousands of books appear in it.

"Simpla, fleksebla, belsona, vere internacia en siaj elementoj, la lingvo Esperanto prezentas al la mondo civilizita la sole veran solvon de lingvo internacia."

The actual number of Esperantists is not recorded, as large numbers never register; 30,000 names appeared, however, in a list published two years ago, but upwards of 200,000 undoubtedly exist in Europe, while one Society alone (that of Paris) contains 1,000 members.

[We know no Esperanto, but the translation seems to be "Simple, flexible, of fine sound, truly international in its elements, the Esperanto language presents to the civilised world the sole true solution of the international language."—ED. P.C.]

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Asher & Co.—Important Decisions regarding the Working of German Patents (as well as Literal Transactions of the German Patent Law, &c.). In view of the far-reaching effects expected to result from the new provisions of the British Patent Act, 1907, Mr. Selmar Reitzenbaum thought that an excerpt such as his would be of interest, especially as the changed situation will not only affect the status of patents, but will exercise an important influence upon English, German and American industrial enterprise.

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—"Francois le Champi" par George Sand. Illustrations de Gertrude Leese. One of that excellent series "Les Classiques Français Illustrées," which is edited by Mr. Daniel O'Connor. This series consists of literal and complete reprints of the French texts, with numerous illustrations, both coloured and in black and white, and they are eminently suitable for young readers, and for prizes and gift-books. Five numbers are already issued, and more are in preparation.

From The Cambridge University Press come four reprints of English Classics edited with Introductions and Notes for the use of Schools: Cobbett's "Rural Rides" and Hazlitt's "Characters of Shakespeare's Plays," by Mr. J. H. Lobban; Defoe's "Memoirs of a Cavalier," by Miss Elizabeth O'Neill; and "The True Travels, Adventures and Observations of Captain John Smith," by Mr. E. A. Benians. These books are all well worth reprinting, even in the abridged form necessitated (except for the "Characters") by the object in view; for they are all of great merit in their different ways, and not readily accessible to the ordinary reader. The selection appears judicious, and the commentaries are helpful without being excessive.

From the Same.—"Elementary Algebra," by C. H. French, M.A., and G. Osborn, M.A. This book, which now appears in a revised and enlarged form, has met with strong approval from teachers who have tested it in actual class work. Such changes as have been made are in accordance with modern methods; but the authors have been careful to retain its main, distinctive feature—simplicity of style. The work includes Common Logarithms and the Binomial Theorem for a positive integral index, and is amply sufficient for such examinations as the London Matriculation, the Cambridge Previous, the ordinary passwork of the Higher Certificate Examination of the Oxford and Cambridge Board, and others of similar standard.

From the Same.—"The Acts of the Apostles: Revised Version," edited, with Introduction and Notes for the use of Schools, by C. West Watson, M.A.—"St. Luke: Revised Version," edited, with Introduction and Notes for the use of Schools, by E. Wilton South, M.A. The aim of these two handy volumes is to present in a clear and intelligible form the best and most approved results of recent theological work. The notes, which are full and complete, without being unnecessarily wordy, are made easily accessible by being placed at the foot of each page.—"The Electra of Sophocles." With a Commentary, abridged from the larger edition of Sir Richard C. Jebb, Litt.D. by Gilbert A. Davies, M.A. A learned introduction of some fifty pages prefaced the text, which occupies another fifty pages; following the text are a hundred odd pages of Notes and two indices (Greek and English). Mr. Davies has omitted nothing from the commentary of Sir Richard Jebb, which contributed directly to the elucidation of the play, and in a few cases he has made small alterations and additions with the view of making particular points clearer.—"Studies in French Education from Rabelais to Rousseau," by Geraldine Hodgson, B.A. Miss Hodgson is the first writer to produce in English a book dealing exclusively with French education; yet the history of Education is singularly incomplete if the contribution of the great French educators be omitted. Her chapters are most able and discriminating; though full of learning, she has written a book which will appeal to both scholar and layman. She selects and explains with point and vigour the salient features in the views and teaching of such educators as Rabelais, Montaigne, Pascal, Rousseau, and Madame d'Epinay.—"Le Médecin de Campagne," by Honoré de Balzac. Edited with Notes and Introduction by de V. Payen-Payne. The editorial work is excellently done, the notes being clear and full.—"Trees," by the late H. Marshall Ward, Sc.D., F.R.S. Vol. 4 of Dr. Ward's useful handbooks of forest-botany for the woodlands and the laboratory is devoted entirely to fruits. It is divided into two parts, entitled respectively General and Special. The very large number of carefully-drawn illustrations will be found extremely useful.—"The Clerke's Tale" and "The Squiere's Tale" have been edited in one volume by Miss Lilian Winstanley, M.A. The Introduction is a most exhaustive and valuable piece of work; it deals, in considerable detail, with Chaucer's place in English literature, contains three chronological tables, and enters fully into the questions of the grammar and metre of Chaucer.

From The Catholic Truth Society.—"The Story of Robin," by Evelyn Mary Buckenham. A nameless baby is left in the snow outside the country residence of Lady Sinclair on Christmas Eve. He grows up a rather morbid and introspective lad, and because nothing is known of his father or mother he becomes inordinately sad; but, needless to say, all comes right in the end. The story will prove useful in strengthening religious feeling in the young.

From Messrs. T. & T. Clark.—"The Background of the Gospels," by William Fairweather, M.A. This learned volume contains the twentieth series of the Cunningham Lectures, and deals with the subject of Judaism in the period between the Old and New Testaments. The period embraced is that beginning with the Maccabæan revolt, and ending with the destruction of Jerusalem under Titus. These two important events, separated by an interval of 235 years, mark off a well defined section of the history of the nation. The external history has been narrated only so far as necessary to make clear the development of Judaism.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable.—"National Songs and Some Ballads," by Harold Boulton. A selection brought together from many verses written during the last half century, and dedicated to those "who in this sophisticated age still have a liking for the simple and direct methods of lyric and ballad writing." This savours rather of blowing one's own horn, and somehow raises in the reader a desire to criticise. Still, Mr. Boulton has a public who will welcome the volume.

From the Same comes the first volume of their new illustrated monthly magazine, The Country Home. The demand for the magazine shows that it has filled a useful place, and has justified the publishers in increasing the size and attractiveness of the later numbers.

From Mr. Robert Culley.—"The Gift of the Sea," by Alfred B. Cooper. In a terrible storm the good ship Shandon, bound for Argentina, goes ashore on a ridge of sandbanks and becomes a total wreck. The lifeboat is launched, the crew are able to save one solitary soul—a baby about six months old. The little one is given to Miss Ashton, a lady noted for her kindness and good works. She is delighted with her "Gift from the Sea." A gold locket containing a miniature of a beautiful girl, evidently, from the likeness between them, the baby's mother, a monogram "M.C." on one side, a crest and motto on the other is found among the child's clothing. In spite of this clue, however, the baby's identity is not discovered, no relatives come forward to claim her, so she is brought up by Miss Ashton, to the latter's great delight. When the heroine of the story is twenty years old, she finds out who she is, and all ends happily. "The Gift of the Sea" is a simple but exceedingly pretty and wholesome story and very suitable as a gift-book for girls.

From the Same.—"The Seed of the Righteous," by Frank T. Bullen. It is not easy for Mr. Bullen to write a dull page, and this record of lowly lives in humble circumstances is written with such calm strength and restraint that it fascinates the reader in spite of its lack of the romantic and the picturesque. At the age of nine Dick is left an orphan, for his father and mother die in the same night; he has three younger sisters and brothers, and they are immediately taken to the Union, where they are provided for. Dick's subsequent fight with the world is described in detail, for Mr. Bullen himself has passed through many of his hero's hardships, and speaks from an intimate knowledge of the hard and cruel side of life.

From Messrs. Dean & Son.—Amongst quite inexpensive books for children two just issued by Messrs. Dean & Son strike us as particularly delightful. "Twilight Tales" and "Elfin Tales" are just such as will appeal to little folk from six years old upwards; they are brightly written and well illustrated. In "Twilight Tales" such old favourites as Tom Thumb, Blue Beard, and Puss in Boots are to be met, whilst "Elfin Tales" tells of the adventures of tiny imps and hobgoblins.

From Mr. David Douglas, Edinburgh.—"Thirty-five Years in the Punjaub; 1858-1893," by G. R. Elsmie, C.S.I., LL.D. This book consists mainly of extracts from letters and diaries written by the author as he journeyed through his Indian life and forms an excellent series of pictures of the life and progress of a Civil officer in the Punjaub during the latter half of last century. The narrative will be found of great interest by old Punjabis who remember the whole or part of the time dealt with, by young men looking forward to service as civilians in India, and by other persons who care to read about that country. The author's style is terse, well knit, satisfying and very clear. His personality is very attractive, and, though he takes a natural pride in his successes, he is modest and (to quote his own words) has "no buckram about him."

Mr. Henry J. Drane.—"Life's Lessons, and Other Poems," by Morris Hawksley. The poems contained in this small volume are good examples of modern verse that will attract readers by their facile lyrical quality.

From the Same.—"The Supreme Rulers," by J. A. Houghton. This extraordinary book begins with long conversations between Luna, Venus, Saturn, Uranus, and other "supreme rulers" as to how to remedy the ignorance of mankind with regard to planetary influence. Horoscopes are to be drawn for all children, marriage bureaux established by the Government where suitable partners (from a planetary point of view) are to be assigned, and all human life is to be regulated in accordance with astrological science. How the latter affects education, medicine, and industrialism is fully entered into. The second part of the book descends to the terrestrial plane, and in Mexico we find Ralph Thornton conversing with an ancient Sage. They discuss Astrology and the horoscopes of Roosevelt, Chamberlain, and King Edward VII. That the reader needs brains, as well as patience, will be proved by the one quotation which space permits. Speaking of the King's dangerous illness in 1871, we find "This event was caused by the direction of moon to mid-heaven converse, and the Solar arc measuring to same is 28° 49′, being the difference between the right ascension of the sun at birth, 224° 25′, and the right ascension of the sun thirty days before birth, when the sun was in 16° 56′ of Libra, with right ascension of 195° 36′." This leaves us positively bewildered.

From the Same.—"As they Are," by "Bartholomew." "Bartholomew" is introduced to us in a Preface by Sarah Grand, who begins with a sledge-hammer attack upon Publishers and Editors in general, and then proceeds to say that the nineteen dialogues which constitute the book will enlarge our range of vision by adding to our knowledge of life. But there is nothing very new in "Bartholomew's" not unskilful delineation of vulgarity in smart-set and subaltern life. The characters murder the English language, gossip, drink whiskeys and sodas, turn themselves inside out for each other's benefit, and show an utter lack of any real distinction of thought or feeling. No doubt such types do exist, but we have found an undiluted dose of them rather dreary stuff.

From Mr. A. C. Fifield.—"The New Word," by Mr. Allen Upward. This is the second edition—the first, however, to which the author's name is attached—of an "Open Letter to the Swedish Academy," published originally at Geneva. Under the will of the late Professor Nobel a valuable prize is annually awarded "to the person who shall have produced in the field of literature the most distinguished work of an idealist tendency." In the attempt to fix the meaning of the word "idealist," Mr. Upward has been drawn on into a treatise of striking originality and importance. In philology, in religion, in logic, in metaphysics he is a thorough-going revolutionist; he has all Carlyle's hatred of shams, but without his crabbedness. The book abounds in striking sayings and pregnant thoughts. The ordinary reader will peruse it with interest and pleasure; the man of letters and the thinker will study it with care as the possible spark of a new illumination.

From the Same.—"The Corn Laws," by Mary A. M. Marks, is a popular account of legislative attempts to control the productions and importation of corn in England. Starting from the first Corn Law, in 1225, Miss Marks traces the history of the whole subject down to Peel's historic volte-face in 1845. The subject is a difficult one, and complicated by political and partisan issues; but Miss Marks writes with clearness and reasonable fairness, and with constant quotation of contemporary authorities, gives us the history of the subject. As a picture of the condition of the labouring classes under a protective system her book deserves careful study from Free Traders and Tariff Reformers alike.

From the Same.—"Landholding in England considered in relation to poverty," by Mary A. M. Marks. An exceedingly able exposition of the several steps, from Saxon times to our own day, by which England has arrived at her present position of a country without peasant proprietors. All interested in the "back to the land" movement should purchase this shilling volume, for it goes to the very heart of the land question, makes the difficulties of the present position clear, and shows the necessary reforms which must precede any satisfactory solution. Few will dispute the contention that the accumulation of land into vast estates is a hindrance to the growth of citizenship, and that the creation of a class of peasants cultivating small holdings owned by themselves would be an unmixed blessing to the country as a whole. Vast interests and influence oppose themselves to this desire, and a clear view such as Miss Marks gives us is at any rate a step in the right direction, for it will help to form public opinion upon a matter of national importance.

From Mr. T. N. Foulis.—"Letters of John Keats" and "On Books and Character," by Hazlitt. (Holyrood Books). These are two specimens of a unique little library of beautifully produced books bound in gelder grey boards with gold stamping on vellum; they may also be had more elaborately bound. They are a delight to handle, type, paper and general get-up adding to one's appreciation of the good literature of their contents. So far, six volumes have been issued, and more are promised.

From the Same.—"Who is to be the Master of the World?" by Mr. Anthony M. Ludovici. It has been said that "the duty which the great thinker leaves to his followers is that of interpreting him." That is the task which Mr. Ludovici has set himself to perform for his master, Friedrich Nietzsche. In these three lectures recently delivered at the University of London he has sketched in outline the constructive as well as the destructive side of Nietzsche's startling and revolutionary philosophy. His book will do much to attract attention in England to a very remarkable man, for it is lucidly and sympathetically written, with abundant quotations from Nietzsche's writings, including several which are not yet accessible in English.

From Mr. Henry Frowde.—"North and South," by Mrs. Gaskell, has now been included in The World's Classics. There is a short introduction by Mr. Clement Shorter.

From Messrs. Gale & Polden, Ltd.—"Military Law Made Easy," by Lieut.-Colonel S. T. Banning (late Royal Munster Fusiliers). A comprehensive treatise on Military Law, specially intended for officers reading for the Promotion Examination. Appended are the questions set in recent examinations fully answered with references to official books.

From the Same.—"The Military Law Examiner," by Lieut. Colonel Sisson C. Pratt (Royal Artillery, retired). This volume contains questions set at Public Examinations in Military Law, together with answers to them. The questions are methodically grouped in sections, which correspond with the several heads under which the author has treated on the subject in his work, "Military Law, its Procedure and Practice."

From the Same.—"Guide to Promotion for Officers in subject 'A' (Regimental Duties)," by Captain R. F. Legge (The Prince of Wales' Leinster Regiment). This work deals very thoroughly with that part of the subject for Promotion termed Regimental Duties. This volume is uniform with the two above-mentioned, forming part of Messrs. Gale & Polden's "Military Series."

From the Same.—"Army Service Corps (Territorial Force) Guide," compiled by Captain J. Atkinson, A.S.C. (Hants). This handbook gives particulars of service with the Territorial Army Service Corps for Officers, Warrant and Non-Commissioned Officers, together with specimen Examination Papers. It states very fully the requirements with which an applicant for a commission must comply, and there are full details of kit, &c., necessary and the probable cost thereof. The work will prove interesting to any men with experience in transport or the organisation of supply who would wish to be of use to their country in time of need.

From the Same.—"How to Instruct in Aiming and Firing," by Qr.-Mr. Sergt.-Instr. J. Bostock, of the Hythe Staff. A useful little handbook, well illustrated by photographs and diagrams, which should be easily understood by the most obtuse recruit, and should prove of service to many amateur riflemen.

From the Same.—"Notes on Visual Training and Judging Distance," also by Qr.-Mr.-Sergt.-Instr. J. Bostock. A handbook embodying directions for instructing in a most important branch of musketry training. Well illustrated with photographs, and diagrams.

From the Same.—"Hints on Etiquette and Dress for Officers of the Territorial Forces," by an Adjutant. A pamphlet which should prove useful to those for whom it is intended.

From Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co.—"Our Children's Book of Plays," in Two Parts. The five plays contained in these two little volumes are quite in the right spirit for children's performance. The authors have wisely avoided anything complicated, have aimed at words easy for little minds to learn by heart, and have not forgotten that even an inventive mother or governess has limitations in the way of scenic effects. Perhaps the most successful play is the one taken from "Alice in Wonderland": here we meet our old friends the March Hare, the Cheshire Cat, Tweedeldum, and others, and acted with spirit it would be sure to bring down the house.

From the Same.—"A Hard Bit of Road," by Raymond Jacberns. Miss Pollie Pettigrew is a veritable creation, and the pages that describe her dealings with Etheline Farrell are full of excellent humour. The Farrell family are poor, and Etheline, being strong-minded and independent, earns her living as companion to Miss Pettigrew. The story is bright and there is plenty of incident; moreover, Miss Jacberns has a real gift for the creation of character.

From Messrs. Gay & Hancock, Ltd.—"A Happy Half Century," by Agnes Repplier, Litt.D. The last twenty-five years of the eighteenth century and the first twenty-five years of the nineteenth contain ample fare for the literary browser; it is a period containing many exploded literary reputations, and the attitude taken up by Miss Repplier is well illustrated by the line taken from Charles Lamb—"This damn'd unmasculine canting age!" The little volume of essays is certainly very charming: the touch is delicate, the humour spontaneous, and the point of view modern but not intolerant.

From The Gresham Publishing Co.—"Practical Coal Mining." Edited by Professor W. S. Boulton. Volume 6 of this fine work is now published, and with the index forms a complete and invaluable record. We have exhausted almost every adjective in praise of this publication in notices of previous volumes; we feel sure it is likely to become and remain for a long time the standard work on this subject.

From Health and Strength, Ltd.—"Roller Skating for Novice and Expert": a practical text-book on the craze of the moment. It is written by C. S. Monohan, the well-known American expert, who is at present touring this country. There are numerous photographic illustrations, and the book deals with the subject from every point of view. It is suitable for beginners and those well acquainted with the sport.

From Mr. William Heinemann.—"The Greatness and Decline of Rome," by Gugliemo Ferrero. Translated by the Rev. H. J. Chaytor, M.A., Headmaster of Plymouth College. We have before us Vols. 3 and 4 of this splendid work. The former deals with the decline of the Roman aristocracy after the death of Cæsar, the latter with the relations between Rome and Egypt. The work will, we are sure, be accepted in schools and in the Universities as a standard authority. We must remark that the translation is excellent.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—"The National Gallery," Part 6; "Beautiful Flowers," Part 7, and Part 8 of "Wild Beasts of the World" are now ready.

Mr. J. Jacobs sends us a Hebrew work of a somewhat unusual kind. "Pilpul Zeman Zemanim Zemanehem" ("Arguments concerning Festivals," &c.) is a parody on the Haggadah of Passover, describing in satirical language many of the Christian ceremonies and beliefs current in Italy in the Middle Ages. The work is believed to have been composed by Jonah Rapa about 1680, and is printed from extant manuscripts at the expense of the Trustees of the Montefiore Endowment.

From Mr. John Lane.—"The Poems of A. C. Benson." Lovers of poetry will be glad of this receuil of Mr. Benson's poems, which have been selected from six of the volumes issued by him between 1892 and 1905. Amongst the minor poets there is none we rank higher; about all his verse clings the intangible yet compelling atmosphere of the man of culture and wide classical education. High finish and distinction of thought are what we have come to expect from this writer, and his work issues successfully from the ordeal of being gathered together into one volume.

From the Same.—"Our Daily Bread," by Clara Viebig. Translated by Margaret L. Clarke. Frau Viebig has a wide reputation in Germany as a powerful writer of peculiar and distinctive genius. "Our Daily Bread" is not pleasant reading; it is too close to life, too full of ferocious realism to be pleasant. But it is a work of serious aim and no less serious achievement. Two country girls come to Berlin to earn their livings as domestic servants. The environment into which they are flung is sordid and mean, and the friends they make are particularly unpleasant. The multitudinous detail is made to cohere by means of Frau Viebig's unusual constructive faculty, and her story is a memorable one.

From Mr. Thos. Law.—"Youth and Life," a volume of "Talks to Young People" (some of which we seem to have seen in the columns of a leading Liberal newspaper) collected and published by the National Council of Evangelical Free Churches. The subjects dealt with are all of great importance to young men and women, such as "The Christian View of the Body," "The Tragedy of the Vacant Mind," "Choosing a Life Partner," "The Art of Getting on with People." The writers are all men of eminence in the evangelical world; and they write with the earnestness and authority which come from long experience of the peculiar temptations of the class for whom the book is intended.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—"Bible Lessons for Schools: The Acts of the Apostles," by E. M. Knox. We have nothing but praise for this sound accurate and careful piece of work. Intended primarily for the use of the teacher, but secondarily for the use of the pupil also, it has been divided into sections so that facts can be the more easily underlined and paragraphs studied. The lessons are calculated to assist both teachers and scholars to study the Acts as a whole, instead of dwelling upon its exterior and incidental parts; they also show how the men who lived with Jesus understood and applied the first principles of His teaching and acts to the religious and social problems of their day.—"A Latin Reading Book: Gotham and Other Stories," by Rev. E. D. Stone. The compiler of this useful book has not only brought together a number of pieces in prose and verse, but he has clearly indicated the manner in which his collection may be used to greatest advantage. Several modern poets have been translated into idiomatic Latin of not too great difficulty.

From the Same.—"Representative English Poems," selected and edited with Introduction and Notes by Mr. G. S. Brett. The Poems chosen are twenty-three in number, representing all the great English poets from Milton to Browning. The selection is a sound, if not very striking or original one; and the notes, though made primarily to meet the needs of Indian students, will be found helpful by English readers.

From the Same.—"Selections from White's Natural History of Selborne," edited, with Introduction, Notes and Glossary, by Mr. F. A. Bruton, M.A. Yet another Selborne book! The letters dealt with by Mr. Bruton are only thirty in number, but they are well chosen and well edited. The book is apparently intended for the use of schools; and this is, perhaps, the best purpose to which White's work can now be put. For while his conclusions have been greatly supplemented, and in some respects corrected, since his time, his methods of observation, his patience and fidelity and minuteness in the study of nature, remain an example and an inspiration for ever. Mr. Bruton's Introduction and Notes are just of the right kind (though a Master of Arts should not speak of chrysales!), and there are forty admirable illustrations.

From Messrs. Madgwick, Houlston & Co., Ltd.—"Everybody's Book of Indoor Games," containing the laws of the principal indoor games played by English-speaking peoples. This is a new edition of Vol. 13 of the very popular Saxon's Everybody's Series of sixpenny books. The games appear to include practically all card games, all games played with cues and balls, dominoes, halma, &c., and there are over 200 pages of small type—a very useful multum in parvo, perhaps not quite up-to-date as regards bridge.

From Messrs. Maunsel & Co., Ltd.—"A Prisoner of his Word," by Louie Bennett. A tale of Ireland in the days of Thomas Russell and Robert Emmet. The wrongs of Ireland occupy the attention of the central characters of the story, who are all engaged in plotting against their English oppressors; but though Henry Maxwell has the fire of patriotism running in his veins his sister Kate has far more fury and vengeful wrath, and when her lover, Ross Lambart, refuses to aid her in avenging her brother's hanging she spurns him and taunts him with his English blood. There are some fine scenes, and no little observation in Miss Bennett's unusual story.

From the Same.—"Contemporary Ireland," by L. Paul-Dubois; with an Introduction by T. M. Kettle, M.P. This detailed and scholarly volume is an English translation of "L'Irlande Contemporaire," which was published in Paris a year ago, and which has already achieved a considerable reputation on the Continent. M. Paul-Dubois has the advantage of temperamental sympathy, and a personal equipment of the first order. His voice is raised for the Gaelic League, and against linguistic Imperialism; for the ploughed field, and against the grazing ranch; for Home Rule and against the Act of Union. The book is based on a broad colligation of facts, and so easily is the material handled that every page is thoroughly readable. There is a historical introduction of some eighty pages, after which follow the three parts into which the book is divided: "Political and Social Conditions," "Material Decadence," and "Possibilities of Regeneration."

From Mr. Andrew Melrose.—"Questions answered by Christ," by the Rev. John A. Bain, M.A. Mr. Bain has struck a vein of thought, which has not to our knowledge been worked before. He has taken all the questions, about thirty-six in number, which are recorded in the Gospels as having been directly addressed to Christ, and on each he has written a short and suggestive sermon. The whole series makes a handsome, well-printed volume, which will be found full of striking thoughts and practical helpfulness for clergy and laity alike. The book can be heartily recommended.

From the Same.—"The Gospel of St. Mark," with Introduction and Notes by Rev. W. S. Green. This neatly got-up little volume belongs to the series of the "Westminster New Testament," under the general editorship of Dr. A. E. Garvie. As in the other volumes, two of which we see have already reached a second edition, the standpoint adopted is the frank acceptance of modern critical results as a whole, but without undue deference to the vagaries of individual critics, and the needs of the preacher and teacher are kept in view throughout.

From the Same.—"Estimations in Criticism," by Walter Bagehot. The late Mr. Walter Bagehot's criticisms are being issued in two volumes edited by Mr. Cuthbert Lennox. The first volume, dealing with poets and poetry, has just been published; it contains essays on Hartley Coleridge, Cowper, Shelley, and Milton.

From Mr. John Milne.—"The two Good wins." The numerous admirers of Mr. Murray Gilchrist's pleasant pictures of country life will certainly be pleased with this, which deals with the rich farming folk of the Peak District. Mr. Gilchrist knows how to put blood and life into his characters. The scenes between the warm-hearted Sarah and her lover and between his grandmother and Sarah's mother are capitally done.

From Messrs. Milner & Co., Ltd.—"Esperanto for the English," by A. Franks. Mr. Franks has written an Esperanto manual specially designed to meet the requirements of English-speaking peoples. In the earlier exercises only those Esperanto roots are employed which are exactly the same as the English, or are so similar in appearance or sound as to be at once recognised and remembered. The plan of the book is thoroughly practical, and the exercises are skilfully graduated in order of difficulty.

From Messrs. Morgan & Scott (for The China Inland Mission).—"My Father's Business," a brief sketch of the life and work of Agnes Gibson, by Marian H. Fishe. It is a simple and touching record of an unassuming life, glorified by the spirit of service. Miss Gibson was a missionary at Hokow from 1886 till her death in 1898; and one cannot read Miss Fishe's account of her work without echoing the comment of Mr. Orr-Ewing, "if China could have a few score of such missionaries, there would soon be marked results among the people of that great Empire."

From Messrs. Morgan & Scott, Ltd.—"The Spirit in the Word," by Mr. David M. McIntyre, is a symptom of the reaction which is now setting in against ultra-critical and ultra-scientific views of the Bible. When destructive criticism has done its worst against Holy Scripture, it still remains true, as Mr. McIntyre says, that "the fullest insistence on the veritable humanness of the various writings which compose it does in no way detract from its divine authority." Its message is still a message from God to the devout and earnest spirit. Those Christians—and they are not a few—who are dismayed by the errors and inconsistencies which have been discovered in their Holy Book, may derive much comfort from Mr. McIntyre's able arguments and hopeful eloquence.

From the Same.—"Peru: Its Story, People, and Religion," by Geraldine Guinness. This is a very bulky, well-written and interesting tract, with numerous illustrations, an excellent map, glossary, and bibliography. The authoress has been engaged in "inter-denominational" missionary work in Peru, and her account of the country and its peoples makes delightful reading. But the book is spoilt by violence and exaggeration, and the authoress misses being impressive by overstating her case. To her Latin America is a "continent of Paganized Christianity." Whole chapters are given under such headings as:—Romanism: A spiritual famine; a Moral Pestilence; the celebration of the Mass is held up as "The perpetration of the most awful blasphemy under heaven." This sort of writing convinces nobody, and certainly weakens Miss Guinness' attack upon the Roman Communion for its lack of tolerance! Alas, that Catholicism should have done so little to raise the general tone of life in South America; this cannot be denied. But Miss Guinness has spoiled an interesting book by her excessive bigotry.

From the Same.—"The Cross in the Old Testament," by the Rev. R. C. Morgan, is a series of papers reprinted from The Christian, of which Mr. Morgan is the editor. Their aim is to find in the Old Testament Scriptures intimations and types of the Redemption fulfilled in Christ, and recorded in the New Testament. Though similar work has often been done before there is still room for this neat little volume, and it will be welcomed by many Christian people, especially of the "old-fashioned" sort.

From Messrs. A. R. Mowbray & Co., Ltd.—"A Book of Prayers for Boys: together with special prayers for the Holy Eucharist." Compiled by the Rev. C. H. Blofield, Chaplain of the Training Ship Mercury. No doubt this manual will be adopted in some Anglican institutions; there is nothing particularly striking about it, and we should have thought that one or other of the established High Church manuals would have met the case. Or, for the matter of that, "The Garden of the Soul," which contains most of the matter contained in high Anglican compilations (and a great deal, besides) without the disadvantage of pretending to appear in harmony with the Protestant Prayer-book.——"By Grace of the Christ Child," by the Rev. E. Hermitage Day, D.D. Contains four charming little stories of Christmas, full of point and excellently gotten up.——"All Shall be Well." Selections from the writings of the Lady Julian of Norwich, A.D. 1373. Mother Julian's writings are not sufficiently known in England; these selections display her real piety and her practical commonsense, qualities which are indeed uniformly noticeable in the devotional works of the past that have survived. For instance, in that of St. Thomas à Kempis, St. Ignatius Loyola, Castaniza, &c.

From the Same.—"Ifs and Ans," by the Warden of the Richard Tidswell Memorial Home, Chester. Helpful little talks with girls. —— "Gold, Frankincense and Myrrh," an offering in Verse, by G. M. Those who are acquainted with the author's former work "With the Beloved," will expect to find in the present collection a high standard of verse together with a gentle, delicate insight into some of the mysteries of Faith. We quote the first verse of "The Slumber Song to the Infant Jesus," which seems to us instinct with a happy understanding of both sides of the Incarnation.

"Sleep, my Sweet, and take your rest,
Mother Mary holds you surely,
Safely pillowed on her breast
Breathing lightly, smiling purely;
Sleep, my Sweet, my Holy One,
Sleep, my darling little Son!"

——"For Love of Our Lord," by the Rev. Jesse Brett, L.M. Simple talks on the circumstances of daily life, which will be appreciated by readers of "The Sign" (in which they first appeared) and others.

From the Same.—"Church Teaching for Church Children," by the Rev. J. N. Newland-Smith. There is a very general feeling now among Church workers that an effort should be made to improve the methods of teaching religion to the young. Of books recently published for this purpose, we have seen none better than "Church Teaching for Church Children." As the Rev. Percy Dearmer points out in an interesting Preface, orthodoxy is killed by the mechanical use of stock phrases; children, like men, will in the long run only believe what is made real to their own minds, and vital to their own hearts. Bearing this in mind, Mr. Newland Smith has taken the Church Catechism on a three years' course, and explained and illustrated it in ways which will be found extremely stimulating and impressive. We can heartily commend the book to all clergymen and Church teachers.

From the Same.—Messrs. Mowbray & Co., whose Church Almanacks and other handy publications have been for some time steadily growing in public favour, send us the initial issue of a new Encyclopædia for Churchmen, to which they have given the name of "Mowbray's Annual." They think that the present time, when the Church of England is furnishing new proofs of her corporate strength and her high ideals, is an opportune one for the publication of a volume which, while less formal and limited in scope than the "Official Year Book," may supply in a handy form the current information about Church matters likely to be of use or interest to Church people all over the world. The book contains over 300 compact but clearly-printed pages, in stiff paper cover, or cloth, and should have a large sale for it is carefully edited and well up-to-date, including even the withdrawal of the Education Bill so late as December 4th.

From the Same.—"Sunday School Lesson Notes," by H. Hollingworth, M.A. These Lesson Notes are drawn up to supply a course for two years. Each Lesson is meant to occupy two Sundays, the object being not to give so much teaching but to ensure that the knowledge has been understood by the scholars.

From Messrs. Mullan & Son, Belfast.—"Ulster Nature Notes," by Mr. Robert Patterson, F.L.S., is a series of chatty articles originally contributed to the Northern Whig and quite worthy of collection into this more permanent form, with a useful index and some good photographs by the writer. Mr. Patterson is a careful observer and describes pleasantly what he observes. There can never be too many books of this sort.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash.—"Stolen Sweets," by Mr. William Le Queux. A well constructed and vivaciously written novel. Mysterious murders, wrongful accusations, amateur detectives, fair but false foreigners, a villain who proves to be only a dupe—these, when complicated by the inevitable love interest, make up a very readable story certain of a welcome from the many admirers of this novelist.

From the Same.—"The Book of Witches," by Oliver Madox Hueffer. Witches are out of fashion to-day, and we rarely see one save in Christmas pantomime. Mr. Oliver Madox Hueffer is on friendly terms with several occult ladies, his experiences with whom he relates with considerable humour. His book, however, is too wordy to be useful either to the general reader or to the student of occultism. Mr. Hueffer has a good deal of information to impart, but it takes him a very long time to write it down. The patient reader, however, will be rewarded by many interesting chapters, notably "The Witch in Fiction," "The Witch of Antiquity," "Persecutions in Scotland," and "Philtres, Charms and Potions."

From the Same.—"Joseph: A Dancing Bear," by John Barnett. Joseph is a raconteur of great gifts. His sense of humour is particularly keen, and he is careful to behave in such a manner that he shall be the central figure of dramatic situations. He is led about the country by two blackguardly men who ill-treat him; he is compelled to dance and turn somersaults for a living, and he is ill-nourished and over-worked. Mr. Barnett's excellent literary style is reflected in the clever drawings of Mr. Leslie Brooke.

From The National Council of Evangelical Free Churches.—"A Winter in South Africa," by the Rev. F. B. Meyer. The veteran Nonconformist minister was sent out last year by the Free Church Council to co-ordinate the work of the non-Anglican communities of South Africa and to strengthen the ties between the Churches at home and those of the sub-Continent. How well he succeeded, and how much he saw, is pleasantly and modestly recorded in this volume. Dr. Meyer's impressions deserve consideration from an Imperial as well as from a religious point of view.

From The New Age Press.—"Leaders of Socialism," by G. R. S. Taylor: a short account of a dozen men, English and foreign, alive and dead, with whose lives and work the history of the Socialist movement is inseparably linked.

Mr. Taylor will not allow his heroes much credit or importance; they are to him only "the bigger corks in the Socialist stream." Still, they serve to show from time to time the rate and direction of the current, and therefore this clever appreciation of the methods, powers and limitations of conspicuous Socialists will be read with interest—with profit also, if it helps to remind us that, in the words of Mr. Taylor, "it is a grave problem to turn a virtuous principle into an accomplished fact."

New Edition.—"The Missionary Quarterly" is published by the Missionaries' Literature Association, 7, Albany Court Yard, Piccadilly, W. The Secretary and Founder is Mr. Wm. R Dover.

CANADA

The Land of Opportunity

Thousands of sturdy British emigrants go to the Dominion annually and settle there. To-day there is a large population in Canada interested in British books and periodicals and affording a splendid market for British publishers.

The only feasible way to preserve the interest of these people, in face of the competition of American publishers, is to have Canadian booksellers and newsagents show British books and periodicals on their counters and in their windows constantly and press the sale of them.

The best method of urging Canadian booksellers and newsagents to stock and sell British publications is to make use of the trade organ to which they subscribe regularly.

Information as to the Canadian Market will be gladly supplied by

Publishers' Circular

Sir Percy Bunting's February Number

SIR PERCY BUNTING has given us an excellent February Number of The Contemporary Review, including a twenty-four page "Literary Supplement," which is a very welcome feature.

Mr. Edmund Gosse on Poe

Seventeen pages of this Supplement are filled by reviews, and the rest by Mr. Edmund Gosse with an interesting appreciation of Poe as a poet. It is true he begins it with an affectation—i.e., that "In the announcements of the approaching celebration of the centenary of Poe in this country, the fact of his having been a poet is concealed." Mr. Gosse even goes so far as to say, "At all events, the statement that the revels on that occasion will be conducted by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is quite enough to prove that it is the prose writer of 'The Black Cat,' &c., who will be the centre of attention."

Mrs. Gallup told us Bacon was a concealed poet, but we never heard anyone call Poe one before—never before and nevermore. It is impossible to imagine anyone, even with not a fraction of the great critical and poetical endowments of Mr. Gosse, as thinking of Poe as anything but a poet first and prose writer after. To what particular announcement Mr. Gosse refers we do not know. Evidently the fact that Poe was a poet was not only not concealed, it was taken for granted. Although admirers of some of Poe's American contemporaries may not agree with Mr. Gosse's estimate of them, they will be pleased to follow Mr. Gosse as he fights a way for Poe to the very pinnacle of Parnassus.

The Cardinal Importance of Poe

"The cardinal importance, then, of Poe as a poet is that he restored to poetry a primitive faculty of which civilisation seemed successfully to have deprived her. He rejected the direct expression of positive things and he insisted upon mystery and symbol. He endeavoured to clothe unfathomable thoughts and shadowy images in melody that was like the wind wandering over the strings of an æolian harp. In other words, he was the pioneer of a school which has spread its influence to the confines of the civilised world, and is now revolutionising literature. He was the discoverer and founder of symbolism."

We do not pretend to know if Mr. Gosse is correct in all his estimate of Poe as a poet; but his very interesting essay confirms us in the view that great critics often confer far greater greatness on writers and their work than either can in reality claim. A lot of criticism is idle idol worship—subtle discoveries of inferences and motives that the author never dreamt of.

Old and New Books about Poe

American publishers are announcing new editions of and new works about Poe, and secondhand booksellers may lay the emphasis of big type on Poe in their catalogues, especially if they have any first editions. We could not help thinking when giving a list of possible centenary celebrations in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR last year that probably the secondhand booksellers got most good out of them—material good, that is—and that that was not overwhelming. Centenary editions seem to filter through into the secondhand book list quicker than any other and stop there longer.

France in English

In turning over the leaves of The Contemporary we notice Mr. John Lane's attractive advertisement in which he says, "Read the works of Anatole France in English." Mr. Lane has now published seven of them, and it would be interesting to see his publication ledger made up to December 31st last containing the account of each. The fact that Mr. Lane also announced an English translation of M. France's "Life of Joan of Arc" seems to imply that results are encouraging.

Ridiculous Text-Books for Indian Students

Publishers of text-books for our Indian Empire will be amused and perhaps instructed by an old Oxonian's article, "English Literature and the Indian Student," in The Contemporary Review. The writer, who signs himself "Tau," says "Every year the Universities prescribe a number of English text-books, many unsuitable, some positively harmful." He has been called upon to interpret Shelley and Keats to Mussulman and Hindu. He thinks, and most people will agree with him, that it is unnecessary to set Macaulay's attack on Warren Hastings as a lesson for our Native fellow-subjects, or to ask them to recite—

> "Let dusky Indians whine and kneel;
> An English lad must die."

How the Indian students murder Milton, one can easily understand. One specimen which "Tau" gives must have been startling. He had been recently appointed to an Indian educational institution, and had to listen to this from a young Brahmin:—

> "Hail, horrors! Hail
> Infernal World! And thou profoundest Hell
> Receive thy new Professor!"

Which rather leads one to conclude that our fellow-subject Indian students do not always assimilate so superficially as "Tau" imagines.

Referring to centenaries reminds us that another critic, Mr. Ernest Newman, has an essay in The Contemporary in connection with the Centenary of Mendelssohn's birth. It seems the world has been entirely wrong in its estimate of Mendelssohn, and before he has done with him Mr. Newman leaves the author of "Elijah" as naked almost as he was born (one hundred years ago) so far as musical honours are concerned. As Poe, according to Mr. Gosse, is the symbol of "unfathomable thoughts and shadowy images," so Mendelssohn, according to Mr. Newman, is "the symbol of all that is amiably weak in music."

Invasion of England?

But to come down from mysticism and music to solid facts, we can strongly advise all who are interested in that tremendous question—"Is Successful Invasion of England Possible?"—to read "Master Mariner's" article on the subject in the February Contemporary. We have long been waiting for someone with the knowledge of a master mariner—not an Ancient Mariner, but a modern up-to-date one—to tell us how Germany is going to invade England successfully.

He does not do that, but he does the other and much more satisfactory thing—he proves convincingly that for Germany to embark an army of 50,000 men with a due proportion of guns and cavalry and ammunition, to say nothing of fodder for men and horses, she would require to collect two hundred transports and fill them unknown to us; she would require six days at least from the first order to lay hands on all the merchant shipping in her ports in various stages of loading and unloading cargo until the invaders were in sight of our coast. Arrived off our coast, she would require to find suitable anchorage for three lines of ships, each line sixteen miles in length, or one line of fifty miles. She would require the absence practically of the entire British War Fleet and of every merchant vessel or steam trawler capable of dropping mines, as the Jap trade boats did; she would require the absence of our entire Regular and Territorial Army, say the absence of a quarter of a million men with guns and a love of their country; she would require favourable weather for landing 50,000 men, guns and horses in open boats. Having obtained all these requirements, she would march on London and require the submission of the British people—and she would most deservedly get it!

Notes and Announcements

MESSRS. SMITH, ELDER & Co. are publishing, from the pen of the Rev. W. Tuckwell, "Pre-Tractarian Oxford: a Reminiscence of the Oriel Noetics." The book will contain sketches of Provost Eveleigh, Copleston, Whately, Dr. Arnold, Hampden, Provost Hawkins, Baden Powell, Blanco White; the remarkable men, known at the time as "Noetics" or "Intellectuals," whose teaching, succeeded, controverted, and for a time eclipsed by the Newman movement, re-appeared in "Essays and Reviews," and in the higher criticism of to-day. The illustrations are from photographs by Mr. F. Hollyer of the original portraits in Oriel Hall and Common Room. The volume will appear on February 16th.

Mr. Robert Bridges has frequently been asked to edit a selection of the late Canon Dixon's poetry, but he has always hitherto refused—or had, rather, deferred—doing this pious office for his friend. Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish on the 16th inst., with a portrait, under the title "Poems by the late Rev. Dr. Richard Watson Dixon," a selection which is in every way what Mr. Robert Bridges approves, and which he has prefaced with an account of the poetry and a personal record of his friendship with the poet.

All who know Mr. Wm. C. Knight Clowes, head of the great printing house of Wm. Clowes & Sons, Ltd., will join us in an expression of sincere sympathy with him and his family in the sad loss they have sustained by the sudden death of Mr. Clowes's youngest son.

The play, "An Englishman's Home," which is drawing crowds to Wyndham's Theatre, has already aroused a great deal of practical interest in the "Territorials," and it is singularly appropriate, that simultaneously with the production of this epoch-making play, Mr. Murray should have issued a work by Mr. Harold Baker, entitled "The Territorial Force," which has the imprimatur of Mr. Haldane, and gives complete particulars of the establishment of the Citizen Army.

Mr. Murray will publish immediately "The Life of Sir Leopold McClintock," which his old midshipman and messmate, Sir Clements Markham has written. The book harks back to the days of the old windjammers, and treats of the expeditions to the Arctic, which McClintock led, that to the relief of Franklin being the most famous. The story of those great efforts, though national history, has never until now been adequately chronicled; but Sir Clements Markham, with the assistance of the family, has remedied the omission.

The third volume of the Cambridge History of English Literature, entitled "Renascence and Reformation", will be published by the Cambridge University Press on February 10th. Among the principal contents are chapters on "Reformation Literature in England," by the Rev. J. P. Whitney; "Reformation Literature in Scotland," by Dr. Hume Brown; "The Poetry of Spenser," by Dr. W. J. Courthope; "The Elizabethan Sonnet," by Dr. Sidney Lee; and "Chroniclers and Antiquaries," by Mr. Charles Whibley.

The Book Monthly for February is bright with interesting illustrations and articles. Mr. Milne has got many of the publishers to tell him what they think about the Winter Book Season. We are not surprised to find that over-production of books is the evil chiefly complained of. The Hon. L. J. Bathurst (Alston Rivers, Ltd.) thinks the public are "absolutely weary of the 'machine-made' novel," and Mr. Eveleigh Nash says the market "has been flooded with mechanical fiction and the public detected the grinding of the machine." There is no doubt much truth in this, some authors pour out books like hens lay eggs, only the hens do lay fresh eggs. Several publishers, who did not publish them, think that "The Letters of Queen Victoria" and "The Life of Mr. Gladstone" and Queen Alexandra's book account for much of the frost on other books this winter. As regards the busy booksellers, at any rate, in the case of the Queen's charming little album, we fear it was a case of sic vos non vobis to a great extent.

"We Germans and our British Cousins," a German business man's point of view of Anglo-German relations, by Hans Ziegler (author of "Hinaus in die Welt"), which has just been issued in Berlin by Mr. Wilhelm Suesserott, will be brought out next week in the United Kingdom on behalf of the German publisher by Christophers, in time for the King's visit to the Kaiser. The author knew nothing of the English language before he was twenty, but since then has had a world-wide experience of business affairs in Great Britain and her dependencies.

Mr. Heinemann has pleasure in announcing that a 3rd edition of the "Life of James McNeill Whistler," by Mr. and Mrs. Pennell, is now in the press, and will be published this month.

At this time when the Servian question is uppermost in European politics, Mr. Alfred Stead, the Roumanian Consul-General in London, has arranged with Mr. Heinemann for the publication of "the most authoritative and interesting work" which has ever been produced about that country. Mr. Stead has secured the co-operation of the highest Servian authorities in every branch of national development in the preparation of this book, which will enable the world to understand the forces moving the Servian race, and the national exigencies which make political action necessary. The book will be called "Servia by the Servians."

The March Bookman will be a Fitz-Gerald Centenary Number, and will contain a special illustrated article on Edward FitzGerald by Arthur C. Benson. Also an important article on "Lord Rosebery as a Man of Letters," by Hector Macpherson; a "Bookman Gallery" article on John Masefield, by Ashley Gibson; and a second American Letter.

Messrs. Nelson have added J. Meade Falkner's capital story "Moonfleet" to their "Nelson's 7d. Library." As a medium for conveying a story from author to reader we think Messrs. Nelson's little series difficult to beat.

Readers who yearn to be "plunged into an atmosphere of black mystery" should look out for "Links in the Chain," by Headon Hill, to be published by Mr. John Long. In addition to the black mystery, we understand the "reader's sensations are kept on the qui vive through a quick succession of incidents at once perplexing and disturbing."

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will publish immediately a new volume of short stories, entitled "Green Ginger," by Mr. Arthur Morrison. Unlike his well-known "Tales of Mean Streets" the present collection consists entirely of humorous stories.

Messrs. Bell will publish on the 10th inst. a thoroughly revised translation of Ranke's "History of the Latin and Teutonic Nations" (1494–1514), which Lorentz described as one of Ranke's "most original and instructive contributions to history." Mr. G. R. Dennis, whose new edition of the same writer's "History of the Popes" was published last year, is responsible for the revision, and the volume will contain an Introduction by Mr. Edward Armstrong, Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford.

For inclusion in their "Queen's Treasures Series," Messrs. Bell announce a new edition of Mrs. Ewing's "Jan of the Windmill," which will be published at the end of the month. It will contain 8 coloured illustrations by M. V. Wheelhouse, who has been so successful with "Six to Sixteen" and "A Flat Iron for a Farthing." Miss Wheelhouse will also contribute a special title-page, covers, and end papers.

Mr. John Long says of his new novel, entitled "The Fault," by C. T. Podmore (to be published soon) :—"Intense human interest is the keynote of this story, in which the passions of two men are so deftly woven round the centre figure of Hester Lane that the reader is given no pause until the final page is reached. It is a remarkable and highly dramatic story, by which Mr. Podmore will assuredly make his mark."

Messrs. Rivington will publish next week a new volume in their series of "Oxford Church Text Books," entitled "An Introduction to the Literature of the Old Testament," by the Rev. G. H. Box, M.A. (Vicar of Linton, Ross), formerly Hebrew Master at Merchant Taylors School. This book deals with the Hexateuch; the Historical Books; the Prophetic Literature; the Poetical and Didactic Books; the Book of Daniel.

Messrs. Rivington also announce for early publication two new volumes of "Rivingtons' Direct Method Elementary German Texts," edited by D. L. Savory, M.A., Lecturer in the University of London, Goldsmiths' College; formerly Assistant-Master at Marlborough College. This new series of Elementary German Texts consists of stories complete in themselves, selected from the best modern authors. Each volume contains suitable illustrations, supplying valuable material for conversational practice. "Der Dachs auf Lichtmess," by W. H. Riehl. "John Wells," by Friedrich Gerstäcker.

"The Scoop of the Vulture" (Digby, Long & Co.) is a very clever and realistic account of how the Germans in the absence of the entire British Fleet landed 80,000 men on the Norfolk Coast, and the terrible fate which awaited them when the British Fleet did come up. Mr. James Blyth appears to have fought against the Germans in the Franco-German War, and he hates them like poison. Yet even he drops a tear over the terrible havoc made of the German Army by the English Army and Navy. Even the German Emperor can do nothing (he comes over in a submarine), and while he is away the French take Berlin, and the clock of Germany is set back a hundred years. Mr. Blyth's characters move as fast as those in a cinematograph show, but you must follow them. He ought to read the Contemporary Review's article referred to in our first article.

Readers who have enjoyed the stories of the author of "A Lame Dog's Diary" and "The Fortunes of Christina Macnab" will be glad to know that Miss Macnaughtan has written the reminiscences of her girlhood for The Girl's Realm. These stories of the life of a large family of interesting children, brought up in Scotland, show the same humour and keen observation and a power of drawing scenes of unaffected pathos which mark this writer's work. The reminiscences start in the current number of the magazine, and will continue to the end of the volume.

"Among the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Frontier," by Dr. T L. Pennell, will very shortly be issued by Messrs. Seeley & Co. The author has for sixteen years lived in the closest intimacy with the Afghan tribes, and knows their character thoroughly. His life was in danger several times, but his medical qualification, backed by his tact and courage, saved him in many a critical situation. The book is profusely illustrated with photographs illustrating many phases of native life.

On Tuesday Mr. John Lane will publish "The Journal of John Mayne during a Tour on the Continent upon its re-opening after the Fall of Napoleon, 1814," edited by his grandson, John Mayne Colles; with 16 illustrations, and "The Measure of our Youth: a Novel," by Alice Herbert. Mr. Lane describes this as "A brilliant novel of modern life, by a new author. Its leading interest is the eternal one of sex; but the treatment is particularly fresh and fearless, and there is a sense of humour and of style that will please the fastidious. The realism of the writing will be forgiven for the sake of the delicate and poetic vein of thought that underlies the story, which is full of interest for the psychologist."

We would suggest to Mr. Brockhaus, of Leipzig, that his printer does not do him a good service by omitting to print the title and date of "Brockhaus' Catalogue of Selected Works of Foreign Literature" on the back of it. It is necessary to write it on in ink, or else the catalogue is lost when put on a shelf, with scores of similar works of reference. The list includes selected works in all the principal European languages.

Aspasia, the heroine of one of Mr. Heinemann's most recent novels, is the most extraordinary mixture of the world, the flesh, and the devil that we have met with even in fiction. She is quite young, but so saturated in the literature of ancient Greece and Rome that she is able to solve questions which puzzle the most erudite of professors. After leading one of them a maddening dance she marries another twice as old. Mr. Laurence North has evidently taken great pains with "Syrinx"—and gives his readers much light amusement.

The Yachting and Boating Monthly for February contains, among other articles:—The Resistance and Speed of Motor Boats; The Sea Fisherman; Congers and Conger-Catching; How to Build the Knoxpotz, a simple Hydroplane; Light Motors for Hydroplanes; a 25-ton Cruiser Design; and a short illustrated article on Sailing on Skates. These, as well as a complete story "The Mate of the Ulv," by J. J. Bell, make up a very interesting number; it is admirably produced by Mr. Horace Cox, of The Field, which paper easily holds the field as the great general paper on British field sports, &c.

"Grape Culture Up-to-date" is the title of a new illustrated work by Mr. A. Kirk, which has just been published by Messrs. Pawson & Brailsford of Sheffield; we hope to refer to it on another page.

Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. announce a sensational novel entitled "Banzai," which has had an amazing popularity in Germany, where over 300,000 copies have been sold. The author, who writes under the pseudonym of "Parabellum," is said to be a German official of high rank, and the book gives an account of the great war which is to take place between the United States and Japan. According to the author's forecast the American forces are defeated by Japan, but the German Jingo is pleased with the conclusion that his country intervenes on behalf of the United States. The author displays considerable knowledge of modern naval and military armaments. The same house will shortly publish a new novel by Tom Gallon, entitled "The Dream and the Woman," in which the central character is a woman who, walking in her sleep, sets out to kill the man who has done much to ruin her happiness. "The interest is sustained by a crowd of various characters in many walks of life. The author has seldom painted on so large a canvas."

THE publication of the "Live Stock Journal Almanac" is always looked forward to by breeders and exhibitors of live stock at home and abroad with interest, as within its covers will be found careful reviews of the progress of the various breeds, many articles on subjects of a more general character bearing on the industry, and illustrations of leading prize-winners at the principal shows. The Almanac for 1909, which has just been issued, and extends to 340 pages, preserves all these features, and is full of valuable information.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

All Booksellers should read the Bookseller's Love Story

A Soul's Awakening

By

W. TEIGNMOUTH SHORE,

Author of "Egomet," and late Editor of "The Academy."

THE TIMES says :—"We see the old bookseller, an exquisitely sketched character, polishing his spectacles and nervously stroking his chin ; we can hear him clearing his throat and hesitating before some gentle humorous little speech. Mr. Teignmouth Shore has captured our sympathy for his characters in an unusual degree."

Edinburgh Book Notes

By "EDINA"

"A CITY set on a hill cannot be hid." This being Nature's gift to Edinburgh, the sense of contrast, which is the foundation of all art, is conspicuous in her people. We are a people to be looked at. We possess in strong measure the principles of positive art—Light, Body, and Form ; and we have a plentiful supply of the restraining and absorbing element, called atmosphere, to temper all things. Did you ever realise that this is the secret of all art, whether expressed in sound, vision, or imagination ?

If we enter the studio of an artist and observe him at work, whether a canvas stand on the easel or a Bristol board lie on the table, we will find him busy analysing, focussing and harnessing these elemental forces on the work he has in hand. The old masters said : "Art is long" ; but in these days it is not the length, but the breadth of the road that puzzles the artist. There are so many ruts, and deep ruts make heavy travel. They make the gait unsteady.

I am dealing with that phase of art which is of interest to the bookseller. I think that publishers have often to thank the good commonsense of the artist that absolute failures in book-illustration are so infrequent. We anathematise the speculative builder who would venture to lease a piece of ground and start building houses for an imaginary population upon it ; yet we are often exhibitors of work worthy of a like malediction. The first thing a builder does is to consult a competent architect and get plans, which he rigidly adheres to. But how often does the tyro in publishing think it necessary to make a confidant of a competent artist in respect to his ventures ? If things turn out bad, the artist is to blame, even if he has executed his commission to the letter. This is hard on the artist. I know artists are eccentric, uncommercial, Bohemian, and all that sort of thing, but they have some commonsense, which is always at a publisher's service, if asked for in the right way and at the start.

Fancy yourself taking train for anywhere, and nowhere in particular ? This is analogous to asking an artist to do illustrations without telling him what you are going to do with them. He must know whether you are to print them with the text, or apart from it, for the rut he will follow depends on that information.

Why do we illustrate books ? To make them saleable at six shillings instead of one ? Or do we illustrate them because they need it ?

Only yesterday I received a book which illustrates what I have to say. It is called "Lacis," by Carita. Now this book might have been served up as a half-crown handbook on Network-Lace, but its value has been a hundredfold increased by the correct manner in which it has been illustrated. For half-a-guinea the purchaser is getting what could not have been explained in a dozen half-crown treatises. The illustrations are not beauty-spots in a desert of type but wells of inspiration ; they are needed for the proper understanding of the text. This is what all book-illustration ought to be.

In choosing an artist do not run away with the idea that the man you want should be able to do anything from a pen-scratch to a finished oil. The man you want may be an all-round good man, but he is a man with an idea to suggest, a definite aim in a vigorous medium to offer you. That man is worth sticking to. There is grit in him.

It beats me to know why we have cast aside so unceremoniously the common lead pencil in favour of less facile mediums in these days. As a medium of expression it has no equals and fewer superiors. J. M. W. Turner, that great master of colour in Nature, could express more in five minutes with his pencil than he could do in as many weeks with his brush. "Phiz" would have laboured uselessly, however long, to express those characters and incidents which have revealed so intensely the mind of Charles Dickens, had he left behind his facile companion. Even Sam Bough could catch and note the fleecy cloud crossing the sky on the back of a Bank pay-in slip rested on the crown of his hat. For piquancy, for lucidity, for atmospheric intensity from the deepest shadow to the highest tinge of light, the lead pencil can express lustre and detail as no other medium can. And it has the great advantage that it is so facile that the thought of the artist is never gloved or trammelled. I have seen Miss H. C. Preston Macgoun with a few deft touches of her pencil convey a delicate touch of feeling, and put more humanity into those children's faces she so delights to portray, than the most delicately tinted water-colour from her hand could express. The lesson I learned is that in proportion to the amount of thought which has to be bestowed by the artist on the process of expression we lose in value of artistic imagery. This is an important thing for us to remember, for there is a tendency abroad to deprave our taste in book-illustration by over-elaboration. Photography is blamed for this new departure in the art, but surely a photograph is only what the man behind the camera saw—a record of a moment of time and place. It expresses no abiding thought—no eternal action.

It is this realism of perpetual motion that makes the artist great. This subduing of a momentary impulse to continuous vitality that raises the commonplace to the sublime, or turns idiosyncrasy into character. This is why a photograph, however good, however much faked, or any drawing from a photograph, can never appeal as the original sketch of an artist will. It can only at most be a record of the tangible ; the artist imagines the unseen and eternal.

These are the problems our Edinburgh artists are handling every day ; and the means of solving them are becoming easier because of the fraternal spirit they cultivate among themselves. The day was when Mr. Beattie Brown could not be expected to give a hint to Mr. Alexander as to the composition of his picture, when the friendly satire of Mr. Rose would not be tolerated by Mr. Campbell Noble ; but these days are past, and now the one is proud of showing his work and accepting the blunt and honest criticism of the other. On varnishing day at the Royal Academy we may see Mr. Charles Mackie suggesting a last touch to Mr. W. D. McKay, or Mr. Lorimer helping Mr. Martin Hardie to subdue the tones of his picture. Rivalry is as keen of edge as ever, but it is the rivalry of brothers. When all is over the Scottish Arts Club resounds with the joviality of "Hail Fellow Well Met." Artists whose work is grounded on the lasting principles which Edinburgh from its situation and associations inspires, are going forth to the world prepared to face manfully the problems of life; and so long as they remain true to the traditions of their grey romantic foster-mother they will be ready to acquit themselves like men in whatever medium they are called upon to give expression to their artistic imagery.

Everyman's Library

"EVERYMAN'S LIBRARY," it was supposed, had no autumn issue last year because its list of authors was running dry. But the delay, it seems, was only one of convenience to the booksellers and the publishers—to lighten the difficult business of warehousing and distributing so large a stock. The new list of the series just announced by the publishers, Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co., shows a notable selection of the books that every man who reads must have, mixed with those he would like to have for holiday reasons. This "Fifty" completes the Hakluyt set with two last volumes—a unique set for a popular series. Then a first volume of Aristophanes carries on the Greek dramatists, and one of Marlowe the English. Another volume, specially fitted to this series, is that containing the old morality-plays, with five miracle plays and Bale's "God's Promises," all in a form intelligible to the ordinary playgoer without any knowledge of middle English or of Tudor dialects. In poetry we have Milton and Longfellow. In the Religious Section appear "The Koran"—Rodwell's fine version, far and away better than Sales', with the Rev. G. Margoliouth's introduction and Swedenborg's "Heaven and Hell." In Romance, "Don Quixote," Motteux's translation, with Lockhart's introduction. Among the novels, Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" and Charlotte Brontë's "Vilette," with introduction by Miss Sinclair (author of "The Divine Fire"); Anthony Trollope's "Cycle of Barsetshire Novels," too, is completed with "Dr. Thorne," "The Small House at Allington" and "The Last Chronicles of Barsetshire." The recent hot discussion of William Morris lends a fresh interest to Charlotte Yonge's "Heir of Redclyffe," for which Mrs. Alice Meynell has written a special preface. Fielding's "Tom Jones," Fanny Burney's "Evelina" (which Dr. Johnson thought better than "Tom Jones"), Balzac's "Cat and Racket," and R. D. Blackmore's "Springhaven" (another Nelson novel) fill up the fiction. In History, Froude's "Henry VIII. and Edward VI." provide four volumes, to which Mr. W. Llewelyn Williams, M.P., B.C.L., contributes an appreciation. Young readers are provided with another Captain Marryat book—his "Settlers in Canada"—some of Jules Verne, and his best is "The Mysterious Island" (three volumes). "Uncle Tom's Cabin," too, re-appears. Was it not George Sand who said Mrs. Beecher Stowe had "the genius that humanity needs most, the genius of goodness"? On the literary side the list offers one of the most remarkable of the 19th century critics, Gilfillan, to whose "Literary Portraits" the Rev. W. Robertson Nicoll has now prefaced the first succinct account we have of the "Spasmodic School," of which Alexander Smith was the leader. The "Letters of Elia," in two volumes, is, or ought to be, a classic, like his essays; and for another vein of humour, for another prose-master, we have Swift's "Tale of a Tub," with a preamble by Mr. Lewis Melville, who is making a study of the 18th century. Even now two or three books have been overlooked—Cicero's Offices and Miscellanies, with a note on his character by De Quincey, and two history books—Dean Milman's "History of the Jews" (two volumes) and Macchiavelli's "History of Florence."

Book Trade Notes from Sheffield

BY THE DON

BOOKSELLERS in this district report a marked falling off in their Christmas sales, and the year has opened unsatisfactorily. This state of things is due to the reduced spending power of the people. Dividends from most investments are down, and the local industries yielded but little profit last year, and consequently there is a general tendency to cut down expenditure on luxuries. Unfortunately, in Sheffield, reading is regarded by the majority purely as a luxury, and literature has had to suffer. Some high-class works were purchased for Christmas presents by well-to-do people whose habits of life are not affected by trade fluctuations, but these form but a small proportion of the whole.

The book trade is unanimous in the opinion that motoring is responsible for much of the falling off in sales. Those who indulge in motoring cannot have much time for reading, and they belong to a class which largely patronised the more expensive novels and travel books.

The fact has long been notorious that Sheffield is one of the least satisfactory towns of its size in the country—from the bookseller's point of view. Taken as a whole, the people are extremely materialistic, and the patronage of literature or any other branch of art is most meagre. Sixpenny editions at discount rates sell by the thousand, but there is little call for good and the more expensive productions of the publisher. The next few years should see an improvement in this respect, as the establishment of a University in the city, with its staff of professors and teachers and the importation of numerous students, ought to have the effect of modifying the prevailing materialism. Already there are signs that the new scholarly element in the city is exerting a beneficial influence upon the minds and tastes of the population, but progress must necessarily be slow. The next generation should be free from the reproach referred to above.

Books on Old Sheffield Plate have followed one another rather rapidly of late, but we still await one which emanates from the city where the ware in question was invented and manufactured. Such a work is now in preparation, the author being Mr. Frederick Bradbury, himself a silversmith, and who is thoroughly conversant with the technical side of plate manufacture, an experienced collector, and a member of a firm which has actually made the now extinct material. We learn that by no means the last word on Old Sheffield Plate has been said, and also that many inaccuracies and errors, gathered from tradition, run through all the existing works. Mr. Bradbury's book promises to practically exhaust the subject from every point of view, and it should be welcomed by collectors of Old Sheffield Plate.

The doings of the local circulating libraries are always watched with interest by provincial booksellers. The latest "move" by Boots (Ltd.) may have a beneficial effect upon the trade. The firm have discontinued the practice of lending books for a charge of 2d. per week on the deposit of 2s. 6d., and have also increased their annual subscription for the loan of a single book from 10s. 6d. to 15s. This is an inauspicious moment to raise the prices of any commodity, and the proposal is sure to cause resentment among local readers.

Royal Daughters of England

MESSRS. ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & Co. will publish an important work, "The Royal Daughters of England," now in the hands of the printers (Messrs. Cross & Jackman, of Canterbury). It has taken the author, Henry Murray Lane (His Majesty's Chester Herald of Arms), upwards of forty years to complete. The exceptional advantage possessed by the author of having access to the well-known Library of the College of Arms in London has not a little contributed to the result. The work, which is to be in two large 4to. volumes, is an historical and genealogical compendium of the public and private history of most of the Royal and illustrious families of Europe for over 800 years.

The work will be divided into two parts. Part I. will contain memoirs of one hundred and seventy-seven princesses, commencing with the daughters of William the Conqueror, and will include seven genealogical tables of the Royal Family of England: The Houses of Normandy and Blois; Plantagenet and Mortimer; Tudor; Stuart; the descendants of King Charles I., excluded by Act of Parliament; certain descendants of King James I., also excluded by Act of Parliament; and the House d'Este, known as that of Guelph or Brunswick. There will be forty-eight pedigrees of those Royal Daughters of England whose descendants, now living, are not given in the genealogical tables. In Part II. will be given memoirs of the living princesses of England and others, descended from Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, the Princess Louis of Bavaria, and her daughters in direct descent from King Charles I.; and an appendix, which will contain fifteen pedigrees showing when the issue of certain princesses became extinct.

The issue is limited to 250 copies, after the printing of which the type will be distributed.

II

In a recent article (Publishers' Circular, January 9th) attention was directed to a few simple rules to guide those whose duty it is to catalogue second-hand books for sale. It is proposed in the present article to consider the style of the catalogue and the preparation of the copy for the printer. Experience proves that an attractive catalogue carefully printed will not appeal in vain to the bookbuyer.

Nowadays, one is pleased to observe that nearly all catalogues are of the size demy 8vo., about 8¾ by 5½. This is as it should be, and if those booksellers whose custom it is to issue their catalogues in a larger or smaller size would observe this rule complete uniformity would be attained. Most bookbuyers preserve their secondhand catalogues, and bind them from time to time, thereby securing a bibliographical record of all books that have come into the market during the period covered by their catalogues. In this connection, there are in the market at the present time many mechanical devices which can be utilised for preserving catalogues, and it is advisable that these should be taken advantage of. If these secondhand catalogues are carefully indexed they will be of the utmost service to the cataloguer, in so far as he will be able to determine the value and give a correct description of any scare book that may come into his hands.

The demy 8vo. catalogue size is handy because it admits of pages set in two columns, provided the type is not too large, and of valuable books being assigned great prominence by being set in double column measure—the lines extending across the page. The paper used for the majority of catalogues is as flimsy and poor as it was when most kinds of paper were four times as dear. A little extra expenditure to secure better paper would well repay the bookseller. Country booksellers frequently use better paper than London booksellers, but perhaps the reason is that they print their own catalogues. Although white paper is best for the catalogues the cover might have a different colour, and indeed be varied with advantage.

While considering the general style of the catalogue, attention may be directed to the judicious use of type. In regard to this point, booksellers are not very liberal. Some will use romans and italics as persistently as if no other type existed, while others will rigidly adhere to "clarendon." The average printer stocks many other "faces" specially suitable for catalogues, but whatever "face" is chosen it should harmonise with the roman. The type, however, should not be such as to become ambiguous; thus in many founts the C and the G are very much alike, and liable to be mistaken the one for the other. When describing black letter books it is appropriate to use black or Gothic letters.

When the style of the catalogue and the rules for its compilation have been settled attention will naturally be turned to the preparation of the copy for the printer. In considering this matter it should be borne in mind that there are no "short cuts" in catalogue making. The only safe and expeditious plan is to carefully write out each title. Some booksellers use up old envelopes and the blank leaves of letters or circulars for economy's sake. But this is false economy, as the printer's bill for corrections will testify. It will be found cheaper in the end to use good paper specially cut to the right size. Or, better still, get a supply of paper, 9 in. wide by 12 in. long, and have it perforated so that each sheet is divided into 12 slips 9 by 1. When the entries have been written, these slips will be detached at the perforation, and be ready for alphabetical arrangement. Whatever plan is adopted the bookseller must get his catalogue slips uniform in size, as any deviation from this rule will lead to enormous trouble, and no end of mistakes.

Having the titles all written out, the lot of slips should be got into a pile, all the same side up, of course, and then may be sorted out. This requires a good deal of patience. It will be found that the larger the number of slips the more labour is obviously involved; indeed the trouble increases in arithmetical proportion. To alphabetically arrange these slips is a work of considerable importance, and the best plan is first to arrange all the slips according to the first letter of the first word, not an article, in the entry. Thereafter each letter should be dealt with separately, and in the same manner, sorting out according to the second, third or fourth letter.

When the lot has been entirely arranged, the slips should be pasted down on paper to form the copy for the printer. Any kind of paper will serve this purpose. Old newspapers will be found as economical as any, or cheap wrapping paper is very serviceable, provided it is thin. In pasting, one slip may overlap another as long as the entry remains clear, and in this way the sheets of copy may be made to hold as much matter as possible. There are many pastes made by different makers which are excellent for this purpose, and it is advisable to use one of these. Gum should be avoided—it is dirty and troublesome in many ways.

The copy is now ready for the printer, and may be sent either in whole or in part according to arrangement, but experience proves that a considerable amount of time will be saved if each letter is despatched immediately it is ready. All corrections and additions should be made when the copy is in galley-proof, as very often extra expense is incurred when the printer has to make alterations in the page-proof.

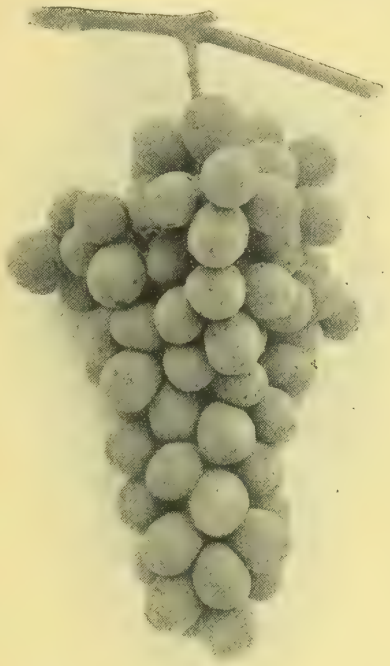
The Scots Army 1661-1688*



A book about the Scots Army and its Commanders during the years 1661–1688 ought, if well done, to be full of interest, and since the editor and compiler is Mr. Charles Dalton we feel sure there need be no fear on that point.

Part I. contains, in addition to the Introduction, Memoirs of the Scottish Commanders-in-Chief (1661–1688), with historical records of the military operations in which these Generals were respectively engaged from 1638–1691. Many new and interesting facts have been unearthed regarding the careers of some of the aforesaid Scottish leaders. Part II. is an annotated and chronologically arranged Scottish Army List from 1661–1688. The officers appointed to the new-raised levies, during the early years of the Restoration, were mostly veterans who had served in the Civil Wars of Charles I. Some had fought with Montrose, while others had served against him. In this same little army were to be found "Engagers" who had marched into Lancashire under the Duke of Hamilton, and had suffered defeat by Cromwell. There were also not a few devoted Royalists who had fought at Dunbar and Worcester. Nor must we omit those tried soldiers who had shared in the hardships of Lord Glencairn's Expedition, and in General Middleton's defeat at Loch Garry. Lastly, there were representatives in Charles II.'s Scots Army of some of the oldest and noblest families north of the Tweed, who had served with the Scots Brigade in Holland and with the old Scots Regiment (the present Royal Scots) in France.

Grape Culture Up-to-date

Messrs. Pawson & Brailsford, the well-known booksellers and publishers of Sheffield, have just brought out, at 7s. 6d. net, a very well illustrated and practical work on Grape Culture. It is written by Mr. Alexander Kirk—"Kirk of Norwood, Alloa," as he is known among grape experts—who probably holds the record for years back, and at the present time the most successful practical grape grower and exhibitor combined in the British Islands, and that record may be found in all the principal horticultural journals, while the vineries at Norwood are a place of pilgrimage for enthusiastic grape growers. His book describes in the most minute way how his success has been accomplished, and the faithful portraits in his book of the best kinds of grapes for table, market, or exhibition, and illustrations of all the various operations connected with grape culture are by far the most numerous and instructive that have yet appeared in any book of the kind.

A Pathan's Impressions of Calcutta

In Blackwood for February there is a very amusing article by "Grangatili," in which he describes how his Pathan servant, Gul Hassan, stood up for him in Calcutta. Hassan could not stand the ways of the Bengali shop-people at all, and when one of them asked his master fifty rupees for some garments Hassan's master says:—

"I informed Gul Hassan of the price, and asked him to pay the Bengali connoisseur. Not knowing English, he had not, like myself, benefited by the allusion to 'Band Eshtreet' (the little Bengali tradesman said the garments were the latest Bond Street fashion), so, glowering at the shopman, he said, 'Fifty rupees! What for?' A vivid scene followed. Fortunately Gul Hassan's fervour could not express itself in Hindostani, and found vent in scarifying Pushtu, which no one understood. For several minutes 'he raved like a soul in Jehannum,' and declared that nothing would permit him to stand idly (!) by and see his sahib robbed by a particular species of extraordinarily misbegotten offspring of burnt ancestors. Eventually I had to give him a peremptory order for payment, and the soldier in him obeyed. But the natural man was unconvinced: having carefully counted out fifty rupees in silver, with great deliberation he hurled them in a glittering shower about the little Bengali's ears."

A British Officer in the Balkans*

"In these days of travel, when people think little of a week or even a fortnight spent in search of scenery, sport, or climate, it seems strange that so lovely and interesting a corner of Europe as the Western Balkans should be so little visited and known." Thus the author, Major Percy E. Henderson, prefaces his most interesting volume, and after reading it one must admit the justice of the remark. The journey made by Major Henderson, his wife and some friends was through Dalmatia, Montenegro, Turkey in Austria, Magyarland, Bosnia, and Herzegovina, and fortunately, Mrs. Henderson, being an expert with the camera, was able to considerably enhance the value of her husband's work by taking excellent photographs of many of the places visited, the inhabitants of the various States, and other interesting and amusing sights. There are 50 of these illustrations, including a good portrait of the Major on horseback.

So much is heard nowadays of petty squabbles and fights in the Balkan States, that it is reassuring to note that of Montenegro Major Henderson writes: " . . . the fact does not seem to be generally recognised in England that Montenegro is as safe a country in which to travel as any in Europe," and judging from the experiences of these travellers much the same may be said of the other States.

Interesting details are given of the customs, habits, religions, pleasures, industries, and so on, of the peoples living in these lands—the Mussulmans, Turks "Amerikanski," Montenegrins, Herzegovinians, Bosnians, &c.; but we have space here to remark upon a few only. Referring to the prostrations and genuflexions decreed by Mahomet as indispensable during worship by the True Believers, Major Henderson says: "Mahomet knew what he was about, as going through these exercises five times a day must constitute a very fair gymnastic exercise, and would doubtless account for the cleaner and smarter look Mahommedans have than the majority of Christians."

A curious fact is that in Bosnia amongst the Mahommedans courting takes place on Friday afternoons, and only on that occasion are the men permitted to converse with their intended brides; also there are far more men than women in Bosnia, and such a thing as an elderly unmarried Turkish woman is probably unknown. The Turkish women of Herzegovina are wofully ignorant, not even being taught to read or write, and a Turk's defence when remonstrated with upon this was characteristic: "Let my wife learn to read and write," he observed coldly. "For what? That she may write love-letters to other men, or receive them!"

Bargaining is done in this manner—the strong man evidently getting the best of it. Seller and purchaser clasp hands, lift the clasped hands high and swing them down with a wrench, the seller naming the price he will take and the purchaser what he will give. This continues, the prices alternately named drawing closer together, until one or other succeeds in wrenching his hands free, the price last named being the one that rules the deal!

The author gravely states that Turkish babies never seem to cry, and informs us that Pesth, the Hungarain capital, possesses a "swear-place"—we will leave our readers to find out what this is. Justice cannot be done to a work of this description in the space at our disposal.

Major Henderson writes in so clear and entertaining a style, and his observation of detail is so good that the book is well worth reading.

The British Tar in Fact and Fiction

Messrs. Harper & Brothers have in the press and will issue shortly a nautical garland in prose and poetry by Commander Charles N. Robinson, R.N., and Mr. John Leyland, the title of which is "The British Tar in Fact and Fiction: the Poetry, Pathos and Humour of the Sailor's Life, with a Study of the Place of the Sea Officer and Seaman in Naval History." In this volume, which is in its way a companion to Commander Robinson's "The British Fleet," the seamen and sea life have been dealt with in a novel manner, and the variety of the sources from which the authors have drawn their anecdotal illustrations of nautical character will be a revelation to many of the influence which the sea-calling has had upon our literature, and the wide extent to which the exciting adventures, stirring deeds and complex personality of our seamen have inspired the poets, painters, dramatists and historians. The book will be illustrated with a large number of reproductions, including a frontispiece in colour, of old prints, engravings and woodcuts depicting the sailor afloat and ashore.

Women of all Nations

The second and concluding volume of "Women of All Nations" (Cassell) has just been published. These two volumes give a comprehensive account of the characteristics, habits, manners, customs, and influence of women in all parts of the world. The work is profusely illustrated with reproductions of photographs taken from life, and a series of plates in colours expressly executed for the work by Mr. Norman Hardy.

Collins' Clear-Type Press announce the following forthcoming books in their well-known Sevenpenny Library:—"Genevra," Charles Marriott; "Windyhaugh," Graham Travers; "The Locum Tenens," Victor Whitechurch; "A Princess of Thule," William Black; "Daireen," Frankfort Moore; "A Blind Bird's Nest," Mary Findlater; "A Waif of the Plains," Bret Harte; "Terence," B. M. Croker; "The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton," William Black.

The Booksellers' Provident Institution

The monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the above Institution was held at 56, Old Bailey, E.C., on Thursday, January 21st. The members of the Board present included: C. J. Longman, Esq., in the chair; Joseph Shaylor, Esq., Vice-President; Messrs. A. T. Aldridge (Taylor & Co.), C. A. Ashley (Wells Gardner, Darton & Co., Ltd.), H. E. Barton (Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.), W. Bartram (Longmans, Green & Co.), J. R. Blade (Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.), W. H. Bull (Marshall Bros., Ltd.), J. Clark, J. Cooper (W. & R. Chambers, Ltd.), J. Foster (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.) C. H. Hollingsworth (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), F. J. James, W. H. Jelpki (Longmans, Green & Co.), G. H. Johnson (Reeves & Turner, Ltd.), W. A. Kelk (Longmans, Green & Co., Ltd.), F. H. Lamb (Willing & Co., Ltd.), C. T. Langford (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), Wm. McLaughlin (Times Book Club), W. G. Reynolds (Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.), F. J. Rymer (Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.), E. Shallis (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), J. E. Stronlger (Rivington's), C. W. Whitaker (Whitaker & Sons, Ltd.), and the Secretary, Mr. George Larner.

A sum of £115 was voted for the relief of members and widows of members.

Mr. A. T. Scott was elected a member of the Institution, and two fresh applications for membership were received.

The Secretary reported the receipt of the following donations: Printers' Pie, 1908 (per W. H. Spottiswoode, Esq.), £26 5s.; Messrs. Stevens & Son, £2 2s.; Messrs. Wells Gardner & Co., Ltd., £2 2s.; Herbert Batsford, Esq., £2 2s.; Messrs. B. T. Batsford, £2 2s.; H. C. Sotheran, Esq., £1 1s.; Messrs. Kelly's Directories, £1 1s.; W. B. Clive, Esq., £1 1s.; Messrs. Rivière & Son, Ltd., £1 1s.; and Messrs. Everett & Co., 10s.

The policy to be adopted by the Board in regard to such of their members as were in receipt of relief and who were also eligible for an Old Age Pension was considered. Three specific cases were brought before the board who refused to consider any reduction of the grants made by them in these cases, and were in fact only too thankful that the declining years of their old pensioners should be brightened by means of the great benefit the Government allowance of five shillings per week will afford them. On the matter being put to the vote it was decided by a large majority to continue these three widows, whose ages are 75, 76 and 83 respectively, in the enjoyment of the same grant as hitherto.

Messrs. George Philip & Son, Ltd.—Retirement of Mr. Joseph Collyer

Mr. Joseph Collyer, the well-known and highly-respected Director of Messrs. George Philip & Son, Ltd., has retired from active participation in business after completing a period of 51 years' work with the house of Philip. He, however, still remains a Director. He was last week entertained at dinner at the Duke's Salon, Holborn Restaurant by his colleagues on the Directorate of Messrs. George Philip & Son, Ltd., and the heads of the various departments of the business were invited to meet him. Mr. George Philip, the Chairman, in proposing "The Guest of the Evening," spoke in most cordial and appreciative terms of the great services rendered by Mr. Collyer to the business, and presented him with a pocket-book, the gift of the Company, and containing a cheque. Mr. Stanley Philip, the Managing Director at Fleet Street, supported the toast, and spoke most warmly of 25 years' intimate and pleasant association with Mr. Collyer at Fleet Street, and presented a silver rose bowl, the personal gift of himself and Mr. George Philip. Mr. Louis E. Fawcus (a Director) associated himself with the remarks of his colleagues and begged Mr. Collyer to accept a pair of silver candlesticks. Mr. J. G. Parvin, on behalf of the staff at Willesden and Fleet Street and the Town and Country Travellers' testified to the great affection with which Mr. Collyer had always been regarded by the staff, on whose behalf he tendered a very handsome Chippendale clock. Mr. Collyer, in replying, spoke of his 51 years' connection with the house under the headship of three "George Philips" in succession, and gave an interesting account of the developments of the business, and more especially of the Fleet Street branch, which was opened in 1862, to take charge of which he came from the original home of the firm at Liverpool. The proceedings were enlivened by a selection of vocal and instrumental music given by the Valhalla Quartette, the programme including one item specially selected for the occasion, entitled "Geography," a humorous sketch.

Bookseller Killed by a Taxi-Cab in the Fog

It was with much regret that we saw the death of Mr. D. S. Solome, recorded in the Star of January 30th. Mr. Solome was Manager to Messrs. Pearson & Co., of Pall Mall Place, and was a member of the Antiquarian Booksellers' Association, and present at the last dinner with his wife and son.

Mr. Solome's place of business was in Pall Mall Place, and on Wednesday, January 27th, he was knocked down and killed by a taxi-cab, in which the Earl of Liverpool was a passenger.

Lord Liverpool said he took the cab from King's Cross, and was going to St. James Street. It was very foggy, and the cab was going very slowly.

The Earl saw the man ahead at Pall Mall East. Then he suddenly took two steps backwards and stopped. Witness thought he heard deceased shouting.

There was hardly any chance of pulling up, and the bonnet of the car struck the man. The driver had been sounding his hooter all the way, and was going quite slowly.

Other evidence to the same effect having been given, an accidental death verdict was returned, the driver being exonerated from blame.

We used to think Paris streets were the most dangerous to cross, but if they are as dangerous as London streets now they are ten times worse even than they used to be.

The Late Mr. W. Joanes

On January 23rd, after a long and painful illness, passed away, in his 56th year, Mr. W. Joanes, the Principal Assistant in the New Book Department of Messrs. John and Edward Bumpus, Ltd., of Oxford Street. The deceased served his late employers for nearly 24 years, and was well known to all the London travellers to the publishing houses, and by them much respected for his urbane manners and readiness to give any information desired. Mr. Joanes leaves a widow, three sons, and three daughters. It is somewhat curious to note that of a family of six brothers, five including the deceased, became booksellers.

The Glasgow Herald on "Mosher"

"In spite of International agreements book piracy is not yet, it would appear, an obsolete occupation. The Editor of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR does not usually mince his words when he believes he has a strong case, and an article in his last week's issue contains extracts from the letters of authors which seem to give ample justification for the heading 'Thomas B. Mosher, the American Book Pirate: A Warning to English Booksellers.'

With such testimony before him the Editor of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR quotes Mr. Mosher as feeling > more deeply than ever the responsibility of my individuality in bookmaking, if such a phrase is permitted, and that on this short day of Frost and Sun if I have accomplished anything at all its worth issues out of the Ideal lying beyond Reality.

Quite so. The practical reply to this is that > booksellers and private book buyers should note that this Portland Pirate is offering and selling scores of editions which it is illegal to sell, or buy, or advertise for sale in any part of the British Empire.

So difficult is it to bring practice into line with precept. And no doubt many excellent people in this country have their drawing room tables adorned with Mosher books."

Laura Hain Friswell

"MRS. MYALL"

WE regret to see in The Author a notice recording the death of Laura Hain Friswell (Mrs. Myall), daughter of the late Hain Friswell, the well-known author. Mr. Friswell was a little too outspoken to get on with everybody, but those who liked him did so heartily. For some years in the seventies he was editor of this journal—then a fortnightly. The following is a copy of the note in The Author:—

"Members of the society may remember that in November the Pension Fund Committee awarded a pension at the rate of £25 per annum to Mrs. Myall (Laura Hain Friswell) under clause 16 of the Pension Fund Scheme. By this clause the committee may grant a pension if and while a member is totally incapacitated for work, even though he or she has not attained the age limit.

"We regret to state that in the last few days of 1908 Mrs. Myall succumbed to that illness which had stopped her from pursuing her literary labours. Mrs. Myall—she wrote under her maiden name of Laura Hain Friswell—was the daughter of the well-known author of 'The Gentle Life.' In 1898 she published a record of his life. One of her last works was a book of Reminiscences, published in 1905, under the title of 'In the Sixties and the Seventies.'"

GIBBON AND SHELLEY AS UNDERGRADUATES

NEITHER Gibbon nor Shelley could have been pupils easy to manage, and both were expelled from their colleges. Sympathy is always on the side of youth and genius, but Gibbon and Shelley were both of them impossible persons.

OXFORD OF TO-DAY

Oxford is still medieval, yet intensely modern: it is still the home of causes which are not lost, and of beliefs which are not impossible: it still dreams, though its dreams are feverish and incoherent, some of them, and of the future as well as of the past.—From "Oxford, Past and Present," by the Warden of Wadham College, in Blackwood's Magazine for February.

GREENING wish to inform the trade that they have removed their warehouse from 15, King William Street, Strand, to larger premises at No. 9, Great Newport Street, Charing Cross Road, where all goods should be in future delivered. When "have went" was Good English

WRITING in Harper's for February, Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury tells of the survival in the speech of uneducated persons of to-day of many forms of speech in general and good use hundreds of years ago:—

"There is a verbal form, long rejected by the cultivated classes, to which the uneducated cling. This is went as a past participle. Etymologically such an employment of it is perfectly correct. It was not its own fault, it was owing to a concurrence of circumstances that it was dislodged from the place it originally occupied. In Anglo-Saxon there were two verbs in particular which expressed the idea of movement in a given direction. One was gán, the original of go. The other was wendan, our wend. The verb go was and is a genuine irregular verb. It was from another root that its past tense was borrowed. The form of this in Anglo-Saxon was éode, which later became yede, or yode. On the other hand, wendam had as its preterite and past participle wente and went respectively. It so happened in process of time that go lost its preterite yede, or yode. To make up for its disappearance it helped itself to the past tense of wend, which had discarded its final e and became went. As go continued, however, to retain its old participle gon—gone, as it is now spelt—it had no use for the participle went. When therefore have in its capacity of universal auxiliary began to take the place of the forms of be with verbs of motion, have gone became the standard tense phrase. Have went was relegated to the speech of the uneducated.

"The change came about gradually. In Chaucer and his contemporaries the old form occurs frequently. Such passages as 'He . . . On his way is went.' 'Jason . . . home is went,' are found in the poet's pages. But with all the influence he exerted upon the development of the English language, he could not keep the past participle went in the literary speech. The verb of which it was a part came itself in time to be largely disused. Even in the eighteenth century it is not infrequent in the diary of the Oxford scholar and antiquary, Thomas Hearne. For instance, he records in 1727 a walk he had taken to Denton Court, passing through Chilswell, 'which way,' he adds, 'I had never went before.' But Hearne was a Tory of the Tories, and doubtless saw as little use in abandoning words and forms that had once been established as he did in abandoning institutions.

"But though the use of went as a past participle disappeared from the language of literature, it has continued to retain in the speech of the uneducated all its original vigour. From them it is heard now as frequently as it was heard in Chaucer's time from the lips of the most cultivated."

The admirers of Thomas Stothard will be glad to hear that a cheap edition of Miss A. C. Coxhead's Life of the famous designer and illustrator is announced for immediate publication by Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson, Ltd. The book will contain fifty-three full-page illustrations and cuts in the text.

Old Edinburgh Club

THE first annual meeting of this Society, which is adding one more to our publishing clubs, was held in the Council Chambers on Friday afternoon. Lord Rosebery presided and brought in his hand a press proof of the first volume of the "Book of the Old Edinburgh Club." It is a handsome crown 4to., containing about 180 pages of letterpress, a specially prepared map, and about 40 other illustrations.

His lordship, after a few introductory remarks regarding the origin of the Club, said that the volume before him was the best justification of its existence. In a previous number of the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR we gave a note of the contents of the book, and would now only emphasise the fact that as only 300 copies are being printed for members, Librarians who wish to secure it for their archives should at once communicate with the Secretary, or with Mr. W. J. Hay, John Knox's House, Edinburgh, to whom the Club owes its inception.

R. E. King & Co.

THE case of R. E. King of Holborn and Tooting is down for hearing before the Common Sergeant, at the Old Bailey, on Friday, February 5th. It will be taken at 10.30.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Blackie & Sons, Ltd.—"Sinbad the Sailor." Neatly bound in cloth and published at 6d. net, this makes a very nice book for children. It is reprinted, with a few trifling omissions, from the translation of E. W. Lane, which has remained the favourite since its first publication in 1838.

From the Same.—"Le Docteur Bousseau," by Féval, published uniformly with Blackie's Longer French Texts, edited by Louis A. Barbé, B.A., and containing Notes and Phrase List, Questionnaire and Vocabulary, intended for the higher forms.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co.—"Peace and the Churches: Der Friede und die Kirchen." This handsome volume is published in parallel columns of German and English, as a souvenir of the memorable visit paid to this country last year by the representatives of the German Christian Churches. It gives an illustrated account of their tour, with the resolutions and speeches at the various meetings and portraits of the German guests and their English hosts. It will be a welcome memento of a fraternisation which is unique in Christian history.

From Messrs. Everett & Co.—"The Devil's Ace." The author, Mr. Fergus Hume, has written a story that will appeal to all readers of lively and exciting fiction. What with mysterious murders, bewildering impersonations, Russian anarchists, secret chambers, a veritable gunpowder plot, hidden treasure and such like, his book can scarcely be called dull. Mr. Hume has the gift of inventing fascinating characters. Thus we see the heroine—a girl full of vitality, loving and courageous, a girl who would go down at midnight into a secret vault under a ruined and uninhabited tower, just to turn the "Devil's Ace," having, on a previous occasion, found the corpse of a murdered man there—is without doubt a phenomenally plucky girl. The hero, like the Prince in the fairy tale, is set the task of finding the murderer of a certain Sir John Newby by Mr. Clair, the heroine's father, on whom suspicion is cast, before he can marry Mr. Clair's daughter; then again, the handsome Russian anarchist, who much against his will is forced to somewhat noxious duties by the chiefs of the society to which he belongs, but reforms and——get the book and see for yourself what happened to him, and all the other interesting characters in the story; it is quite worth it.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"The Great Victorian Age," by M. B. Synge. An admirably concise yet complete and interesting summary of the national life of Britain and the development of her Empire between the accession and death of Queen Victoria. It is said to be "for children," and one would gladly see it placed within the reach of all boys and girls, not only in the homeland, but also in the Colonies, that they may realise the energy and courage by which their fathers have built up the mighty Empire which they inherit. There are very few grown-up persons, too, who would not rise from the perusal of this well-written book with a sense of heightened pride and quickened responsibility.

From Mr. John Long.—"The Testament of Judas," by Henry Byatt. An imaginary autobiography of Judas Iscariot, from his earliest days down to his suicide after the betrayal, written in a glowing and Oriental style. Though the book is not without a certain effectiveness, for our own part we do not consider the theme exactly suitable for a work of fiction, and if it is to be done at all it needs a writer of altogether bigger powers than Mr. Byatt to do it successfully.

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co.—"The Suffragette: a play in one Act," by the Rev. J. P. Dalton. This play was first produced at S. Paul's Hall, Forest Hill, in November, 1908. Its performance occupies fifty minutes. The author avers that he does not "wish to take sides on the question of Woman's Suffrage, or say one word to help or hinder the awful cause," but he is an adept at the gentle art of ridicule, and his play is a slight, brilliant, witty piece of work, which would "go" con brio in the hands of capable amateurs. There are only five characters, and no difficulties in the way of scenery, &c. We can heartily recommend "The Suffragette" as being one of the most amusing skits we have read for a long time.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—"The Ancient Greek Historians," by J. B. Bury, Litt. D., LL.D., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge. In the spring of 1908 Professor Bury delivered the Lane Lectures at Harvard University. Hence this interesting and scholarly work. The lectures, we are told, are reprinted very nearly as they were originally written, a circumstance that probably accounts for a looseness of style not found in the author's general historical work—his "History of Greece," for example. A wide field is covered. In fact, within the compass of some 260 pages we have "a historical survey of Greek historiography down to the first century B.C." No living scholar, at any rate in this country, is better equipped for this great task than Professor Bury, who must surely be the most versatile of editors and historians. In the present work Herodotus and Thucydides are, of course, the principal figures; but the portrait gallery includes lightning sketches of several ancient writers of whose very names the general reader is ignorant. Of exceptional interest to students is the opening lecture on "The Rise of Greek History in Ionia." Here Professor Bury's vast learning and descriptive gifts are seen at their best. On Herodotus and Thucydides it is almost as hard to say anything fresh as on Shakespeare or Burns; but Professor Bury gives an admirable summary of their qualities, and here and there he flashes a critical remark which certainly helps to illumine the darkness. Xenophon perhaps gets rather less than his due. "His mind," says Professor Bury "was essentially mediocre, incapable of penetrating beneath the surface of things. If he had lived in modern days, he would have been a high class journalist and pamphleteer; he would have made his fortune as a war correspondent, and would have written the life of some mediocre hero of the stamp of Agesilaus." This is a sop to the gallery, and must be taken as such with a grin of good humour. Fortunately the author does not indulge much in such modes of criticism; and many of his judgments are exceedingly shrewd. The book is not history; but as a companion to the standard histories it has high value and we heartily commend it both to the student and the general reader.

From Messrs. Morgan & Scott, Ltd.—"Finders of the Way," by the Rev. James Stirling: Studies in New Testament Conversions. There are about twenty sermons on Peter, Nicodemus, Zacchæus, and others who are recorded in the New Testament as having been "turned unto righteousness" by the call of the Master or His disciples. The interesting personality of the centurion Cornelius receives specially full and careful treatment.

From Mr. John Ouseley, Ltd.—"Sarah Valliant's Problem," by H. B. Blair. A story of "the course of true love" in a Surrey country house, and of a sprite who begins as an imp and ultimately becomes an angel. It is a subtle study of personality, and of small but not insignificant embarrassments.

From the Same.—"The Characters of Paradise Lost," by Miss M. A. Woods. The scope of these papers, which are reprinted from the "Expository Times," is sufficiently indicated by their title. While not agreeing with the view that "the main interest of the characters of 'Paradise Lost' is the light they throw on Milton himself," we may nevertheless admire the literary insight and fearless spirit of these studies into Milton's conception of The Father, The Son, Satan, Adam, and other dramatis personæ of our greatest British epic.——"Paul Richards, Detective," by Duncan Dallas. Sir Conan Doyle has much to answer for! Paul Richards has not the subtle genius of Sherlock Holmes, but his adventures may well serve to wile away an idle hour.

From the Same.—"Shelley: a Poem," by Captain Claude Edward Foster (King's Own Regiment).—An ambitious attempt to "render some of the emotional crises of Shelley's life," and to enunciate the author's belief that the "soul is to be led towards God and essential freedom through its emotions rather than its reason." The poem, which is dramatic in form, is prefaced by a brief biographical notice of Shelley. It is on the whole a very promising piece of work, unequal it is true, but distinctly interesting, and containing many lines of strength and beauty. While voicing no shallow optimism it yet strikes a note of high courage and ultimate victory. So many of our younger poets delight in gloominess and unrelieved pessimism that Captain Foster's outlook upon life comes as a welcome change. We may expect further good work from his pen.

From the Same.—"Little Dorothy," by T. H. Chetwynd. An unpretending story of an orphan girl adopted by a God-fearing miller and ultimately married to his son. It breathes a simple religious spirit, and is very suitable for Sunday Schools.

From Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd.—"The Art of Modern Conjuring." The aim of this book is to provide a manual of simple sleight-of-hand tricks which may be performed successfully after very little study, and at the cost of a trifling sum for the accessories that are required. There are many books on conjuring, but this one is certainly more clear and explicit than the majority of those we have seen. The two hundred excellent photographic illustrations are a great help to explain points which are difficult to understand in print, and they are more to be relied on than the sketches with which most books of this description are illustrated.

From Messrs. Williams & Norgate.—"The Acts of the Apostles," by Professor Adolf Harnack of Berlin, translated by the Rev. J. R. Wilkinson. This new volume of the Crown Theological Library is uniform with Professor Harnack's previous books, "Luke the Physician" and "The Sayings of Jesus," and must receive the same attention as those very striking works. In it the Lukan authorship of the Acts of the Apostles and its substantial historical accuracy are upheld with great learning and cogency. Dr. Harnack even holds that inasmuch as without the Acts the combination of the Pauline Epistles with the Gospel narrative would have been impossible, St. Luke may be regarded as "the creator of the New Testament." The book, which is admirably translated by Mr. Wilkinson, will probably mark an epoch in the history of Biblical criticism, for it indicates a complete reversal of the destructive attitude hitherto adopted towards the New Testament.

From the Same.—"The Vulgate: the Source of False Doctrines," by the Rev. Prof. G. Henslow. During the thousand years in which the main doctrines of Christianity were attaining their complete development, Jerome's Latin version was practically the only known form of the Scriptures, and Professor Henslow has no difficulty in showing that some doctrines took a form which would have been impossible if the original Greek text of the New Testament had been available. Thus the Latin credo, which refers only to intellectual belief, was used in the Vulgate to represent the Greek πιστευω (pisteno), which more often connotes the emotion of trust. Hence the Church was wrongly led to emphasise the importance of belief in dogma rather that of personal faith in Christ, as the first duty of the Christian. The intelligent reader will derive much profit from this little book.

From Messrs. Witherby & Co.—"British Mosses," by Sir Edward Fry, G.C.B. This second edition of a useful work has been thoroughly revised, and the illustrations, with one exception, have been withdrawn.

From The Young Churchman Company, Milwaukee, U.S.A.—"Meditations on the Office and Work of the Holy Spirit," by the Very Rev. J. G. H. Barry, D.D. Dr. Barry believes that there is throughout the Western Church an inadequate recognition of the functions and influence of the Third Person of the Holy Trinity. He has sought to stimulate a more active attention to this important matter by a series of thoughtful and suggestive meditations, which, starting from a consideration of the nature and operations of the Holy Spirit, gradually develop the whole system of the Christian Faith on orthodox Church lines. His book is well calculated to aid the devotional life of the thoughtful Christian reader.

We Germans & Our British Cousins.

A German Business Man's Plain-spoken Views. By HANS ZIEGLER.

What do Germans really want
What do they not want
Do they dislike us
Need we fear them

If these questions were fully answered the author holds that the risk of a quarrel would be over. Writing as a business man pure and simple, who knows the British Empire as well as he does his own country, he answers them with perfect candour to both sides.

Publishers' Circular

The Booksellers and the Lord Mayor

WE have pleasure in announcing that the annual meeting of the members of the Booksellers' Provident Institution will be held at Stationers' Hall on Tuesday, March 16th, at 7 o'clock in the evening. After the meeting there will be a conversazione, at which the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of London has kindly promised to deliver an address, followed by a smoking concert.

The directors hope that many members and friends will be present.

Come Over and Help Us

IN connection with the previous note announcing that the Lord Mayor will be present at the annual meeting of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, it was interesting to find the following appeal from America in the American Stationer. It is addressed to Mr. C. J. Longman, Mr. W. E. Green, and Mr. Frederick Macmillan, and asks their assistance in getting up an American Book Trade Provident Institution.

It was news to us, and we think it will be to most of our readers, to hear that in connection with the American book trade there are no institutions like our Booksellers' Provident Institution and National Book Trade Provident Society, &c. Referring to this matter, our American contemporary has the following remarks, which we hope will stimulate such of our readers as are not enrolled as members of the provident institutions just mentioned to see the wisdom of joining. It is not merely a wise thing to do so, it is a duty.

Something to Learn from England

"The book and stationery trade has something to learn from our English cousins. But this is not strange, as they have been selling books, papers and envelopes much longer than we have. Their experience, extending over so many more years than ours, has brought with it a wise consideration of the benefits derived from a spirit of mutual helpfulness rightly directed.

It is more than the mere desire of good fellowship expressed in periodic gatherings round a banquet table. It means a planning for the future needs of the people engaged in the same line of business. Over there they have numerous benefit associations which enable a man in a particular trade to provide for his old age by making regular payments to a fund of an institution conducted by men of high standing in his own craft.

Nothing of this nature exists here, with all our boasted up-to-date-ness. Such an institution is totally distinct from an insurance company or an organisation of a semi-social nature, like our numerous fraternal bodies. These English organisations, on the other hand, admit only persons similarly employed.

And all this is beyond the experimental stage, for these societies, with their clannish spirit so highly developed, have been in existence for a number of years. The Booksellers' Provident Institution of London, for instance, has been paying out annuities to people in the trade for seventy years. Only people in the bookselling business can become members.

A thrifty young man or woman clerk in their early twenties can thus provide for their declining years by investing small sums, paid over to the company in instalments. Not only are the subscribers taken care of in old age, but assistance is rendered to them in time of need, they are entitled to medical attendance, and, if necessary, part of the funeral expenses is paid. When a member is sick he can go to a retreat in the country during the period of his convalescence at the expense of the society. He can even take his family for a vacation to a country home maintained by the institution. And in old age they will admit him to the home, where he will receive, in addition to an annuity, free medical attendance and all conveniences for his comfort. These privileges are not confined to himself, but are extended to his wife, widow and children.

A young man who starts to make payments at the age of twenty-five and continues his contributions until they reach the total of twenty guineas, the equivalent of about $105, secures all of these benefits for himself and his family.

This low cost is possible because the officers and directors receive no salary or fees. The institution is conducted, not with the idea of making money for shareholders, but for the benefit of booksellers and their assistants who have not been fortunate enough to prepare adequately for their declining years.

Would not an institution somewhat on this order be of benefit to stationers in this country? Some people might not agree to this suggestion, inasmuch as the average American of twenty-five expects to make a fortune not only large enough to keep him from want in his old age but sufficient to maintain him in a state of affluence. But this doesn't always happen, as many disappointed people who have worked in a subordinate capacity all their lives can testify.

So it seems that the feeling of mutual benefit among stationers here could be directed along practical lines with good results if the Booksellers' Provident Institution of London were taken as a model for a stationers' organisation of similarity on this side of the water. If public-spirited men like Charles James Longman and W. E. Green, of Longmans, Green & Co., and Frederick Macmillan, of Macmillan & Co., officers in the London institution, could be induced to associate themselves in an enterprise of this character in New York, it would do a great deal to establish among employees in the stationery trade a feeling of unity and fraternity."

Frauds on Booksellers by R. E. King

NOT R. E. King & Co., Ltd.

THE Common Serjeant and a jury were engaged for the whole of Friday and Saturday in last week at the Old Bailey in trying the notorious R. E. King for obtaining books and incurring debts by false pretences. The accused, who was one of the pioneers in the production of cheap reprints, built up a large business, which was turned into a limited company some years ago under the name of R. E. King, Limited; but his connection with the company was shortly afterwards severed, and he has for a long time had no connection with it whatever.

King, who is an undischarged bankrupt, was indicted on eleven charges of obtaining books on credit and selling them for considerably less than what he had agreed to give for them, and was found guilty after a prolonged trial. There were proved against him two previous convictions, the last in 1905, and the police produced a long string of names and addresses used by him during the last two years. As will be seen from our report, King was sentenced by the Common Serjeant to fifteen months' hard labour.

The Booksellers' Congress in London, June 18th to 21st, 1909, and the Publishers' Reception

As already announced the Annual Congress of the Associated Booksellers of the United Kingdom will begin in London on Friday, June 18th. The big dinner will be on Saturday, June 19th, and the evening of Monday, June 21st will probably be the occasion of a great reception of the Booksellers' Association by the Publishers' Association, probably in the splendid reception rooms at Princes'. It is pretty certain that more than five hundred booksellers will be present at the reception; and we have no hesitation in telling our friends who will be coming as visitors from all parts of the country that they will be accorded a most hearty reception by the London Branch of their Association which has invited them, and also by the publishers.

A Committee of the London Branch of the Booksellers' Association, of which Mr. J. Truslove is President, is arranging the details of the programme, particulars of which will be published later on.

MESSRS. LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have in the press a "Memoir of George Howard Wilkinson, Bishop of St. Andrews, Dunkeld and Dunblane and Premier of the Scottish Church," by Dr. A. J. Morrison, Vice-Chancellor of the University and Master of Pembroke College, with a portrait, 2 vols.; also "Immortality," the new volume in "The Oxford Library," by the Rev. E. E. Holmes, and "The Appliances and Operations on Railways in Great Britain: an Introduction to the Principles of British Railway Working," by E. S. Hadley, of the Great Western Railway, with diagrams.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton anticipate a warm welcome will be given to the volume on Pepys (whose centenary falls in February of this year), which they are adding to their well-known series of "Literary Lives."

In the second edition of "British Mosses," by Sir Edward Fry, G.C.B., published by Messrs. Witherby & Co., all but one of the illustrations have been re-drawn, and the work has been thoroughly revised.

Mr. Unwin will publish, on February 15th, a "History of Contemporary Civilisation," by Monsieur Charles Saignbos. It is the third and concluding volume of the author's History of Civilisation, a comprehensive yet concise summary of universal history, which has had a very wide circulation in France. The present volume starts with the Eighteenth Century and goes down to the present day. It deals not only with political and military events, but with art, literature, science and industry.

"A Bishop in the Rough," which Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will shortly publish, is the record of eight adventurous years in the early life of Dr. Sheepshanks, the present Bishop of Norwich. Pioneer priest in British Columbia, missioner to gold miners and aboriginal Indians, he was also a notable traveller, crossing two continents with such unusual experiences as preaching to Brigham Young and his people in Salt Lake City, and witnessing, as no other Englishman has done, the adoration of the Grand Lama in the heart of Mongolia. The book is edited and supplemented by the Rev. D. Wallace Duthie, and has a preface by the Bishop, and several illustrations.

Mr. Robert Machray, who has for some time been engaged upon the biography of his uncle, the late Archbishop of Rupert's Land and first Primate of Canada, will shortly publish his new novel, "The Disappearance of Lady Diana." The publishers are Messrs. Everett & Co., who also announce for this month "Mrs. Whiston's House Party," by Thomas Cobb; "Felix Stone," by Alice and Claude Askew; "The Degenerate," by Fred Whishaw, and a shilling edition of G. de Vauriard's successful novel, "The Sibyl of Bond Street."

Mr. Heinemann announces for publication, on February 18th, a new novel by John Galsworthy, entitled "Fraternity." This book is described as perhaps the most important yet written by Mr. Galsworthy, a study of modern men and women, with the same wonderful character drawing, purity of style and biting humour which will be remembered with keen pleasure by all who read "The Country House" and "A Man of Property."

For £11 11s. Mr. John Buchanan, of 47, Great Queen Street, Kingsway, W.C., offers a fine set in three-quarter "levant morocco" of Hazlitt's best edition of Dodsley's Old English Plays. As the Levant is at one end of the Mediterranean and Morocco at the other, we presume the leather in question is neither one nor the other. Mr. Buchanan's list always contains books we mark with a view to buying, only fortunately discretion is often the better part of valour.

Messrs. Dent are adding Rodwell's translation of the "Koran" to the volumes of the new "Fifty" of "Everyman's Library"; also Swedenborg's "Heaven and Hell."

Readers of Mrs. Rodolph Stawell's "Motor Tours in Wales" may be glad to hear that she has written a companion volume, entitled "Motor Tours in Yorkshire," which Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton will publish shortly, to take the place of contour-books and maps, being intended for the passenger rather than the driver. It is written for those who wish to know beforehand where they will find the most beautiful places, and when they have found them wish to know something of their history. It will be found that Mrs. Stawell includes nearly all that is best worth seeing, with photographs, map of the route, and index.

On Tuesday, February 16th, Mr. John Lane will publish a new and cheaper edition of the novel suppressed in Germany, "Life in a Garrison Town," by ex-Lieutenant Bilse; with a Summary of the Court Martial, an Introduction by Arnold White, and a new Preface, written by the author whilst in London. For writing "Life in a Garrison Town" Lieutenant Bilse was imprisoned and dismissed the Army.

The frightful devastation of Sicily has aroused the interest of the world in this beautiful land and its picturesque people. Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. say that no book so faithfully paints its natural beauties and the wonderful charm of its climate as does the book by Selma Lagerlöf, entitled "The Miracles of Antichrist." She has depicted with the insight of genius the quaint superstitions, the picturesque poverty, the fierce vindictiveness and the impulsive devotion of the Sicilians, and her word-pictures of the island itself will always stand as remarkable descriptions of a region whose beauty is largely now a matter of memory. Messrs. Little, Brown & Co., who publish the book, are bringing out a new edition this month.

Mr. Werner Laurie's new books include "Roads to Riches," the romance of money-making, by Mr. Thornton Hall (which tells the stories of huge fortunes), and "General Lee: Man and Soldier," by Thomas Nelson Page. The book is based on public records and on the trustworthy testimony of personal witnesses.

Messrs. Dent promise a translation of Hugo's "Les Misérables" for "Everyman's Library," in two vols.

The reigns of Francois I., Henri IV. and the First Napoleon are the most vivid periods in the history of Fontainebleau. The story of the palace is interwoven with biographies of the women who dwelt there in "Fair Women at Fontainebleau," by Frank Hamel, author of "Famous French Salons." The work will be published shortly by Mr. Eveleigh Nash. Among the personages with which it deals are Diane de Poitiers, Gabrielle d'Estrées, Marie de Medicis, Anne of Austria, Henriette d'Orléans, Louise de la Vallière, Christina of Sweden, and Mesdames de Montespan, de Pompadour and Du Barry.

The late Dr. Francis Elgar deserved well of his country when alive, and he has added to that obligation by leaving a quarter of his residuary estate for the benefit of the classes for naval architecture which were formed by the late distinguished naval architect.

Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. announce a new romance entitled, "Brother Officers," by Horace Wyndham.

The special feature of The British Empire Review for February is an article by Sir Charles Bruce on "Indian Reforms."

Mr. J. Snell Hugill, for many years on the staff of the P.C., has been appointed Assistant Editor of The Free Trader—a new paper, published in the interest of Free Trade, edited by Mr. G. W. Gough, M.A., F.S.S.

Messrs. Methuen's new books, just ready, include Mr. Barry Pain's new story, "The Gifted Family," which opens in a sitting-room over a bookseller's shop in the Finchley Road; Mr. John Fyvie's work, "Tragedy Queens of the Georgian Era," and a new edition of Sir T. H. Holdich's book, "The Indian Borderland," which is a record of the author's connection with the expeditions which have lead to our present position in the North-west Frontier of India.

Messrs. Bale, Sons & Danielsson, Ltd., will shortly issue a history of the Reading Pathological Society, written by the President, Dr. Jamieson B. Hurry. This society, as is well known, ranks as one of the oldest medical societies in the country and has accomplished an amount of work such as few societies can rival. Its zeal for the advancement of the science and art of medicine is shown by the numerous original communications which have been published during the past seventy years, and to which full references will be given. The volume will be illustrated by a series of portraits, and contain descriptions of the medical library and pathological museum which form so essential a part of every progressive medical society. This work should prove of interest to the secretaries of the various local medical societies throughout the United Kingdom, as with one exception—that of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society—such a record is believed to be unique.

Retirement of Mr. Joseph Collyer.

WE have pleasure in giving a portrait of Mr. Joseph Collyer, a Director of Messrs. George Philip & Son, who recently retired from active participation in business after completing a period of 51 years' work with the house of Philip. We gave last week an account of a dinner at which Mr. Collyer was entertained by his colleagues, by whom, as by all who know him, Mr. Collyer is held in great esteem.

Glasgow Book Trade Notes

By "MUNGO"

ALMOST daily the publisher inundates the trade with prospectuses of new books, and at the moment, when there is a lull in business previous to the commencement of the spring season, the bookseller endeavours to put some of these to a practical use.

As a rule the direct results of circularising are disappointing; a book as a saleable commodity is probably unlike any other article of commerce, and with the individual bookseller the sale is usually limited; but given a prospectus of something one feels ought to interest a considerable portion of the public, what is the most economical way to bring it to their notice, for the profit on literature—to the bookseller that is—do not permit of heavy expenses in advertising.

By a liberal distribution of prospectuses, lists of likely buyers might be drawn up for future use, but even then it is questionable if the results would cover cost of postage on the circulars sent out, so, unless one is content to look on the circular as an advertisement for his firm and rely on indirect results, it will only pay in respect to books showing a good margin of profit.

The three-volume edition of Morley's "Life of Gladstone" was a case in point, and here we had a book that showed a good profit and also appealed to a very large circle of people; while, on the other hand, we might take Harold Baker's "Law, Organisation and Administration of the Territorial Force."

A good demand was expected for this book, but so far those in high places Territorial seem loath to buy. Though the bookseller would wish otherwise, the officer is apt to leave such things to members of committee, so the question is how to awaken the committee's intelligent interest in its responsibilities; the circular hasn't been successful, showing a return of somewhere about 2½ per cent.

Apart from the circular, the demand for books on the various sports is a matter for speculation; while a book on Golf is usually sure of a large sale, a work on Hunting, Mountaineering, or Cricket finds a comparatively small number of readers; of course, the number of golfers is legion, but probably a book on this game, especially one giving diagrams, is of more practical use to the player than is a work on any other sport to its devotees. It is said that to an experienced golfer a book by an expert in the game repays careful study, and this will account for the success which met James Braid's "Advanced Golf," and also the continued demand for Beldam and Taylor's "Golf Faults Illustrated."

While Golf has quite a large library written about it, another game essentially Scottish has to go abroad to find a text book; although Curling is touched on in the Badminton Library the only handy work on the "roarin' game" is published in America.

"Little France"

FROM a note in this book, just published by Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd., we learn that it was published in the United States under the (as we think) much better title of "The Quiberon Touch":

In breakers crashing on the shore,
In tempest's shriek, or cannon's roar,
In cradle song, or cry of bird,
In lovers' voices softly heard,
In mighty ships upon the wave,
In glorious deed done by the brave,
In all things beautiful and dear,
Told as I've tried to tell them here,
May some voice—man, or maid, or sea—
Fail not to speak a word of me!

In these lines the author, Mr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, dedicates his book to his mother. This fine story of love and war on sea and land begins in the year 1754 on the morning of July 3rd. The hero, a young American, Lieutenant Grafton, in command of the English brig-of-war Boxer, is introduced to us in a thick sea-fog off the French coast, just before his capture by Le Thésée, a fine French battleship. The French captain, the Comte Kersaint de Kerguelen, discovers that at the Siege of Louisburg, in 1745, he had fought against his captive's father, Admiral John Grafton. Turning to his officers, he said: "The father fought me; I befriend the son. Is it not just, Messieurs?" He then introduces young Grafton to his kinsman, the Marquis de Chabot-Rohan, who lives at the Château de Josselin, hard by the seashore, a few miles from Brest; to which Château Grafton is presently taken, not so much as a prisoner of war as an honoured guest to await his exchange, and in the meantime to fall in love with little Anne, Countess de Rohan in her own right.

Nothing is easier than to write the historical novel; nothing is more difficult to make it interesting. But Mr. Brady has succeeded admirably. It was a fine idea of his to give a triangular interest to his story—the young American officer leaves the grey old Manor House on the Potomac to fight under the English flag against France, under Wolfe at the capture of Quebec, and under Hawke at the battle of Quiberon Bay. The love story is charmingly done, and quite indispensable. But we wish to call attention chiefly to this tribute of an American writer to British valour on sea and land.

Captain Mahan, we believe, calls Hawke's victory over De Conflans at Quiberon Bay the Trafalgar of the Eighteenth Century. Mr. Brady tells us in an "Afterword" that he can find no coherent, clear, detailed account of that tremendous action in any English history. Except for alterations of names and the introduction of incidents called for by his story, he claims that his own account "is told as it happened." Captain Mahan's description, although indicating clearly its importance, is short; nor is the late Sir William Laird Clowes's much longer. Mr. Brady devotes sixty or seventy pages to it, and with some pretence to a general acquaintance with accounts of sea fights, after reading this we could not help wishing that a copy of "Little France" might find its way on board every British warship. Whether correct in all technical details or not we are unable to say; it appears to be. But we think it would be difficult to find any better word-picture of a great fight at sea than this of Quiberon Bay as described by Mr. Brady. The approach of the great fleets, the storm in which the battle was fought, driving the ships towards the most dangerous of coasts, the battle itself—the whole scene is depicted with such enthusiasm and yet with such restraint that the reader seems almost to be present throughout. The descriptions of the captains—above all, of the "Great Lord Hawke," as Burke styled him—and their splendid seamanship and valour, the tribute, at least, to French valour, are splendidly animated; the very ships seem alive as they tear through the winter storm to get at the French. Hardly less stirring and vivid is the account of the taking of Quebec by Wolfe.

When there is so much talk of invasion it is refreshing to be reminded again by such a book as this that our natural and only place for defeating invaders is on the sea.

Rex v. King

At the Old Bailey on Friday, February 5th, before the Common Serjeant, (Sir T. A. Bosanquet, K.C.), Richard Edward King, 54, of 4, Eagle Street, Holborn, and 84A, Stapleton Road, Tooting, was indicted on the charge of obtaining books under false pretences, and also for incurring various debts and liabilities without the means or intention of paying.

The case was taken in No. 3 Court at 10.30 a.m. Counsel for the prosecution being Mr. Muir, Mr. T. Humphries, and Mr. Inglees Oddie; for the defence, Mr. J. W. Thatcher and Mr. P. B. Petrides.

Mr. Muir in opening the case for the prosecution briefly stated that the defendant, R. E. King, had carried on the business of a bookseller and exporter under the name of R. E. King & Co.* at various addresses, at 4, Eagle Street, Holborn; 101, Hanover Buildings; Tooley Street; 6, Red Lion Square, and 80, Chancery Lane, and had sold books also under the names of H. Cooper and M. Lewis. The transactions for which he was now indicted covered a period extending from the middle of the year 1907 to December, 1908. The room at 6, Red Lion Square was occupied by a Mr. Smithers, to whom King paid 2s. 6d. per week; subsequently Mr. Smithers moved to 4, Eagle Street, Holborn, and King accompanied him there. Numerous parcels of books were delivered at both addresses, but no considerable stock of books was kept. At neither place was the name R. E. King & Co. placed on the door or exhibited.

Counsel then went into details of the various charges. As these will be referred to later on, it is not necessary to do so here.

The First Witness

to be called was the Rev. Herbert Williams, who stated that he had known the defendant some time, King having come to him for assistance. In reply to a question by Counsel the witness said he did not stand bail for the defendant at the Bow Street proceedings, but one of his clergy did. He had got him a room at Tooley Street, and understood that King carried on the business of a wholesale bookseller from that address. He knew King had a number of copies of a book in sheets—a cookery book—and further that the defendant had practically the run of his, the witness's, library—an extensive theological collection. King had also purchased large quantities of books for him for school prizes, &c., as he was able to obtain better terms than the ordinary bookseller; he had every confidence in King, and had no idea he was obtaining books in a fraudulent manner.

The next witness, Mr. Chas. Edward Feaks, Manager to Messrs. Murray, booksellers, of Leicester, gave evidence that in July, 1907, in response to an advertisement which appeared in The Exchange & Mart, King ordered a copy of to be sent to Tooley Street; this was done but defendant did not pay. Mr. Greville Brown, bookseller, 113, Edgware Road, deposed to having purchased this book from the defendant.

Mr. Frank Karslake, of 35, Pond Street, Hampstead, Hon. Sec. of the International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers, gave evidence that defendant called upon him in regard to certain accounts and especially about a cheque held by Mr. Karslake; he also stated that he arranged with King that the latter should pay interest upon the overdue accounts. In cross-examination he repudiated the suggestion that the 5 per cent. charged by the Association for collecting accounts went into his pocket, or benefited him in any way, and pointed out that an honorary secretary is usually not paid for his services.

Mr. J. B. Allison, of Bridgwater, Somersetshire, gave evidence that he had sent a set of to R. E. King & Co., in December, 1907, and had never received any payment.

Mr. Jas. Pollock, Solicitor to Mr. Hope, of 10, Bell Yard, stated he first knew King 5 or 6 years ago. He (the witness) had offices and rooms at 80, Chancery Lane, where he carried on a law-typists' business, and in October, 1907, the defendant used his office for a nominal payment. He apparently carried on the business of a bookseller, as parcels of books continually arrived, and it was in consequence of the annoyance these heavy parcels caused his (the witness's) wife, that in December, 1907, he asked King to move. Detective Sergeant McEvoy had called asking for R. E. King, but the latter was out on that occasion and when he returned left a note for the detective on the mantelpiece. The witness had spoken to King about having his name placed on the door, but, although King agreed, this was never done.

Mr. H. E. Humphris, bookseller, 77, St. Giles, Norwich, was then called and said that he advertised for sale and other books in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR of July 18th, 1908; King ordered the Self Educator, which was sent, but no payment had been made, neither had the books been returned.

Harmsworth's Self Educator

Mr. Smithers, of Crouch End, said he had a business of Law Stationer at 9, Duke Street, Red Lion Square, and that he allowed the defendant the use of his office for a nominal payment, but in March, 1908, he moved to 4, Eagle Street, Holborn, as the old premises were inconvenient, chiefly on account of the lack of facilities for handling the numerous parcels of books sent in to R. E. King & Co. There was only a large cupboard at Eagle Street, where the defendant placed many of these parcels, and at no time did he see any books or ledgers such as might be expected in the business of a wholesale bookseller. (At this stage the Court adjourned for lunch.)

On resuming Mr. Albert Victor James, Mr. Hy. Fairburn, of Northallerton, Mr. E. Bennett, of Stockwell, gave evidence as to transactions with the defendant; in no case had money been received for goods sent.

Mr. Bull, partner in the firm of Bull & Auvache, booksellers, 34 and 35, Hart Street, Bloomsbury, stated that he purchased a set of the

from the defendant under the name of Lewis, of Stapleton Road, Tooting, and that finding Vol. 29 was missing, he wrote to "Lewis" claiming this volume. King later on sent on a volume 29 which was proved to belong to a different set. This volume it appeared in evidence King had obtained from a Mr. McLeod, of Oban, through an advertisement in The Exchange & Mart, on the plea that he wanted it for the purpose of referring to a certain article. Mr. McLeod had not been paid for this volume. The witness on receiving the missing volume paid King (or "Lewis") £7 10s.

Other Witnesses

Mr. Wm. Bunning Batten, of Portsmouth, Mr. F. J. Crompton, of Eastbourne—deposed to having sent goods (a set of Dickens and a set of The International Library respectively) to R. E. King & Co., and had not received payment, and Mr. Westall, 106, Charing Cross Road, gave evidence as to the defendant selling the set of Dickens to him for 17s. 6d.

Mr. Chas. Gunnell, Booking Office Clerk to The London Parcels Delivery, gave evidence as to the many parcels he had taken to Eagle Street and also to removing some. He knew the defendant by sight as Mr. "Lewis," and all orders were given in that name.

(At this stage the case was adjourned until the following morning.)

On resuming the following witnesses, Mr. Thos. Boycott of Maybridge, Shropshire, Mr. H. George of Neville & George, 14, The Arcade, S. Kensington, Mr. S. Kiek of Paternoster Row, Mr. A. Wesley Holt, 8, Vincent Road, East Croydon, and Henry Jas. Rimell, 53, Shaftesbury Avenue, gave evidence as to either sending books to R. E. King or to purchasing from him.

Mr. G. E. Boyle, a messenger from the Bankruptcy Court, gave evidence of the defendant's bankruptcy on April 18th, 1900. His liabilities were over £6,800 and his assets nil; King had never applied for his discharge.

Detective Sergeant McEvoy then entered the witness box and described how he had arrested King at 84A, Stapleton Road, Tooting. King admitted he was trading under the name of R. E. King & Co. of Eagle Street, and also that he had used the names of

"M. Lewis" and "Cooper"

He handed the witness 9 postcards addressed to various individuals including several who had appeared as witnesses. Each postcard bore much the same wording, which was in effect that "the amount owing would be paid next week." King also said that he was negotiating with a firm of printers in Kingston, Messrs. Knapp, Drewett & Sons, Ltd., for printing some books from plates which belonged to the defendant. He expected, he said, when these books were sold to realise £1,000, out of which he would pay all his liabilities. The witness stated that he found numerous papers and documents at Stapleton Road, but no account books of any description.

No attempt had been made to conceal any of the documents, which he found in a heap on the sofa or on the table. (This closed the case for the prosecution.)

The Defence

Mr. Thatcher, Counsel for the defence, then called the defendant into the witness box.

King stated he came to London 26 years ago, and commenced business in a small way as a bookseller, printer, publisher and stationer in Denmark Street, St. George's, E. under the name of R. E. King & Co., being financed by Mr. Henry Daniel, the family banker. He subsequently moved to 88, Curtain Road, Shoreditch, and in 1897 to 106, 108 and 110, Tabernacle Street. He had travelled all over the world for the business, which grew annually, and which at its best attained a turnover of from £75,000 to £80,000. At its most prosperous period the defendant was paying out weekly in wages £350 to £500.

£6,000 a Year Profit

His own net profit during this period amounted to between £5,000 and £6,000 per annum. In 1898 he had saved £40,000 which was invested in the business. His solicitor then was Mr. T. D. Bolton, M.P., who advised King to turn the business into a limited liability company. This was done, the capital being £40,000, £25,000 of which was issued in Debenture Stock, Messrs. Hoare & Bolton becoming trustees for the debenture holders. King was made a director and managing director of this company at a salary of £1,500 a year, Bolton was also made a director and chairman. Just at that time King opened 30 to 38 booksellers' shops in various parts of the country, the leases all being taken in the name of King, and books for these shops were purchased in large quantities from the firm of R. E. King, Ltd., without being accounted for in the books of the company. Shortly, however, the firm got into financial difficulties, and in 1900 was put into liquidation for the debenture holders by Mr. Bolton, and on April 11th, 1900, a Receiving Order was made against King, and on the 18th of that month he was adjudicated bankrupt, with liabilities amounting to £6,882 11s., and no assets. At this time the assets of the company were put at £85,000, which Mr. Bolton bought for £30,000 on paper, but in reality for only £1,200. Bolton then applied for and

to restrain the defendant from carrying on business as a printer, publisher or stationer within 200 miles of The Royal Exchange. King then commenced business on his own account as wholesale bookseller under the name of R. E. King & Co., this was in 1902. (Mr. Muir here objected to certain evidence and his objection was upheld by the Common Serjeant.) [Continuing King said he started business at 37, Fleet Street, subsequently moving to 80, Chancery Lane, then to Red Lion Square, 101, Hanover Buildings, Tooley Street, Duke Street, and Eagle Street. He carried on a genuine business at each address, and sold large editions of non-copyright books. He sold, in one year, 250,000 copies of a sixpenny edition of Mrs. Hy. Wood's novels, and covering other periods 250,000 copies of various other sixpenny books, 10,000 of a book by Wilkie Collins, 10,000 of a 1s. Cookery Book bound in cloth, 5,000 of a 1s. Book of Domestic Reference, and 20,000 of a 6d. Children's Picture Book. In all, since 1905 he had

Sold over 545,000 Books

At the time of his arrest he had large contracts pending with various firms for binding and delivering books.

Pressed for money in 1907, he commenced an action against the Trustees of Bolton's Estate (Bolton having died in 1906) for £90,000. He would add that he always intended to pay for the books mentioned in the charge. Mr. Karslake called upon him some time ago but he was out, and he (the defendant) called upon Mr. Karslake at 11 o'clock the next morning. It was with reference to certain accounts and a cheque of his (King's) held by Mr. Karslake; he paid Mr. Karslake a sum of money in respect of some of these accounts and made an arrangement with him about the others. In reply to a question by Counsel he said all his recent business had been conducted by correspondence and always from his home address at Stapleton Road, Tooting. Returning to his dealings with Mr. Karslake, he said he had returned some books to Mr. Karslake as they were imperfect, and he paid three accounts Mr. Karslake was authorised to collect, two direct to the persons, and one into Mr. Karslake's hands. The arrangement referred to as that made with Mr. Karslake was to pay interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on overdue accounts. This was Mr. Karslake's offer. He had also paid many other accounts and intended to pay all his liabilities from the proceeds of the sales of the

with the Kingston printers.

All his papers were kept in order, and no attempt had been made at concealment; he had also answered correctly all the questions put to him at the time of his arrest. In regard to the postcards he handed over to the detective when arrested, King stated he was on the point of going out to post these that very moment, and in fact had taken them up from the table for that purpose when the officer knocked at the door. It was true that two of the cards were addressed to two of the witnesses for the prosecution—Mr. A. W. Holt and Mr. T. Boycott. On those cards he had written he would pay "next week," meaning he would pay as soon as he got the £1,000 he expected in January. Counsel then went at some length into details of the various cases, King admitting the debt in most of the cases, and stating that it was always his intention to pay. Questioned as to the number of books stored at his

the defendant said there were some 80,000 or 90,000 sheets. Books were delivered to the address at Chancery Lane, and bound volumes to Tooley Street and Eagle Street.

Questioned as to the reason for assuming the names of "Lewis" and "Cooper," King said that paragraphs inserted in the made it quite impossible for him to do any business under the name of R. E. King & Co.

He kept no books whatever, ledger, account or day books, his only records being his parcel books, this was because he only sold for cash.

Mr. Muir then rose to cross-examine, but the Court adjourned for a quarter of an hour for lunch.

After lunch Mr. Muir commenced his cross-examination of the defendant, and questioned King about the action he had brought against Bolton. King admitted that this action was dismissed on the ground that it was vexatious and frivolous, as was also the appeal, and, further, that the costs had never been paid. After Bolton's death in 1906, King commenced an action against Bolton's Trustees claiming the sum of £90,000. This action has not yet been set down for trial.

Going into details of the various cases, Counsel for the prosecution asked King to say what he meant by the words he at times used when ordering books

"Cash will be sent on receipt."

The defendant said he did not mean spot cash or even payment within a few days, but being a trader he expected credit, and would have settled all these accounts as soon as he got the £1,000 he anticipated. Counsel then remarked that King was an undischarged bankrupt with liabilities amounting to over £6,000—would not these creditors have a prior claim upon this £1,000 which King expected? King endeavoured to make an explanation, but it was unintelligible.

The cross-examination ended, the defendant returned to the dock, and Mr. Thatcher (Counsel for the defence) proceeded to Address the Jury.

He pointed out the position King had once held, an honourable and wealthy position, and one which had not Providence decreed otherwise might have led to King's becoming Lord Mayor of London. He touched upon the leading features of King's transactions, thanked the prosecution most sincerely for all the assistance they had given him, and pointed out to the jury their responsibility: "Gentlemen of the Jury," he said, "you have this to consider, if you find this man innocent you set him free upon a world that has already treated him cruelly, if you find he is guilty you will send him to one of those great stone places over the door of which is written: 'Abandon hope all ye who enter here.'"

The Common Serjeant then

informing the Jury what points to bear in mind in considering their verdict. If the defendant was guilty on one of these several indictments then he was guilty upon all, and if not guilty upon one, then he was not guilty upon all. They must also remember there were two specific charges.

After a few minutes' deliberation the Jury returned the verdict of

Counsel for the prosecution then placed Detective Sergeant McEvoy in the witness box, who stated that the prisoner had been found guilty of embezzlement in 1900 and was bound over, and in 1905 was sentenced to six months imprisonment for obtaining goods under false pretences. Witness also read out the following list of names and addresses traced as having been used at various times by the defendant, King vehemently denying that he was connected with one or two.

"The Greville Press," R. E. King & Co., 1, Tanswell Street, S.E.; "Joseph & Edwards" and "G. Roberts," 30, Fetter Lane and 16, Rosman Street; "George Marshall" and "F. Cooper," 22, Duke Street, London Bridge; "F. Cooper," 169, Blakeshaw Road, Tooting; "Partridge & Co.," Merton House, S. Bride's Avenue; R. E. King & Co., 68, Bishopsgate Street Within; 101 and 318, Hanover Buildings; 37, Fleet Street; 194, Tooley Street, S.E.; 80, Chancery Lane; 6, Red Lion Square; and 4, Eagle Street, all of which were merely accommodation addresses.

King then endeavoured to address the Court, but was requested to remain silent by the Common Serjeant, who remarked that in the light of previous convictions he did not wish to hear anything further.

Sentence

of 15 months' imprisonment with hard labour was then passed upon him.

[We have no desire to kick a man who is down, but trade in books or anything else would be impossible if Mr. King's methods were permitted to pass unpunished. In addition to those mentioned, many other booksellers were defrauded by him, including several in Germany—in fact, official warnings against "R. E. King & Co." were published in the German book trade papers, notices which were, of course, injurious to Messrs. R. E. King & Co., Ltd., of Tabernacle Street, E.C., who, as we have repeatedly stated are quite unconnected with R. E. King.—ED. P.C.]

Have a Hobby

"FOR the man who has a hobby old age has no terrors," says a writer in Cassell's Saturday Journal. "Old age to him is a holiday. What is more delightful than to see, as you often may at Bournemouth and elsewhere, a fine old fellow of seventy playing golf and holding his own with men half or less than half his age? Fishing is another sport where the veteran can often give points and a beating to his juniors."

Of Great Interest to Druids

A CASE of great interest to Druids and Bards came before Mr. Justice Eve recently. It was concerned with a dispute between three professors over "early" and "middle" Welsh.

The plaintiff was John Gwenogvryn Evans, Litt.Doc., Oxon; the defendants, Professor Thomas Frederick Tout, of Manchester, and Professor Kuno Meyer, of Liverpool.

Dr. Evans is one of the greatest authorities on early Welsh manuscripts. Among his reproductions are the following:—

"The Red Book of Hergest."
"The Black Book of Carmarthen."
"The Book of Llann Day."
"The White Book Mabinogion."

The late Professor Strachan was also interested in early Welsh, and being on very friendly terms with Dr. Evans obtained that gentleman's permission to use certain material from the red, black and white books for the purposes of the compilation of a work entitled, "An Introduction to Early Welsh."

But before publication, Professor Strachan died, and his work was carried on by Professor Meyer and Professor Tout.

ASKED FOR INJUNCTION

It is alleged—as Mr. Scrutton, K.C., explained in his opening speech—that these professors used much more material than Dr. Evans had bargained for, and Dr. Evans now asked for an injunction restraining the publication of "An Introduction to Early Welsh" on the ground that it infringes his copyright.—Evening News.

A New Serial

MESSRS. J. M. DENT & Co., have just issued Part 1 of a new serial, entitled "Trees and Shrubs of the British Isles Native and Acclimatised," by C. S. Cooper, F.R.H.S., and W. Percival Westell, F.L.S. With two such authors the success of the work is assured. It will be published in 10 parts, at 1s. net, and will contain 16 full page coloured plates and 70 full page black and white plates, drawn direct from Nature by C. F. Newall. It is not necessary to say anything about the printing and general appearance—it is published by Messrs. Dent.

Chief Clubs of the World

WE are glad to see that the 1909 edition of "Clubs" has been revised and enlarged, much new information being given. As there are a matter of 3,202 clubs in the British Isles, British Colonies, and in foreign countries frequented by the English, there is little doubt that a classified list is needed, and this little book, edited by E. C. Austen Leigh, M.A., fulfils its purpose most admirably. It is somewhat interesting to note that over one-third of these clubs are golf-clubs, and that there are no less than 319 ladies' clubs. It is published by Messrs. Spottiswoode & Co., New Street Square, London.

The Princess as Dramatic Critic

"THEATRES have a great attraction for the Princess of Wales, and," says Cassell's Saturday Journal, "she was once referred to by the King as 'our musical and dramatic critic.' When she is in London, and her other engagements permit, she almost invariably attends a theatre in the evening. She is an inveterate 'first-nighter,' and theatrical managers in London, when they have a production of more than ordinary importance, have become accustomed to make inquiries at Marlborough House to see whether Her Royal Highness proposes to occupy the Royal Box or not. It may be added that it is largely upon her report that other members of the Royal Family decide whether to visit a certain play or not; and particularly is this the case with the King and Queen."

"Ye Olde Friends" Dinner

A MOST successful dinner and re-union of "Ye Olde Friends," all connected with the Book Trade, was held at the Clachan Hotel, W., on Friday evening last. Under the popular and genial presidency of Mr. W. J. Barwick (Truslove & Hanson) more than forty gentlemen gathered together to enjoy a good dinner and delightful social evening. To Mr. Barwick and Mr. F. G. House is due the happy idea of gathering round them the representatives of the various wholesale and publishing houses, and an evening such as this must go far to promote the heartiest good fellowship, not only between these gentlemen and the firm of Truslove & Hanson, but also between themselves. "No Speeches" was the order of the evening, but as there is no rule without an exception, the health of the Chairman was proposed in a few brief but well chosen words by Mr. Percy Barringer (John Walker & Co., Ltd.), and responded to with the utmost enthusiasm, and the evening could not be allowed to pass without a very hearty vote of thanks (proposed by the Chairman) to Mr. F. G. House for the very successful efforts he had made for everybody's enjoyment.

The musical programme was remarkably good and greatly enjoyed, and thanks were duly accorded to those gentlemen who had entertained the company.

Amongst those present we noticed—Messrs. Davies (De la Rue's), Eckford (Collins), Sandifer (Warne's), Broadbridge (Savory), Clifford, Mackenzie, Anacker, Crane, Baddeley, Eve, Ross, Shaw, Blocksidge, and many others.

A New Telephone Support

THE following illustrated notice of an interesting novelty for telephone users is from the American Stationer:—

"The A. A. Weeks Co. generally manage to bring out something brand new at frequent intervals. Their latest is an office convenience that attracts attention wherever seen. This is a telephone support that can be adjusted to any height, whether a person is standing or is sitting at his desk. It is never in the way when not in use and can be brought into play instantly at the time of need. The contrivance consists of a long adjustable metal rod in two parts, capable of being lengthened to any height at will, and can be moved to any angle. The lower end fits in a bronze socket fastened to the floor. A spring inside the tube balances the weight of the telephone so that it can be raised or lowered by a mere touch. A wire clip holds the receiver in place when it is off the hook and the 'phone is being held for some one coming from a distance. The support sells for $4.50, and will unquestionably meet with a heavy sale."

The English Catalogue of Books for 1908

THE above volume is now ready, and can be obtained from Messrs. S. Low & Co., Tudor House, Warwick Lane, E.C., who are publishing it for THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, LTD. The size and number of pages are practically the same as last year, also binding and style, but the volume is only $\frac{7}{8}$ of an inch in thickness as compared with $1\frac{1}{4}$ in. in 1907. This is on account of using a thinner and harder paper, which it is hoped will handle better than the light-weight paper.

The issue for 1908 is the seventy-second, and to increase its usefulness as a work of reference, the practice has been adopted this year of giving in full the forenames of authors, instead of simply the initials as previously.

Interesting details are given as to the number of books published in 13 classes and a comparison is made with the previous year. The Publications of Learned Societies are recorded in an Appendix, and the names and addresses of over 1,000 Publishers, including a few of the more important American and Canadian are included.

It should be remembered that books will be found in one alphabet, both under author and subject.

Another "Novel Competition"

WE imagined people were getting tired of these old competitions, but here is an account of one just to hand with Mr. T. P. O'Connor's compliments.

"A novel competition has been arranged by T. P.'s Weekly in connection with Mr. Horace E. Vachell's latest story, 'The Waters of Jordan.' Mr. Vachell's new book, it appears, contains a certain number of errors. A portion of the book, we understand, slipped through the press without Mr. Vachell's customary revision of the proofs. The detection of these errors forms the material of this interesting and instructive competition. T. P.'s Weekly offers a first prize of £40, a second prize of £10, and ten other prizes of £1 each to the competitors who perform this task best."

It is difficult at first sight to see what T. P.'s Weekly is going to make out of this, but no doubt there's a crocodile somewhere in the Jordan.

Important Sale of Dutch Engraved Portraits

MESSRS. R. W. P. DE VRIES, of Amsterdam, asks us to mention that the sale of the second part of the great collection of Mr. Nijland will take place on February 23rd, 24th, 25th and 26th, at their Amsterdam Sale Room. There are over 2,700 items in this most important collection of engraved portraits in all styles, and by the best masters, or prominent people of, or connected with, the Netherlands. The illustrated descriptive catalogue of over 250 pages is itself of value as a document in the history of engraving.

"Those Infamous Books" in Society

THE lady who writes the sprightly letters to "Dearest Amy" in Truth every week has a significant reference this week to the shameless woman writer. She says:—

DEAREST AMY,—We were talking of bad manners at a dinner party last week, apropos of a young man who had been invited and had neither replied nor put in an appearance. "Men are so very casual nowadays," said our hostess. "When I gave my dance last year, I had prompt replies from all my invited guests except fifteen young men. Of these, ten turned up at the dance, five of them having posted their answers the night before."

"The other five did not answer at all, then?" asked some one.

"Nor made any excuse. And the five who neither replied nor came to the dance took no notice whatever of the occurrence when I met them at other houses. What do you think of their behaviour?"

Young men, it seems, are the great sinners. But the worst piece of bad manners I know of was perpetrated by a man no longer young. He had been invited to dine at a restaurant, his hostess having asked a party of six. During dinner he said to her, "I want you to allow me to introduce to you a very interesting, clever girl who is staying in this hotel, Miss —— ——. You must know her books. She writes under the nom-de-plume of —— ——."

"Those infamous books?" replied his hostess. "I should be very sorry to know her, and I am surprised that you should ask me to see her."

"You would be charmed with her," he replied. "She is as different as possible from her books, simple, girlish, and gentle. Do let me introduce her!"

"Not on any account!" was the reply. "I do not wish to know her, and I should extremely dislike my friends here to make her acquaintance through me."

"Then you forbid me to introduce her?"

"Absolutely!"

When the party left the restaurant for the foyer this man disappeared, took another man of the small party with him, and both stayed away half an hour, in itself a gross piece of rudeness. But, would you believe it? When he rejoined the party he brought the girl with him, and actually introduced her to his hostess! She could not snub the young woman, so drew apart from her guests, talked to her for a few moments, then said: "I understand you are staying in this hotel. I will not detain you further," in this way quietly dismissing her. Her introducer went with her. When he returned his hostess asked, "Why did you do what I told you I so strongly objected to?" He replied, "I felt sure you would take to the girl when you saw her."

As if any decent woman could "take to" a girl who disgraces her sex by writing disgusting books!

I think very few things justify the cut direct, usually a very abominable piece of bad manners. But I am sure you agree with me that this man deserved it richly. He got it.

If all English hostesses were plucky enough to do as "Madge's" friend did it would be a good thing for the country.

Plurimum in Minimo

To their excellent "Miniature Reference Library" (2 6-8ths by 4 inches) Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., have just added "A Dictionary of Philosophical Terms," by Arthur Butler, and a "German-French and French-German" Dictionary—the latter runs to over 600 pages, and is probably the first dictionary of two modern languages; neither being English, ever published in England. The little book on philosophical terms will be found very useful as giving more elaborate descriptions of the meaning of such terms than are to be found in ordinary dictionaries. The little books are very neatly bound in padded armchair imitation morocco, and are aptly described by the publishers as plurimum in minimo.

A New Guide to Heraldry

MESSRS. JACK announce the issue of a new complete Guide to Heraldry in 1 vol. Hitherto comprehensive books on heraldry have been expensive, and those that are not costly are scrappy. The publishers will condense into this work, which is by A. C. Fox-Davies, editor of "Armorial Families," &c., the entire range of the law and practice of heraldry. Each part of the science and each charge will be dealt with and fully explained, and the work will be illustrated with some 800 designs (including plates in colour) executed by Mr. Graham Johnston, Herald Painter of the Lyon Court, Edinburgh.

Was "Tusser" a T. Totaller?

TUSSER, who died in 1580, wrote a curious poem of twelve lines in rhyme, every word of which begins with T:

The thrifty that teacheth the thriving to thrive,
Teach timely to traverse, the thing that thou 'trive,
Transferring thy toiling, to timeliness taught,
This teacheth the temperance, to temper thy thought,
Take Trusty (to trust to) that thinkest to thee,
That Trustily thriftiness trowleth to thee,
Then temper thy travell to tarry the tide,
This teacheth the thriftiness, twenty times tryed.
Take thankfull thy talent, thank thankfully those
That thriftily (? teach thee) thy time to transpose
Troth twice teached, teach twenty times ten,
This trade thou that takest, take thrift to thee then.

T. B. MOSHER:

THE AMERICAN PIRATE.

(From an American Correspondent)

Dear Sir,—I was not a little surprised to see your flaring attack on this enterprising and artistic book-maker of Portland, Maine. As a maker of books, in however humble a way, I should like to see Perpetual, Universal International Copyright with certain regulations and provisions into which it is not necessary to enter here. But since this does not exist, and since Copyright privileges—with maimed rites, indeed—have only existed between England and America since 1891, I cannot for the life of me see wherein lies the justification for your article. Mr. T. B. Mosher is shrewd enough to know that if any of his reprints were copyrighted in the United States he could not issue them without compensation to the owners of the copyright, or prosecution.

I hold no brief for Mr. T. B. Mosher, but in common with all men who think (or try to think) I do hold a brief for commonsense; and because my commonsense tells me that it does not lie in the mouth of any paper that is supposed to represent the English publishing trade to bring such a railing accusation against a man in America, who is only doing what dozens of publishers in England have done, I raise my voice in protest—not in justification of the conditions, which I deplore, but against the practice of the "pot calling the kettle black."

For Mr. T. B. Mosher is doing nothing more illegal than has been done and is every day being done by English publishers, who have reprinted (? pirated) Longfellow, Emerson, Hawthorne, Bigelow, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Mark Twain, Bret Harte, and hosts of others in whose work no copyright runs in England.

And he is doing nothing more illegal than do those English and American publishers who, to your and my certain knowledge, keep records of the day, hour and minute when the copyrights of popular books expire, and well before that time have their new editions, royalty (and author) unburdened, ready to launch on the market at the exact moment when the law allows them to do so.

If there is no copyright in the United States in certain writings of Andrew Lang, or in George Meredith's "Modern Love," in certain of Maurice Hewlett's writings, or in those of Swinburne, Pater, and others, why is it more piratical to reprint them than it is for English publishers to reprint the works of Shakespeare, Milton, Gray, Goldsmith, Dickens, and others, the copyrights of whose works have expired and become the world's property by the operation of a (?) wise and beneficent legislation?

It seems to me, looking at it in the most unprejudiced way, that in commonsense, fairness and justice, Mr. T. B. Mosher is not "taking what isn't his'n," but he is taking what belongs to the wide world outside of British territory and is acting in principle in exactly the same way as his English confrères have done—and are daily doing—in connection with American, Continental and English unprotected and lapsed copyrights.

Yours very truly,

Charles Welsh.

Winthrop, Massachusetts.

[Two blacks do not make a white. If Mr. Mosher had confined his editions of British copyright works to his own country, we should not have bothered about him. Mr. Welsh, who was formerly an English publisher, ignores the fact that our article was published to warn people against selling or buying pirated editions in the British Empire. Mr. Mosher sends his editions to any address in the world's Postal Union. He advertises that he does so in our English literary weekly papers. The fact that our authors resent and complain of the injury done to them by Mosher's editions is evident from the letters we published.—Ed. P.C.]

Trade Notes and Changes

A WARNING

We have previously on two occasions had to warn booksellers to be careful in their dealings with a Mr. T. Turner, 42, Paddock Street, Ardwick, Manchester. Now Mr. George T. Juckes, of 35, St. Martin's Court, St. Martin's Lane, London, writes:—

> Dear Sir,—It might be worth your while putting a notice in your next issue warning the trade against Mr. T. Turner, 42, Paddock Street, Ardwick, Manchester, who calls himself a bookseller. He reports books very cheaply for cash with order, and then does not send the books. In June last year he obtained £10 from one man and £8 from another dealer.
> He has just offered me a set of books for £3 cash; so it is evident that he is still continuing the business.—Yours faithfully,
> George T. Juckes.

Mr. P. Head, of 44, Clarence Gardens, Regent's Park, also writes about the same man as follows:—

> Dear Sir,—I have just been informed by a London bookseller that T. Turner, of 42, Paddock Street, Ardwick, Manchester—the address used last June by which I was defrauded out of £10—is still at same address, and trying to obtain money from booksellers. T. Turner seems to escape, for what reason I am unable to say. I have done what I can by applying to Mr. Plowden, the Home Office and the Public Prosecutor, but I have been rebuffed for my trouble.—Yours, &c.,
> P. Head.

Mr. W. Pudney (Seeley & Co., Ltd.) begs to notify his customers that he has removed from 37, Friern Road, East Dulwich, and his new address is 7, Broadwater Terrace, Cannon Hill Lane, Merton Park, Surrey.

Thomas Fargie, Church Bookseller, Manchester, has removed to new premises at 10, John Dalton Street, Manchester (Deansgate end).

THE LATE MR. JOSIAH LEWIS

Mr. Josiah Lewis, who died on Saturday last at the age of seventy-eight, was one of the oldest and best-known members of the Wholesale Newspaper Trade. He had been with Messrs. William Dawson & Sons, Ltd., for over fifty years, and during a long period acted as their manager. For several years he served on the committee of the Newsvendors' Benevolent Institution, and was much respected by all who came in contact with him. His connection with the trade ceased a few years back owing to failing health.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Blackie & Sons, Ltd.—"Tamango," by Prosper Mérimée. This little volume is one of the popular Blackie's French Classics, a series which can be recommended for all schools without exception, and there is little doubt that it is already very largely used. Complete notes and very adequate vocabularies are provided.

From Mr. B. H. Blackwell, Oxford (London: Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.)—"Leaves in the Wind," by Elsa Lorraine. It is not often that an unknown author, coming before us with an unheralded volume of what she designates as "alien flowers," claims a kindlier recognition than is due to Elsa Lorraine for the present book. The poems are various in kind and in manner, but all, or nearly all, singularly melodious and refined, and are throughout associated with an earnest human utterance. On the whole, it is a luminous volume of academic verse which should appeal to many.

From Messrs. A. Brown & Sons, Ltd., of Hull and London.—Messrs. Brown & Sons have published two excellent series of coloured plates for school use. No. 1 series consists of 12 illustrations in 15 colours, mounted on stout boards 19 by 24, eyeletted and strung ready for hanging upon blackboard or easel. The illustrations show prominent features connected with the life history of the bee; the butterfly; corn; and various flowers, fruits, and vegetables; the illustrations in colour are done on a tinted background without white margin and are extremely effective. The No. 2 series consists of 20 cards with chalk drawings on each. These are by Anita and Henrietta Waite, and are not intended to be used as flat copies, but as aids to drawing from actual objects. Clear directions are given for making the best use of these well designed and well executed aids to teaching. We sent both sets to a school mistress who has had many years' experience, who says:—

> "They are by far the best in that style of thing that I have seen; the subjects are bold and clear, the drawing and colouring on the whole very good, though a little more attention to detail in some cases might have improved them. They will be very useful for school work."

From The Cambridge University Press.—"The Cambridge Modern History." Planned by the late Lord Acton, LL.D. Edited by A. W. Ward, Litt.D., G. W. Prothero, Litt.D., and Stanley Leathes, M.A. Vol. XI., "The Growth of Nationalities." In noticing earlier volumes of this colossal work, with its vast stores of information scientifically ordered, we have drawn attention to its remarkable cohesion and clearness of arrangement. There are twenty-eight chapters in all, each of which has been written by an expert in the

LORD ROSEBERY
MR. BENJAMIN KIDD

Lord Rosebery, in a letter to the Editor of "Public Opinion," dated November 28, 1908, from Dalmeny House, Edinburgh, says:—"I can truly say that 'Public Opinion' is a weekly joy to me. It gives me just what I want to read."

Mr. Benjamin Kidd, Author of "Social Evolution" and "Principles of Western Civilization," writing from The Warders, Tonbridge, November, 1908, says:—"I take 'Public Opinion' every week, and find it one of the principal means of continuing my education that the world provides."

Public Opinion

A Weekly Review of Current Thought & Activity

EVERY FRIDAY. TWOPENCE.

Edited by Percy L. Parker.

The purpose of "Public Opinion" is to provide information by means of a weekly review of current thought and activity as they are expressed in the world's newspapers, magazines, and books, and to put on record the ideas and activities which make for religious, political, and social progress.

"Public Opinion" can be obtained from any newsagent or bookstall, or will be sent post free for one year to any address in the United Kingdom for 10s. 10d.; and to any place abroad for 13s. per annum. Orders should be addressed to "Public Opinion," 31 & 32, Temple House, Tallis St., London, E.C.

particular branch of historical learning dealt with, and though many minds and many literary styles have contributed to the present volume of more than a thousand pages, yet the wise and watchful care of the Editors has prevented the intrusion of any rough edges, or any violence of contrast between one writer and another. The book clearly bears the impress of a great and controlling mind. The period it covers is from 1845 to 1871, an epoch of violent international and civic disturbance. Professor Emile Bourgeois has contributed chapters on "The Fall of Constitutionalism in France" and "The French Republic"; Dr. A. W. Ward on "The Revolution and the Reaction in Germany and Austria"; the late Sir Spencer Walpole, K.C.B., on "Great Britain and the Crimean War"; Professor Walker, M.A., on "English Literature: 1840–70"; Dr. G. Roloff on "Bismarck and German Unity"; and Mr. J. Fitzmaurice-Kelly on "The Course of Revolution in Spain and Portugal." Other aspects of European history in the period embraced are in equally scholarly hands.

From Messrs. T. & T. Clark, Edinburgh.—"Dictionary of the Bible," edited by James Hastings, D.D., with the co-operation of John A. Selbie, D.D., and the assistance of John C. Lambert, D.D., and Shailer Mathews, D.D. It often happens that the publisher of a large and expensive work brings out an abridged edition at a lower price for popular use. Messrs. Clark have not followed this time-honoured but unsatisfactory practice. This volume is in every sense a new work, not a rehash or condensation of the five-volume Dictionary previously issued by them. On the new work, as on the old, publishers and editors are to be heartily congratulated. It is a book of sterling merit and striking editorial skill. The whole contents of the Bible are described, the articles, as we are informed in the preface, "being as numerous as in the largest dictionaries, but written to a different scale." The theology, ethics, antiquities, language, persons, places and events of the Bible are all treated, some of them at considerable length. Thus, the masterly article on "Jesus Christ," by Professor Paterson, of Edinburgh University, runs to 23 pages; while Professor Mackintosh's article on "The Person of Christ," runs to half as many. The article by Professor Barton, of Bryn Maw College, on "Israel," also extends to two dozen pages, and conveys a vast amount of historical information. Dr. MacLean, Bishop of Moray and Ross, is a voluminous contributor, the articles on Paul, on the Gospels, on Matthew and Mark being from his pen. Very appropriately Dr. Kenyon, of the British Museum, deals with the Greek Versions and the Text of the New Testament, as well as with the English Versions of the Bible. Dr. Kenyon's articles are marked by the rare scholarship which distinguishes the editor of Bacchylides. In a thoroughly competent article of some ten pages Dr. Gray, Professor of Hebrew in Mansfield College, Oxford, deals with the Text Versions and language of the Old Testament. In three separate sections Professor W. T. Davison deals with the Gospel, the Epistles and the Theology of John. More interesting, because more suggestive, is the same writer's excellent article on "Prophecy and Prophets." This indeed is one of the best contributions to the work. Among other noted contributors are: Professor Margoliouth, of Oxford; Professor Deissmann, of Berlin; Professor Gwatkin, of Cambridge; and Dr. Kennedy, Professor of Hebrew in Edinburgh University. These are but a few names picked at random from a long list of distinguished contributors, but they sufficiently indicate the standard of scholarship aimed at and—let us add—reached, in this entirely admirable work.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd.—"Porcelain: Oriental, Continental and British," by R. L. Hobson, B.A. This useful and practical volume has now reached a second edition. It gives in compact and inexpensive form all the facts which the collector really needs, with a number of practical hints. Special attention is devoted to paste, glaze and decoration as the safest guides to the acquisition of genuine specimens, marks being regarded as of secondary importance. Fairly complete lists, however, of the Continental and English marks are included, as well as characteristic examples of the Chinese and Japanese. A large number of finely reproduced plates adorn the volume and give it additional value.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—"Mansfield Park," by Jane Austen. With 24 coloured illustrations by C. E. Brock. One of the "English Idylls" series, which Messrs. Dent are issuing, dainty in get up, pleasant to handle, and charmingly illustrated.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—"The Heart of a Gipsy," by Rosamond Napier. Having penetrated into most parts of these Islands and taken stock of the natives, we can safely say we know none we have liked better than those of Devon and Somerset in the Exmoor district. It is a land of fascination for all who once come under its charm. This story is partly of people living on that delicious trout stream, the Barle; it is well written and interesting, so much so that we shall look out for the next story by the same writer. The main interest of the work centres round the attraction which a lovely gipsy girl, who has been brought up in an indolent parson's household on Exmoor, has for a London doctor who goes there for a holiday and rest. The character drawing is done with quiet power, and the magnetic influence of forest, moor and stream radiates from the pages. One regrets that Farmer Bult and his daughter should be made so repellent; it seems unfair that recent writers appear to think of the West Country as Bishop Heber did of Ceylon. The writer must have been unfortunate in her experience of West Country farmers.

From Messrs. A. Fairbairns & Co.—"The Medici at Florence," by Selwyn Brinton. This is Part III. of "The Renaissance in Italian Art" Series, which in nine parts gives a complete account of the Italian Renaissance, and to the lover of Florence and the traveller who for the first time finds himself amid her wealth of art treasures the book will be an unmixed delight. It is detailed, clearly written, not too voluminous, light enough for the pocket, well illustrated, and it contains a separate analysis of artists and their works both in painting and sculpture. Mr. Selwyn Brinton is never dull, and he never tells us too much or too little.

From Mr. Upcott Gill.—"Poultry for Prizes and Profit."—Although called a new and revised edition, this is practically a new work based on the original and very successful work of Professor James Long, edited by Mr. W. M. Elkington. There are many books on Fancy Poultry, but Mr. Elkington, who is consulting expert to The Bazaar, claims for this that no person who reads it and acts on it need fall into the errors so common to beginners in breeding for show points, and the general management of exhibition stock. The illustrations are numerous, practical and good, a special feature being the great number of reproductions of feathers from some of the best typical birds that have ever been bred, supplied by a great number of exhibitors.

From Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd.—"Sweet Isabel of Narragoon," by Lionel Laggard, is a novel of Australian backwoods, life in the early days of the Colony. The main interest is in the old theme that "the course of true love never did run smooth," complicated by an accident which for a time robs the hero of his memory. The "local colour," however, is genuine Australian, and includes a cattle muster, a bush fire, a Melbourne race meeting, and the inevitable fight with bushrangers. The interest is well maintained, and the story can be enjoyed by readers of every sort.

From Messrs. J. Hewetson & Son, Hampstead.—"The Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám," rendered into English by Edward Fitzgerald. That choice series of books "The Queen's Quartos," issued under the auspices of this old-established firm, has now reached its second number with a reprint of the popular Persian poet's verses, as above named. The worth of the book (which is issued in artistic boards, and gilt embossed wine-coloured lambskin) is further enhanced by the inclusion of some strikingly original illustrations contributed by Marie Preaud Webb.

From Mr. Alfred Holmes.—"Sword Exercise for Holy Warfare," by C. Edwards, of the Soldiers' Home, Winchester. The contents of this book, like its title, recall literary methods of the Seventeenth Century. The writer has the Bible at his fingers' ends, and uses it with earnestness, if not always with discrimination. His suggestive headings may prove fruitful for evangelical sermons or personal meditation.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—"Beautiful Flowers." Part 8. "Wild Beasts of the World," Part 9. "National Gallery," Part 7.

From Messrs. King & Co.—"Children's Care Committees," by Miss Margaret Fell. The purpose of this useful little handbook is to help local managers of Elementary Schools in carrying out the social and charitable as distinct from the official work which awaits them in these schools. As a member of the Education Committee of the London County Council, Miss Fell has much knowledge and experience of this matter, and her book will be of great help to workers among children. There are appendices giving typical menus for children's meals, lists of societies, &c., for befriending children, and a useful summary of books giving further information on the subject.——"The Lament of the Sweated," by Mr. James Samuelson. A short work on the present position of the movement for reducing the terrible evils of underpaid home work, especially that of women in such trades as tailoring and box-making. Special reference is made to the recent report of the Select Committee on Home Work, and legislative remedies are discussed by Mr. Samuelson out of a knowledge based on the experience of a lifetime devoted to labour among the poor.

From Messrs. Ben Johnson & Co., York.—"The Chambers of Commerce Year Book" edited by Charles Eyre Pascoe. The greater portion of this useful volume comprises a directory of places in the United Kingdom where Chambers of Commerce are instituted, and a record of their aims and work. Several special articles by well-known economic experts, and a good deal of information of a miscellaneous nature, have been added. The matter has been wisely edited and logically arranged, and the book should be found of the greatest utility to the commercial man.

From Mr. John Lane.—"Under Petraia: with Some Saunterings." The Royal villa of La Petraia is situated on the hills a few miles outside Florence. Near it, and on the confines of its park lives the author of this charming book. She is, if one may hazard a series of guesses, a lady past middle-age, of independent character, excellent judgment, wide reading, and possessed of a keen sense of humour. These qualities go far in the writing of a book, and her character sketches, descriptions of scenery, garden gossip, and pointed anecdotes possess a distinctive flavour impossible to describe.

From the Same.—"Balthasar," by Anatole France. A translation by Mrs. John Lane. Another of that excellent series of translations from the works of this great French writer which Mr. Lane is issuing. The present volume takes its title from the first of the seven short stories its contains.

From the Same.—"Little Dinners with the Sphinx," by Richard Le Gallienne. Mr. Le Gallienne has not yet grown up; he is still wholly occupied with the surface of life, with its non-essentials, its rather tiresome prettinesses. The pieces in this volume are called "Prose Fancies," and they are written in a delicate, flowery and affected English that has the effect on the reader of a surfeit of honey and whipped cream. The writing is very skilful, we admit, and there is much that is beautiful in "The Dream Documents," "My Castle in Spain," and "Eva, the Woodland and I"; but dainty trifling, though well enough for a chapter, is not the kind of material with which to fill an entire book.

From Mr. Werner Laurie.—"The Adventures of Louis Blake," by Louis Becke. Mr. Becke has gained a high reputation by his previous stories about the Pacific Ocean. No man since Stevenson has described so truthfully the charms and risks of life among its islands. His present book will heighten that reputation. It is steeped in the spirit of the tropical islands with their winning yet wayward inhabitants, their lawless white adventurers, the dangers of wreck or piracy and the chances of sudden wealth or sudden death. Louis Blake encounters all these things, and describes them with an unadorned vividness which makes them appear—what, perhaps, they really are—a record of actual experience. As a story of adventure, pure and simple, the book can be cordially recommended.

From Mr. John Long.—"The Thunder of the Hoofs," by Wm. Henry Lang. Graphic and vigorous descriptions of cricket, shooting and racing occupy the first half of this open-air chronicle of the deeds and misdeeds of Tom Eliot. Edinburgh and its neighbourhood is well realised and presented to the reader, but when Tom gets into the inevitable scrape the scene is moved to Australia. It is a fine, simple yarn, full of stirring events, and the author's style is strong and expressive.

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co. Ltd.—"Tales from Exeter Cathedral Told to Children," by Mrs. Frewen Lord. This charming little book is a companion volume to Mrs. Lord's very popular "Tales from Westminster Abbey," which has gone through several editions. In many respects Exeter Cathedral is one of the finest and most important in the country, both as a building and as a resting place of people who have played important parts in our History for more than eight hundred years. A good plan enables the reader to see the most important memorials one after another, and Mrs. Lord gives wonderfully well managed accounts of them, considering the necessarily limited space demanded by a tale told to children. There is a fine photograph of the west front of the Cathedral.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co.—"Shakespeare," by Walter Raleigh. This is a remarkable contribution to Shakespearean bibliography and will take rank as a standard book upon the subject. It is full of learning, and shows a great mind at work upon a subject of which it is completely master. It will be sufficient to give the headings of the chapters to show its scope:—Shakespeare, Stratford and London, Books and Poetry, The Theatre, Story and Character, The Last Phase.

From Messrs. Marshall Bros.—"Tom, Dick and Harry," by Frances M. Boyce, is a tale of Mission work in the Sudan, and is, the author assures us, founded upon fact. It follows the fortunes of three young men who devoted their lives to the enfranchisement and conversion of the slaves in Northern Nigeria. The writer has full knowledge of and enthusiasm for her subject, and does not fail to arouse a corresponding interest in the mind of her readers.——"Studies on the Book of Revelation," by A. G. Morgan. An homiletical commentary on the visions of the Apocalypse, on lines which were common a generation ago, but are now perhaps thought by many Christians to be somewhat out of date.

From Messrs. Maunsel & Co., Dublin—"The Living Chalice, and other Poems," by Susan L. Mitchell. Many of the poems appearing in the pages of this brochure (forming No. 6 of the "Tower Press Booklets") breathe the true spirit of faith and resignation, and merit more than a passing notice.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THE TRADE

CANADA

The Land of Opportunity

Thousands of sturdy British emigrants go to the Dominion annually and settle there. To-day there is a large population in Canada interested in British books and periodicals and affording a splendid market for British publishers.

The only feasible way to preserve the interest of these people, in face of the competition of American publishers, is to have Canadian booksellers and newsagents show British books and periodicals on their counters and in their windows constantly and press the sale of them.

The best method of urging Canadian booksellers and newsagents to stock and sell British publications is to make use of the trade organ to which they subscribe regularly.

Information as to the Canadian Market will be gladly supplied by

THE LONDON MANAGER.

THE Bookseller & Stationer of Canada

(Official Organ of the Booksellers and Stationers Association)

British Office: 88, Fleet St., E.C., London.

From Mr. Guilbert Pitman.—"Ido: Practical Grammar and Exercises," by P. D. Hugon. By suppressing unnecessary grammatical complications, Ido has been brought considerably nearer to English than was Primitive Esperanto. The first ten lessons of this course cover exclusively the grammar of Ido; the last ten cover mainly English grammar, in so far as it has to be made applicable to International Composition.

From Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons.—"France of the French," by Mr. Edward Harrison Barker. The friendship and sympathy now felt by Englishmen for France makes this a timely book; and its correctness is vouched for by the fact that Mr. Barker has for thirty years been in close intimacy with the French of Paris and the provinces, and has written several previous works describing his experiences of their country. There are chapters on family life, on contemporary politics, art, literature, the press, the drama, and other leading elements of the national life. The book has many illustrations and an index, and altogether must be read with attention by all Britons who desire to understand their gifted and interesting neighbours.

From the Same. "Reminiscences of My Life," by Charles Santley. Sir Charles Santley has had a long, a successful and a happy life. His wonderful talent, almost approaching genius, has brought him into contact with many of the great personages of the last fifty years, and as he is always frank and entirely individual in his opinions and comments, his book is particularly readable. He met D. G. Rossetti and disliked him, and tells you so pretty plainly. The unamiable weaknesses of Mrs. Siddons's temper are most humorously described, and we have rarely read a better character sketch than that of Mrs. Fanny Kemble. The author's literary style is full of the flavour of a strong and original personality, and his deftness of touch in anecdote and description is most unusual in an unpractised writer. Bluff, hearty, cute, intolerant of all pretence, the book is a complete expression of the Charles Santley the people have learned to respect and love. Various visits to the Continent and a prolonged tour in Australia fill many of the pages. The illustrations are choice and intrinsically interesting, and there is a reliable index.

From Messrs. Alston Rivers, Ltd.—"The Square Mile," by Horace W. C. Newte. In spite of one's sympathy for Anthony Foskett Pilkington, one finds him an almost incredible, and certainly a most exasperating, figure. He has all the negative virtues, suffering and almost inviting constant insult. Mr. Newte describes the genteel poor of one of London's suburbs with much detail and an astonishing closeness to actuality. Occasionally, he reminds us of George Gissing, though his touch is lighter and his range of character more wide. The novel has many passages of humour, which relieve this chronicle of small events from any suggestion of dulness.

From the Same.—"Sparrows," by Horace Newte. This is an unusually long novel, and yet we do not think many who begin it are likely to wish it were shorter. Twenty years ago it would have made a sensation as an unconventional story much too outspoken in places; now one can only be thankful that it is much more restrained than many books dealing with similar matters. Mavis, the heroine, is admirably drawn, but it seems unlikely that a girl of her in many ways fine character would marry a poor invalid cripple merely because she hated his family and to spite them. The picture of the unsophisticated, wholesome country girl among the horrors of the dark side of London life throws a very vivid light on that life; but it is to be hoped that not many of our large employers of female labour are such beasts as are described in "Sparrows." It is a clever story full of interest.

From Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd.—"Celestina; or, the Tragi-Comedy of Calisto and Melebea." Translated from the Spanish by James Mabbe, anno 1631. "An Interlude of Calisto and Melebea." Printed by John Rastell, circa 1530. Both edited, with Introduction on the Picaresque Novel and Appendices, by H. Warner Allen. This volume is the first to be issued in the Library of Early Novelists. The introductory essay is a fine piece of work, covering nearly 100 pages, and the appendices are of the greatest value.

From the Same.—"The Pocket Emerson" (Wayfaring Books). There are doubtless objections to the serving up of tit-bits of a great writer; but Emerson, perhaps, suffers less from this treatment than more purely literary stylists. And, anyhow, this prettily got-up little book will serve a double purpose in recalling Emerson to those who have read him and attracting to him those who have not.

From The Samurai Press (Cranleigh, Essex).—"Lyrics by a Briton in Gallia," by Norman Hill. Like all the books sent out from the Samurai Press, this slim little volume has a note of individual distinction and it contains some beautiful lines of poetry. But that it should emanate from the pen of a Briton is almost incredible, for it is defaced by words which are from a patriotic standpoint treasonable, and from a chivalric standpoint grossly insulting to a woman—a woman deeply revered and whose memory should need no defence. To speak of Queen Victoria and the Army which fought in the Boer War as is passing the bounds of decency. Nor is this the only poem which is offensive upon the subject of this war.

From The Sanitary Publishing Co., Ltd.—"The Food Inspector's Handbook," by Francis Vacher. This practical guide for medical officers of health, meat inspectors, army officers, students and others, has now reached its fifth edition. It has been thoroughly revised and greatly enlarged, the section on meat having been practically re-written. Many new illustrations from original specimens have been added, and the book is now complete, reliable, and up-to-date.

From Mr. Robert Scott. — "Redeeming Vision," by the Rev. J. Stuart Holden. Twenty-six sermons preached to his congregation by the vicar of St. Paul's, Portman Square, and subsequently published in the Sunday Strand, are here gathered into a well-printed volume, which is worthy of Mr. Holden's reputation as an eloquent and forcible preacher. Their sincerity and directness with their clear and cultivated style make these short sermons as good to read as to hear.

From the Same.—"The Power of Peace," by the Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D.D. These short essays, or rather meditations, upon the value and source of inward peace, by the learned Principal of Wycliffe Hall, Oxford, are welcome aids towards the deepening of the spiritual life.

From the Same.—"The Church of Christ," a number of addresses by prominent members of the Evangelical Alliance, now published in a collected form with an Introduction by the Dean of Canterbury. Their aim is to recall the Church from questions of external organisation and from problems of social amelioration back to its primitive and apostolic function of saving souls. Among the contributors are such leading evangelical pastors as Prebendary Webb-Peploe, Rev. A. E. Barnes-Lawrence, and Dr. James Orr, and all of them each with his own special gifts insist upon the great principle that "where Christ is, there is the Church."

From Messrs. Tyrrel & Co., Toronto.—"No Refuge but in Truth," by Mr. Goldwin Smith. This reprint of letters published in the New York Sun makes no profession of being a connected or exhaustive treatise; but it is a useful summary expressed with clearness and style of the attitude now adopted towards orthodox Christianity by a large number of thoughtful persons in England as well as in America. From the nature of the case no very definite conclusions are reached.

From The University Tutorial Press, Ltd.—"Junior Chemistry," by R. H. Adie, M.A., B.Sc. In view of the already numerous elementary books on this subject, the author claims as an excuse the unsatisfactory answers given by the average first year's student on any point requiring an intelligent understanding of chemical aims and methods, and to remedy this as far as possible has endeavoured in his book to arrange a complete sequence of chemical ideas necessitating a slight variation of the usual order of treating the subject. The result is certainly one of the best text-books of the kind on the market, produced in the good style customary with the U.T.P. There are some useful illustrations, and a good point is that all the apparatus can either be very easily made or cheaply procured.

From the Same.—"The Elements of Organic Chemistry," by E. J. Lewis, B.A., B.Sc., is an extended form of the course which has been followed in class for some years. It includes all that is commonly expected from scholarship candidates at Oxford and Cambridge.

From Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd.—"A Crime on Canvas," by F. M. White. A powerful drama of obscure crime, the plot of which is not fully unfolded until the concluding chapters. The story was published serially, and the fact that prizes were given to readers guessing solution of the many mysteries divulged in its development, is some proof of their impenetrable character; even the least susceptible reader will find himself forming vague theories in the endeavour to unravel the plot, although, after all, as a plot it does not amount to much.

From Messrs. Witherby & Co.—"British Mosses," by Sir Edward Fry, G.C.B. This second edition of a useful work has been thoroughly revised, and the illustrations, with one exception, have been re-drawn.

[By some inexplicable mistake, withdrawn was printed last week instead of re-drawn. We can only suppose that the stenographer, in taking down the notice from our Reviewer's dictation, mistook re-drawn for withdrawn. We regret the error.]

New Editions.—"Our Forests and Woodlands," by John Nisbet, included in Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.'s handsome Haddon Hall Library, is now in its second and revised edition. A popular edition of May Wynne's stirring romance of the fifteenth century, "A Maid of Brittany," has just been issued by Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd. We have received from Mr. Alfred Holness a copy of the second edition of "Christ in all the Scriptures," by A. M. Hodgkin. The cheap issue of "Foxe's Book of Martyrs," just placed on the market by The Religious Tract Society, has been prepared "for the people," by W. Grinton Berry, M.A. The price is a popular one, and the volume contains coloured illustrations. Mr. T. Fisher Unwin has added "The Portent, and other Stories," by George Macdonald, to his admirable Adelphi Library.
